141f. — De facto government.—In 1937 a Spanish ship registered at Bilbao was requisitioned by the Govt. of the Republic of Spain. She was not then in Spanish territorial waters. On her arrival in the Thames her owners issued a writ in rem for possession; she was arrested by the Admiralty Marshal, & at all material times she remained under arrest. On Apr. 5, 1938, she was requisitioned by the Nationalist Govt., & the master & managing director of the owners agreed to hold her at the disposal of the Nationalist Govt. Thereupon the Republican Govt. issued a writ purporting to make the vessel a deft., & ordering her to enter an appearance, & served a warrant of arrest on her. The Nationalist Govt. entered an appearance under protest & moved to set aside the writ & arrest on the ground that the action impleaded a foreign sovereign State—namely, the Nationalist Govt. of Spain. On the question as to the status of that Govt. BUCKNILL, J. directed a letter to be written to the Foreign Office asking whether the Nationalist Govt. was recognised by His Majesty's Govt. as a foreign sovereign State, & in answer thereto the Foreign Secretary replied that "His Majesty's Govt. recognises the Nationalist Govt. as a Govt. which at present exercises de facto administrative control over the larger portion of Spain. His Majesty's Govt. recognises that the Nationalist Govt. now exercises effective administrative control over all the Basque Provinces of Spain. . . . The Nationalist Govt. is not a Govt. subordinate to any other Govt. in Spain":—Held: (1) the writ in purporting to make the vessel a deft., & ordering her to enter an appearance was wholly irregular; (2) the answers of the Foreign Office as to the status of the Nationalist Govt. were conclusive that that Govt. was a foreign sovereign State for the purposes of international law; (3) the vessel was in the possession of the Nationalist Govt. at the material date by the master & crew acting with the consent of the owners; (4) resps. were impleaded by the action, & as they were the Govt. of a sovereign State, the writ & warrant of arrest must be set aside; (5) a ship arrested does not by the mere fact of arrest pass from the possession of its then possessors to a new possession of the Marshal. His right is not possession but custody. Any interference with his custody will be properly punished as a contempt of the ct. which ordered the arrest, but, subject to his complete control of the custody, all the possessory rights which previously existed continue to exist, including all the remedies based on possession.—THE ARANTZAZU MENDI, [1939] A. On a motion to set aside a writ in rem claiming possession of a vessel in the possession of the Estonian Govt. the ct. invited the assistance of the Foreign Office as to the status of the Estonian National Council. The A.-G. on behalf of the Foreign Office stated that His Majesty's Govt. had, for the time being, & with all necessary reservations as to the future, recognised the Estonian National Council as a de facto independent body & had received an informal diplomatic representative of the Provisional Govt.—Held: to permit the arrest of the vessel would be contrary to principles of international comity, as it would compel the Estonian Govt., whose sovereignty was entitled to be respected, to submit to the jurisdiction of the British cts.; & the writ & all subsequent proceedings must be set aside.—THE GAGARA, [1919] P. 95; 88 L. Pltfs., a foreign co., issued a writ in rem claiming possession of the steamship J. The writ was directed against "the steamship J. & all persons claiming any right or interest in the said steamship." The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics entered an appearance under protest & moved to set the writ aside on the ground that the ship was the property of the Union, & recognised independent sovereign State.—Held: the issue of a writ in rem against a vessel in which a foreign sovereign State claimed an interest was in effect impleading the sovereign State, & although the right of the sovereign State to possession of the vessel was in dispute, the ct. could not investigate the facts, & the writ must be set aside.—THE JUPITER, [1924] P. 236; 93 L. immunity from arrest of a foreign state-owned ship is not affected by the vessel being used for trading purposes & as a cargo carrier, nor does it matter how the vessel is being employed.—BROWN, JR. v. S.S. INDO-CHINE (1921), 21 Exch. C. R. 406.—CAN.

Under the terms of requisition the possession or control of the vessel passed to the Greek Govt., & the master & crew ceased to be employed by defts. & were conscripted into the Greek forces. At the end of the period of requisition the vessel had to be returned to defts. in the same condition as at the beginning of the period. While under requisition the vessel stranded, & was saved from possible total loss by the services of plffs.' salvage ship. After the vessel had been returned to her owners she was arrested by plffs. in an action in rem.—Held: the terms of requisition did not dispossess defts. of their property in the vessel; the services were of benefit to defts., as thereby they had their vessel instead of merely a claim against the Greek Govt.; as the services were not those of the crew of the Greek vessel, it was immaterial that the crew were the servants of the Greek Govt., & defts. were liable to plffs. for salvage.—THE MEANDROS, [1925] P. 61; 94 L. The vessel had belonged to a Russian co., but the Soviet Govt. asserted that by a decree of nationalisation all vessels of the Russian mercantile marine had become State property, & that the co. had ceased to exist. The Russian co. had moved its business to France, & an action in rem was brought in its French name, & in the name of the persons appointed by the French cts. to administer its affairs, against "the J.," claiming possession. The Italian co. entered an appearance & moved to set aside the writ. — Held: (1) there is no established rule that the Admty. Ct. will not entertain possession suits in respect of foreign vessels except at the request of both parties or with the consent of the accredited representative of the country to which the vessel belongs; the matter is one for the discretion of the ct.; (2) the proceedings did not implead the Soviet Govt. directly or indirectly; (3) the question of authority to institute the action was a matter which should be referred to the judge at the trial; (4) the

The owners of the barge had given notice that they abandoned their vessel. On a motion by

On appeal by ptfs.:—Held: the operation of Supreme Ct. of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 22 (1) (iii), was not confined to cases where the damage received by a ship was also done by a ship, with the ship as the operating cause, & ptfs. were entitled to prosecute their claim in rem or in personam as for damage received by a ship; damage done by part of a ship—i.e., a derrick—was sufficient to satisfy the words of para. Under Swedish law the Swedish shipowners paid compensation to the relatives of the seaman. At the reference to assess the collision damage the Swedish shipowners claimed to recover from the owners of the British vessel a moiety of the compensation so paid. The registrar allowed the item. On appeal:—Held: the decision of the registrar was wrong for apart from Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (c. 57), the Ct. of Admty. had no jurisdiction to entertain an action in rem for loss of life, & the Admty. rules as to division of loss had no application to such a claim, & sect. 3 of that Act, which provided for contribution between the owners of wrongdoing vessels in respect of (inter alia) damages for loss of life or personal injuries, only applied to damages recoverable by action, & not to claims for compensation arising out of some statute & independently of fault on the part of the shipowner.—THE MOLIÈRE, [1925] P. 27; 94 L. Parcels of goods were accepted in N. for delivery at S. to the shippers' order, there being given to each shipper a document of the above-mentioned character. Upon the named ship arriving at S. the goods were not delivered. Resp., twenty firms, each being indorsees of one of the documents, issued a joint writ in rem claiming severally to recover damages. The writ stated that *pltf.*s. claimed as consignees or indorsees of bills of lading for non-delivery of goods agreed to be carried by the named ship, or agreed to be shipped within a reasonable time by some other vessel of the same line. On affidavits sworn separately by *pltf.*s., alleging that the goods were either lost or not shipped on any other vessel within a reasonable time, the ship was arrested. The owners of the ship took out a summons to set aside the writ & all proceedings thereunder:—Held: (1) the documents in question were bills of lading within the above sect., & the proceedings being to set aside the writ & it not being denied that some of the goods were received on board, the action should proceed; (2) the action being in rem & the joinder of *pltf.*s. convenient, the view of the full Bench of the Supreme Ct. that *pltf.*s. could properly be joined under the rules locally applicable should not be interfered with.—*MARLBOROUGH HILL, SHIP v. Pltfs. worked at the scene of the wreck whenever the weather & tides permitted during the summer of 1922 & from Apr. to July, 1923. During that time they had succeeded in cutting a hole into No. 4 hold, had buoyed the wreck, & had extracted some portions of cargo of little value at a cost of over £40,000. In July, 1923, defts., British subjects & partners in a rival salvage co., arrived on the scene in a British registered ship, & by sending down their own divers & interfering with pltfs.' diving operations, tried to secure possession of the wreck & cargo, & either prevent further work on the part of pltfs. or establish themselves with pltfs. in concurrent occupation:—Held: (1) an action in respect of injurious acts done on the high seas had always been within the jurisdiction of the High Ct. of Admty.; (2) pltfs. were sufficiently in occupation of the wreck to exclude third parties from interfering with the property; (3) as defts.' interference was high-handed & deliberate they would be restrained until further order from doing any acts at or near the wreck whereby pltfs. might be prevented or hindered in the carrying on of their salvage operations.—THE TUBANTIA, [1924] P. 78; 93 L. On a petition being subsequently filed, defts. moved for its dismissal, with costs & damages, on the ground that the value of the property salvaged was under £1,000:—Held: the proceedings of defts. in reference to the consolidation must be construed as an agreement which gave the ct. jurisdiction under Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 9.

Semble: under Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 6, the ct. of Admty. has discretion to take cognisance of cases of salvage, though the value of the property salvaged be under £1,000.—THE HERMAN WEDEL (1870), 39 L. J. Adm. 30; 23 L. T. 876; 3 Mar. L. C. 530.

- 648a. Ship not entitled to be registered as British ship—Ship under jurisdiction of Prize Court.]—A ship registered as a British ship, & nominally owned by a duly registered British co., was in fact owned & controlled by the Hamburg-Amerika Line, of Hamburg, which, in the person of its nominees, owned all the shares in the British co. & appointed its directors. Accordingly, after the outbreak of war with Germany, the ship was seized as prize, & on July 28, 1916, the Prize Ct. pronounced her to have belonged at the time of seizure to enemies of the Crown, & ordered her to be detained by the marshal until further order. Meanwhile on Jan. 11, 1916, under Prize Ct. Rules, Ord. 29, the ship had been requisitioned by the Lords Comrs. of the Admty., & she remained in their possession. On Apr. 5, 1917, the writ in the present action was issued claiming a declaration under M. S. Acts, 1894 (c. 60), & 1906 (c. 48), that the ship was forfeited to the Crown on the ground that she was not entitled to be registered as a British ship:—Held: as the Lords Comrs. of the Admty. had merely temporary possession of the ship & had to return her into the custody of the Prize Ct. which had at some time to make a final decree either of condemnation or release, the Admty. Ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the forfeiture action & to make the usual order for appraisalment & sale, & the action must be dismissed.—THE ST. TUDNO, [1918] P. 174; 87 L. J. P. 105; 34 T. No jurisdiction—Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 22—Action for freight—Owner domiciled in England.]—Pltfs., ship-owners domiciled in England, instituted an action in rem against cargo owners for freight in respect of the carriage of the cargo in the ship. By Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (c. 49), s. 22 (1) (a) (xii), the High Court shall in Admiralty matters have jurisdiction in respect of any claim arising out of an agreement relating to the carriage of goods in a ship, "unless it is shown to the ct. that at the time of the institution of the proceedings any owner or part owner of the ship was domiciled in England".—Held: although under the sect. pltfs. who are British ship-owners domiciled in this country are in a less favourable position than foreign shipowners, the sect. was general in its scope & could not be construed as applicable only to deft. ship-owners against whom a claim is made, & the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the action.—THE ESKBRIDGE, [1931] P. 51; 100 L. Before the trial of the action, it was found that the actual cost of the repairs amounted to $5,512.94. extension of time for the renewal of an unserved writ, which has not been renewed within the period of one year as provided by R. S. C., Ord. 8, r. 1, if, but for the extension of time, the claim would be barred by a statute of limitation. But, inasmuch as Maritime Conventions Act, 1911 (c. 57), s. 8, contains provisos for extension of time unknown to any other statutes of limitation, the application to renew a writ in an action which comes within the operation of sect. 8 must be considered on its merits, & if, under the circumstances, the ct. would give leave to issue a writ notwithstanding the lapse of two years, the ct. will allow an extension of time for the renewal of a writ, the time for the renewal of which has expired.—THE ESPANOLETO, [1920] P. 223; 90 L. The owners of the A. agreed pltfs.' damages, but refused to pay the costs of the action by pltfs. against the W., which had then been prosecuted to the stage of filing pltfs.' preliminary act:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to amend their writ by adding the owners of the A. as defts. The case came within the principle of R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 11, that no cause should be defeated by the non-joinder of parties, & in the circumstances it would have been a misuse of the discretion of the ct. to refuse to allow a party to exercise that right. Various other writs in rem were issued against the ship, including a writ by the master in respect of wages. His independent claim for wages as a "ship's carpenter on board the ship," was in fact only a part of his firm's claim, & immediately after the ship was arrested his firm's action was instituted:—Held: these facts so obviously disclosed mala fides & an abuse of the process of the ct. that the arrest could be viewed as a sham proceeding & as not having any legal existence as regards the firm, but other claimants could support their suits on its existence in fact, because in good faith they instituted their suits relying upon the records of the ct. which on their face showed that its jurisdiction could be invoked.—*ERIKSEN BROTHERS v. Pending a decision as to its validity, & after the ship had been detained in harbour for about a month the same pursuers brought a second action with the same conclusions, the summons in which contained a warrant for the arrestment of ship in rem. had removed the gangway. He was thus in fact prevented by force from returning on board; & this prevention continued during the proceedings which followed. The owners thereupon withdrew their consent to the release, & issued a summons, which the Nationalist Govt. supported, for an order for the reinstatement of the master on board the ship. In reply to this summons pltf's. filed affidavits (inconsistent with their earlier affidavits in which it had been stated that the master refused to deliver up the ship to pltf's. & was about to sail her to an unknown destination) to the effect that the captain had been dismissed from the post of master, & that a new captain & the crew had been in continuous possession of the ship on behalf of pltf's. from a date prior to the issue of the writ for possession. The President held (i) that as regards defts.' summons without deciding the rival claims of the Nationalist & Republican Govts. to the right to the control of the ship (a controversy which it was not for the ct. to decide), it was impossible to hold that the Admiralty Marshal should concern himself to take steps to ensure that defts.' master should have free right of access to the ship; that at most the marshal could only invoke the assistance of the police, which the parties could do for themselves; & that the summons must be dismissed; (ii) that as the right to arrest in an action in rem for possession was based upon an allegation that the ship was in the possession, or at least under the control, of some one else, the claim for possession & the warrant of arrest (having regard to pltf's. later affidavits) were wholly misconceived & perilously like an abuse of the process of the ct.; that under the rules of R. S. C., Ord. XXIX, which dealt with releases in Admiralty, when an appearance had been entered, a party at whose instance the arrest has been effected could not obtain a release merely at his own instance; that an order of the ct. was required; & that in the circumstances it would not be just to allow pltf's. to obtain possession of the ship forthwith; & that the arrest would be continued until the position of the Nationalist Govt. was finally determined by the appeal to the House of Lords in The Arantzazu Mendi, [1939] A. C. 256, then pending, unless meanwhile the ct. was satisfied that the interests of all parties would be safeguarded as, for example, by the peaceful reinstatement of the master. On appeal:—Held: both orders should be discharged; the forcible exclusion of the master appointed by the owners constituted a contempt of ct.; once the ship was put into the charge of the marshal all persons concerned in the litigation were under a duty to abstain from any interference with the custody of the ship by the marshal; &

the order would be that on production to the registrar of an affidavit by pltf's. solrs. that the master had been permitted to return on board, & was on board, there would be liberty to pltf's. or deft. shipowners to extract the release from the registry.

Per CLAUSON, L.J.: the practice of the Admiralty registry under R. S. C., Ord. XXIX, not to allow a release to issue when an appearance has been entered, notwithstanding that pltf. has discontinued his action, until the consent of deft. has been produced, is correct.—THE ABODI MENDI, [1939] P. 178; 108 L. 781b. Undertaking to put in bail—Afterwards withdrawn—Effect of subsequent arrest of vessel.]—On June 22, 1920, defts. solrs. gave an undertaking to enter an appearance & put in bail in respect of a writ in rem claiming damages in respect of loss by collision. In consequence defts. vessel was not arrested. On Feb. 17, 1921, defts. solrs. wrote to plffs. solrs. that their clients were unable to make arrangements for bail, that accordingly the undertaking for bail was withdrawn, & that, as the vessel was within the jurisdiction of the ct., plffs. could arrest her. Plffs. solrs. arrested the vessel, but wrote to defts. solrs. that they reserved all their clients' rights under the undertaking for bail. On Mar. 16, 1921, the vessel was appraised as being at that time of a value of £800. Defts. provided bail in that sum & the vessel was released. On Apr. 12, plffs. applied for an order that defts. solrs. should forthwith provide good & sufficient bail, pursuant to their undertaking. It appeared that in June, 1920, the value of the vessel was much in excess of £800, & plffs. estimated her value at £4,500 :—Held : (1) the undertaking to give bail could not be withdrawn by substituting the vessel for the bail; (2) plffs. had not waived their rights under the undertaking by arresting the vessel; (3) defts. solrs. must complete their undertaking by putting in bail to the value of the vessel as on June 22, 1920; (4) nature of bail discussed.—THE BORRE, [1921] P. 390; 91 L. 781d. — Sale of ship—Effect on undertaking.]—In June, 1930, a firm of Norwegian shipowners, being threatened with an action in rem by cargo owners in respect of damage & short delivery, to avoid arrest of the ship, instructed their solrs. to give an undertaking to accept service, appear & provide bail. No writ was issued, the ship left the jurisdiction, & when she returned several months later she was encumbered with liens. On Jan. 6, 1931, she was sold by order of the ct. On Mar. 2 the solrs. took out an originating summons, & moved the ct. for an order that they were no longer bound by their undertaking. On Mar. 14 the cargo owners issued their writ in rem, but the solrs. refused to accept service pending the hearing of the motion :—Held : the undertaking, which was plain in its terms, enabled the ship to leave the jurisdiction without being arrested, & the fact that she was subsequently sold was immaterial; there had not been undue delay in issuing the writ having regard to all the circumstances; & the solrs. remained bound by their undertaking.—THE RING, [1931] P. 58; 100 L. 781f. Benefit of bail—Action in name of cargo owners—Some owners not joining in proceedings.]—The steamships W. & J. came into collision & the W. & her cargo were damaged. Before the issue of the writ an undertaking to put in bail to the amount of £100,000, had been given on behalf of the owners of the J. The writ was in the names of "The owners of the steamship W. & cargo v. the owners of the steamship J.," but at that time no authority from any of the cargo owners had been received. While the litigation was proceeding the owners of the W. asked the various underwriters on the cargo, subrogated to the rights of the respective cargo owners, to join in the proceedings or share in the costs. Some assented & some declined. The litigation proceeded to the House of Lords, where the J. was held alone to blame. The sum of £100,000 being insufficient to satisfy all the claims, the owners of the W. contended that having sued as owners of the ship & bailees of the cargo they were entitled to receive the whole of the bail for which the undertaking had been given, pay themselves the amount of their own damage as shipowners in priority to all other claimants, & that the non-assenting cargo owners had no right to share in the fund :—Held : (1) although, as bailees of the cargo, the shipowners were entitled to recover the full value of the damage to the cargo, represented by the bail, they must account to all the owners of the damaged parcels of cargo for their share; (2) it was the duty of the ct., when the bail was recovered, to see that all persons having a claim on the fund, including the non-assenting cargo owners, shared in the distribution.—THE JOANNIS VATIS, [1922] P. 92; 91 L. 781g. — Several salvage actions.]—A vessel which had stranded on rocks & sustained heavy damage got off with the assistance of various salvors & was placed in dock for temporary repairs. In respect of these services various salvage actions & an action by the ship repairers for salvage &/or necessities were instituted. No defence was put in, but in the first action an appearance was entered & an undertaking given to put in bail for ship, cargo & freight in the sum of £1,000. The cargo & freight were valued at £327. Before the other actions were instituted the cargo had been landed & dispersed. After some temporary repairs had been effected the vessel was sold by the marshal. She only realised £889 :—Held : the bail for cargo & freight did not constitute a fund in which all the salvors could share; the undertaking was given in one action only, & plffs. in that action, in which the total values were £1,217, could treat ³²⁷ ₁₂₁₇ of £1,000 as bail representing the cargo & freight.—THE RUSSLAND, [1924] P. 55; 93 L. 312a. — — — Position of third party.]—Pltfs. brought an action in rem in respect of damage to their cargo against the shipowners & arrested the ship, which was released on bail. Subsequently the charterers of the ship were added as second defts. Pltfs. right of action was held to be against the charterers & not against the shipowners; but in third-party proceedings the charterers succeeded in obtaining an indemnity against the shipowners for the damages which they (the charterers) would have to pay to pltfs. The charterers applied that the bail might be made available to meet the claim under the indemnity:—Held: the proper course for the second defts. to have taken would have been to sue out a warrant of arrest on their own claim for an indemnity, when the question whether such cause of action gave a right to arrest could have been challenged. In the absence of such action there appeared to be no precedent for the suggestion that pltfs. in third-party proceedings had any right, after judgment delivered, to an order that bail, put in to answer another party's claim, should be made available to answer their own.—THE ROBERTA, [1938] P. 1; 107 L. M. & Co., who acted as defts.' agents. The writ was served at E. M. & Co.'s London offices. Defts. moved to set aside the writ & services on the ground that they were not resident within the jurisdiction. It appeared that E. M. & Co. were one of deft.'s agents in this country for the booking of freight, issue of passenger tickets, & the ordinary purposes for which ship's brokers are employed. The only remuneration received by them was the customary agents' commission, & they had no concern with the management of deft. corpn. The only name appearing on the door of E. M. & Co.'s offices was their own name, but upon the window of the ground floor their name was exhibited as agents for deft. corpn. together with the names of other foreign shipping cos. for whom E. M. & Co. acted:—Held: E. M. & Co. were a firm who "sold" & did not "make" contracts on behalf of defts., & that defts. did their business in this country "through" E. M. & Co. & not "by" them; defts., accordingly, were not resident within the jurisdiction & that the writ & service must be set aside.—THE LALANDIA, [1933] P. 50; 102 L. J. P. 11; 148 L. In such cases the proper course is that there should be the communication between the solrs. which commonly takes place in admty. cases, & that the solrs. should ascertain whether the parties are ready to file preliminary acts under Ord. 19, r. 28. If both parties are not ready to deliver preliminary acts, or one of them declares himself unable or unwilling, then the matter should be raised by summons. - 899a. Admissibility—Against party making.]—Two steamships came into collision in fine, clear weather. They had been on crossing courses, involving risk of collision, & pltf.'s vessel, having the other ship on her own starboard side, had a duty under art. 19 of the collision regulations to keep out of the way. Under art. 21 of the regulations there was a corresponding duty on defts.' vessel to keep her course & speed, but a note to art. 21 provides that, when for any reason the "stand-on" vessel finds herself so close that collision cannot be avoided by the action of the "giving-way" vessel, she also shall take such action as will best aid to avert collision. Pltfs. admitted that their ship took no action at all to keep out of the way & was partly to blame, but they contended that deft. vessel was also to blame for breach of the note to art. 21. In their preliminary act defts. stated that their vessel kept her course & speed up to the collision, & in their defence & counterclaim they added that they so acted "as the best means of avoiding collision or minimising its effect." At the trial pltfs. called no evidence & the defts. submitted there was no case for them to answer:—Held: the admissions in defts.' preliminary act were evidence which could rightly be used against them, although the point was not, perhaps, of very great importance, because the same admissions were made in the ship's logs, which were indisputably evidence.—THE LADY BELLE, [1933] P. 275; 102 L. The yacht became a constructive total loss & was broken up. Negotiations between the parties took place in Germany, but no proceedings were taken on either side until Aug. 23, 1938, when, on her arrival in English waters, the tug was arrested in an action in rem. On Aug. 31 defts. entered an appearance, & the two years within which to commence proceedings under s. 8 of the Maritime Conventions Act having expired on Sept. 4, 1938, defts., who wished to counterclaim, moved the ct. for leave. They argued that by reason of s. 34 of the Admiralty Ct. Act, s. 8 did not apply to a deft. who wished to counterclaim, or that, if it did, defts. had put themselves in order by entering an appearance within two years. In the alternative they asked the ct. to exercise its discretion under the proviso to s. 8:—Held: (1) s. 34 was subject to the condition that a cross-action had been instituted, & (2) the sect. was subject to the general law with regard to limitation of action & s. 8 of the Maritime Conventions Act applied; but (3), under the circumstances it would be a manifest injustice to allow pltf. to proceed as if there were no counterclaim, when, on the same evidence & with no material increase of expense, the claim & counterclaim could be tried together; the motion accordingly succeeded & pltf.'s action would be stayed until he gave bail to answer the counterclaim.—THE FAIRPLAY XIV, [1939] P. 57; 108 L. - 979b. — — —.]—I had occasion, recently, when trying a salvage action in which there had been a tender, to express my view that the fact that the amount of the tender was made known to the ct. before it had determined its award hampered the ct. in its judicial capacity; & that it was better, if a tender were made, that the amount of the tender should not be made known to the ct. until it had exercised its judicial discretion in arriving at what would be a reasonable sum to award, because the question of costs, a serious one, depends upon whether the amount of the award is or is not in excess of the tender. . . . Having expressed my view as to what I thought to be advisable, namely, that the amount should not be stated in the defence, the case of the U. C. has arisen, a salvage case, & is now before me on summons; & I thought it desirable, in view of what has taken place, that my view upon this question should be stated publicly, so that it might be recorded for the information of all concerned. I have thought it right, as I have suggested a variation of what has apparently been the custom & practice of this ct., to speak to the President about it, & he agreed with my view of the case, that putting the amount into the defence in a salvage action was embarrassing to the judge. Upon inquiry, however, it appears that this is such a very old practice, that in the President's view it is not advisable to alter it. The result is that I make no alteration in the existing practice, & dismiss the appeal summons (BARGAVE DEANE, J.).—THE UPTON CASTLE, [1912] W. N. 84.

Claims against the fund were in due course filed by the owners of the N. & the owners of the other ship, the S., & also by the owners of cargo on the S. The same solrs. presented the claims on behalf of the owners of both ships. The owners of cargo on the S., who were not parties to the collision action, then sought leave to administer four interrogatories to the owners of the S. Nos. 1 & 2 asked whether there had been, as between the owners of the two ships, a mutual abandonment of claim or a settlement on other terms. No. 3 inquired whether there had been any assignment of the claim of the owners, master, & crew of the S.; & No. 4 asked by whom the particular solrs. were instructed to present the claim of the owners of the S. The registrar allowed Nos. 1 & 2, but disallowed Nos. 3 & 4. The report was subsequently passed through various departments in defts.' offices until it reached the solr.'s hands. It was then dealt with by the solr. in the course of his professional conduct. A report was made in these circumstances by the master of a vessel belonging to defts. in respect of a collision with pltf.' vessel. Pltfs. claimed to have this report produced to them:—Held: the report having been obtained for the solr., in the sense of being procured as materials upon which professional advice should be taken in proceedings pending or threatened or anticipated, it was privileged from production.—THE HOPPER No. 13, [1925] P. 52; 64

The defence was delivered on Mar. 17, when def. paid into ct. $2,000 & tendered it to pltf., who rejected it. Pltf. at the trial applied for leave to amend to set up an additional claim. The amendment was made, & def. increased his tender to $4,000, which was accepted:—Held: (1) def. should in any event have the costs of & consequent upon the amendment granted at the trial; (2) as to the accepted tender, the increased tender must be regarded as having been made & accepted on Mar. 17, & all the costs subsequent to that tender should be borne by pltf.; (3) the circumstances were not quite sufficient to deprive pltf. of costs before tender.—THE PASCHEA v. THE GRIFF, [1925] 2 W. W. R. 676.—CAN.

Defts. had called for reports from the first, second, third, & fourth officers of the steamer, in order to investigate the question of the management of the vessel & the conduct of their officers in the prevention of theft, which reports were in due course obtained through defts.' agents in China. 1152a. Log of defendants' vessel—Right of plaintiffs to put in—After admission of facts by defendants.—Defts. to an action of salvage by their defence admitted that all pltfs. had rendered salvage services & that the allegations of the facts of such services set out in the respective statements of claim were in substance correct, but they denied that the various inferences sought to be drawn from those facts were accurate or well founded, & that their vessel was ever in any real danger. They also pleaded certain soundings which differed from those pleaded by certain of pltfs. Pltfs. by their reply joined issue upon the defence save in so far as the same consisted of admissions:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to put in the logs of defts.' vessel with a view to proving that the ship was in real danger, & also a graphic representation of the soundings based on sketches in defts.' log, but not to call evidence as to the facts, e.g. the displacement of certain tugs.—THE WOODARRA (1921), 38 T. 1152b. Oral evidence dispensed with—Salvage—Amount in dispute small—Discretion of court.—In a case where salvage services had been requisitioned & the amount in dispute was small, by agreement the case was tried on the pleadings & statements of the witnesses, no oral evidence being called & the attendance of the Elder Brethren being dispensed with:—Held: the course taken was a mode of procedure useful to the shipping world, & one for which the ct. would endeavour to give proper facilities, the power of the ct. being, of course, discretionary.—THE RIVER FISHER (1923), 89 T. 1152c. Lighthouse log—Admissible—Although facts admitted.—The Cornish Rose was in the English Channel, unable to steam or to steer & in danger of becoming even more helpless. The Finland brought her into safety after twenty-two hours hard work. The facts were admitted upon the pleadings & pltfs. sought to put in defts.' log in support of the inferences which they desired to draw as to the nature of the services. On the other side it was desirable to check these inferences by the entries in the logs of the Lizard & Land's End lighthouses:—Held: although the facts were admitted there was no objection to the admission of the logs for this purpose.—*FINLAND S.S. 1185a. — Photographs — Calculation as to locality of collision—Absence of expert evidence.—In an action arising out of a collision in Sydney harbour between the ships C. & St. A., there were in evidence three photographs, taken from a third moving ship, showing the colliding ships just before, during, & after the collision, with the frontage of the harbour as background. The point in the harbour at which collision occurred was material. The trial judge, basing his judgment solely upon the other evidence in the case, held that the St. A. was to blame. The appellate ct. gave the owners of that ship leave to adduce upon an appeal by them the evidence of three land surveyors based upon the photographs. They used the alignment of pairs of objects which they identified in the backgrounds to fix the position of the camera when each photograph was taken, & then by reference to the background localised the collision. These results were shown by a diagram. The appellate ct., accepting the result so arrived at, reversed the decision of the trial judge, stating, however, that apart from the new evidence they agreed with it:—Held: the skill or science needed to produce an accurate result by the process adopted was not that of a land surveyor, & in the absence of expert evidence the reversal of the decision of the trial judge was not warranted.—*UNITED STATES SHIPPING BOARD v. 1196 III. — — — — —]—Two ships collided on a very bad night. The collision was caused by the M., which was light, dragging her anchors, & coming down on the R., which was holding to her moorings. When the M. was dragging her anchors she had steam up but did not use it, by which failure she omitted to take a reasonable measure which might have avoided the accident. In an action for damages by the R. against the M. there was uncontradicted evidence to the effect that the steam had not been used because those in charge of the M. did not & could not know owing to the darkness & the weather that they were dragging their anchors. The Lord Ordinary, without expressing any opinion as to whether he credited that evidence or not, accepted an opinion expressed by the nautical assessor to the effect that it would not have been difficult for those on the M. to know that they were dragging their anchors:—Held: it was for the Lord Ordinary & not for the nautical assessor to pronounce upon the trustworthiness of that evidence, & to say whether or not the master of the M. ought to have known when his anchor began to drag, & on the ground that the evidence did not establish the fault, the M. was absolved.—*CAMMO SHIPPING CO., LTD. 1402a. Failure to file vouchers—Damage action by Soviet Government.—The Russian Govt., plffs. in an action for damage by collision, were ordered by the ct. to file vouchers in support of their claim within a specified time, "otherwise, they be precluded from giving evidence in support thereof." Thereupon, plffs. filed a bundle of documents, which referred only to a few of the items of their claim, & at the reference the registrar ruled that only those items which were supported by vouchers should be allowed to be the subject of proof in the claim, & that no evidence should be allowed to be given in support of the other items. On an appeal from this decision:—Held: the ct. had to bear in mind that the Russian nation had elected to carry on their business in a method entirely different from that in which business was conducted by the rest of the civilised world, with the result that when they came into that ct. they were handicapped to an unusual degree in supporting their claim; & therefore, although the documents which, in the present case, they had produced in the way of vouchers fell immensely short of being a fair & full notice to the defts. of the case which plffs. sought to make, in the circumstances justice would be done by allowing plffs. to give evidence in support of all items of which, in the judgment of the registrar, they gave fair & full particulars to defts. as to the nature of their claim.—THE MARTE (1933), 149 L. 1403a. Agreement for reference to Registrar—Effect of subsequent payment out of jurisdiction—In foreign currency.—In proceedings for collision damage instituted by the owners of a Chilean steamship against the owners of a Dutch steamship the latter, through their solrs., undertook to appear, & in due course gave bail in an agreed sum. Later defts. made a formal admission of liability, & that admission, signed by the respective solrs. for the parties, was filed in the Admiralty Registry, together with a consent to a reference to assess plffs.' claim. Plffs., in compliance with an order to that effect, duly filed their claim & vouchers, but before a date had been fixed for the reference defts. obtained in the Chilean cts. an order permitting them to make payment by depositing in a named Chilean bank a sum in pesos considerably in excess of plffs.' claim quantified in pesos. This payment was refused by plffs., the Chilean currency having fallen heavily & the export of pesos being prohibited by Chilean law. On a motion by defts. for an order dismissing the action on the ground that they had satisfied the claim by payment:—Held: there was no final decision by the Chilean cts. that the payment in depreciated pesos was sufficient while proceedings were pending in England, & therefore the motion failed.—THE BAARN, [1933] P. 251; 102 L. 1323 I. General costs—Excessive claim.—In a suit claiming remuneration for salvage services rendered, the claim was excessive & the case was such as to warrant a small award only. The ct. made an award of £25 in favour of plffs., & ordered defts. to pay the costs of the suit. On a subsequent application for directions, the ct. refused to exercise its discretion & to make a special order for costs.—

1323 II. ———.—Salvors arrested a ship against which they were claiming salvage amounting to £47,500, & they refused to release the ship except upon obtaining security to the extent of £37,500. The arresters ultimately obtained decree for £4,800 as salvage, with modified expenses against defenders, but they were found liable in the expense incurred by defenders in obtaining security in excess of £8,000:—Held: the arresters were rightly found liable for the expense of obtaining security in excess of £8,000.—ST. CLAIR v. AUDNEY, [1922] S. C. 85.—SCOT.

d. Costs of arrest.—Where salvors of a ship arrested her as an initiatory step in an action in rem to recover the salvage due, they were allowed to recover the expenses of arresting the ship from her owners.—HATTON v. ART. DURBAN HANSEN, [1919] S. C. 154; 56 So. L. R. 100.—SCOT.

Chilean vessel was repaired in Chile, & pltfs. filed their claim & vouchers comprising (inter alia) some 70,000 Chilean pesos in respect of repairs & detention, quantified into sterling for the purposes of the claim at a little over £1,500. Defts. alleged that under Chilean law a debtor could make a valid payment, even against the will of the creditor, by depositing the amount owed in a Chilean bank in the name of the creditor, & the exchange value of the peso having fallen, defts. deposited in a bank in Chile 80,000 pesos in pltfs.' name, an amount which defts. alleged was sufficient to cover the whole claim with interest.

LANGTON, J., held that the deposit, so far as it related to the claim in respect of repairs & detention, was a good discharge, & that the reference in respect of these items must be stayed. On appeal, SCRUTTON & ROMER, L.J.J., held that the deposit was not a good payment in satisfaction of the damages & that the reference must proceed; but GREER, L.J., said that in his opinion the registrar should treat the deposit as a payment on account of the sums expended & lost in pesos. The damages in question were agreed at £1,581, & it was further agreed at the reference (a) that the deposit, on the rate of exchange applicable at the time the pesos were expended & lost, was equivalent to £1,409 3s. 11d., but (b) that owing to the action of the Chilean Exchange Control Commission it was impossible to purchase sterling, & (c) that defts. could at any time obtain possession of the pesos from the bank in Chile & that pltfs. did not claim them. The registrar held that a foreign debt. sued for damages in this country could not satisfy the claim by offering to pay in foreign currency; that the deposit did not affect the proceedings instituted here; & that pltfs. were entitled to £1,581 & interest. Defts. moved in objection to the report.

BATESON, J., confirmed the report, not only for the reasons given by the registrar, but also because, on the view he took of the judgments of SCRUTTON & ROMER, L.J.J., the question whether the deposit could be taken into account had already been decided. Defts. appealed:—Held: the appeal failed; (per CUR.) on the ground that on the previous judgments of the majority of the Ct. of Appeal defts. were precluded from raising the question that the deposit was to be treated as a sum paid on account of the damages in this country; (per SCRUTTON & MAUGHAM, L.J.J.) on the additional ground that a deposit which could not be converted into sterling could not satisfy or reduce damages payable in sterling; (per MAUGHAM, L.J.) on the ground that procedure in an action brought in this country must be governed by the lex fori & that the deposit in pesos was not a valid payment according to English law.—THE BAARN (No. 2), [1934] P. 171; 103 L. J. P. 149; 152 L. T. 439; 18 Asp. M. L. C. 506, C. A.

1406a. Reasons should be stated.](1) In cases of collisions in which foreign ships are involved, the report of the registrar should state the reasons which have actuated the tribunal in allowing or disallowing large amounts, in order that the foreign interests concerned may appreciate what has been done.

(2) The registrar & merchants are in very much the same position as a jury except that they give their reasons. So far as their reasons involve legal considerations they can be questioned. So far as they are findings of fact it takes a strong case to disturb them, but where it is clear that they have made mistakes or that the evidence does not support their conclusions, the ct. has always retained the power to alter their report, & it is obviously right that the ct. should maintain such a control (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—THE ST. The owners of the R. contended that interest was only payable from the date when the Admty. paid the value of the trawler to her owners:—Held: under the Admty. rule a bailee in possession was entitled to recover from a wrongdoer a complete equivalent of the chattel deteriorated or lost, namely, its value at the time of the deterioration or loss, with interest from that date; but, inasmuch as there was an agreement between the parties that defts. should pay what the Admty. had to pay to the owners of the trawler, interest on that payment only ran from the date of payment.—THE ROSALIND (1920), 90 L. Thereupon certain charterers, to whom the mtgors. had chartered the ship for a term of years, intervened, claiming a declaration that the charterparty was binding on the mtgees.; & by an order of Mar. 3 the sale of the ship stood over pending the trial of the issue, upon the interveners giving security in an amount satisfactory to the registrar for loss arising from delay & any loss on sale due to a fall in shipping values. On July 15 the ct. gave judgment that ptfs. were not bound by the charterparty, that they were entitled to the judgment they had obtained, & that the costs of & occasioned by the intervention should be paid by the interveners. On Oct. 14 the ship was sold by the marshal for £20,000 less than she had been valued at nine months previously. Ptfs. took out a summons for further security:—Held: although judgment had been given against the interveners & they were not appealing against that decision, the matter was still at large, as they were contesting ptfs.' claims before the registrar, & the interveners could be ordered to give further security in respect of possible loss of capital & interest & for the marshal's expenses; the case must be referred to the registrar to find what amount should be given & what was the amount of ptfs.' damages under each head.—THE LORD STRATHCONA (No. 2), [1926] P. 18; 95 L. - 1520a. — Measure of compensation.—While it has always been the practice, owing to the nature of their calling, to allow seafaring witnesses to be detained on shore to give evidence, & to allow them reasonable compensation for their detention, it is a question for the taxing master whether a party who seeks to charge his opponent with the cost of detaining an expensive witness has acted reasonably in incurring the expense or whether he ought not to have examined the witness on commission.
A taxing master should bear in mind that a witness duly summoned is bound to attend, & the witness is not entitled to receive, as the measure of his compensation, the exact sum he may prove he has lost by reason of the detention. He is, however, entitled to some compensation, & not merely to the conduct money given him with his subpoena; & the wages he is earning may afford an important indication of what is fair compensation. But although this is correct in the case of seamen, as regards captains & other officers, as in the case of professional witnesses, their earnings cannot be taken as a fair criterion on which to base the allowance.—THE IBIS VI, [1921] P. 255; 90 L. - 1520b. — —.—The mate of pltf's fishing vessel, through being detained ashore for twenty-five days to give evidence at the trial of a collision action, was prevented from sailing on a voyage on which he would have earned £280 as his share of the catch. Pltf's, who were successful in the action, paid the witness the £280, & on taxation, the assistant-registrar allowed the item in pltf's bill of costs as chargeable against defts. Defts. appealed, & the matter ultimately went to the Ct. of Appeal, which laid down certain guiding principles as to allowances to witnesses & sent the case back for reassessment. On reconsideration the assistant-registrar allowed the sum of £250, & defts. again appealed:—Held: the assistant-registrar had properly applied the directions given by LORD STERNDAL, M.R., in which WARINGTON, L.J., concurred, namely, that the amount to be awarded should be "the reasonable compensation to a person of the class of the witness, taking into account all the circumstances & considering the wages which the witness was earning about the time of detention not as an absolute measure, but an important indication & guide of what is fair. The fact that all persons are under an obligation to give evidence when called upon should also not be ignored." The appeal therefore failed.—THE IBIS VI (No. 2), [1922] P. 4; 91 L. J. - 1521a. Costs of obtaining statements from independent witnesses—Discontinuance of action.—In a collision action, before pltf's had filed their preliminary act or statement of claim, defts. took statements from independent witnesses on other vessels. Pltf's, shortly afterwards discontinued the action. On the taxation of defts' bill of costs the assistant registrar disallowed the costs of obtaining these statements, on the ground that there was "a well-settled principle of taxation that a party is only entitled as against his opponent to incur such costs or expenses as will enable him to conduct his case at the stage which the proceedings have reached, & not incur expenses in anticipation of matter, which, as events turn out, never arise":—

1521b. Fee of average adjusters—Numerous claims.]—On a reference to assess damages arising out of a collision, the claims of cargo owners against the fund paid into ct. by the owners of the wrongdoing ship, who had limited their liability, were presented to the registrar in the form of an average statement. On taxation, a fee of £1,000 was allowed to the average adjusters in respect of the preparation of the claims. On a summons to review this item:—Held: where, as in the present case, there were a number of claims to be dealt with, an average statement was a method of proof to which there was no objection in principle, involving as it did less expense than would be incurred in the preparation of many affidavits or in calling a number of witnesses from overseas; it was irrelevant that the claimants had employed the same adjusters to prepare their claims in general average against underwriters; & the fee of £1,000 was rightly allowed.—THE NORMANSTAR, [1929] P. 283; 98 L. At the trial the owners of the steamship T., who claimed to have sustained damage by reason of the collision or collisions between the H. & her tow & the D., appeared by counsel & claimed to be heard. 1551a. — — — Unascertained liability — Right of plaintiffs in limitation suit to claim against fund.]—In Feb. 1917, two Norwegian vessels, the C. & the O., came into collision & the C. sank. In Mar. 1917, the owners of the cargo laden on board the C. began an action against the owners of the O. in the Admty. Ct. The action was heard in May, 1919, when both vessels were pronounced to blame, & accordingly it was adjudged that plffs. were entitled to receive a moiety of the amount of their damage from defts. Thereupon defts., the owners of the O., commenced a limitation action against the owners of the C., the owners of her cargo, & all persons claiming to have received damage by reason of the collision. This action was heard in Feb. 1920, when a decree was pronounced limiting the liability of the owners of the O. to £8 per ton on the registered tonnage of the O. calculated in accordance with M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60). The decree provided that all claims were to be brought in within three months & that claims not so brought in would be excluded from sharing in the limitation fund. Claims were filed by the owners of the cargo on the C., but although the owners of the C. entered an appearance they took no further steps in the limitation proceedings. Meanwhile, however, in Feb. 1919, the owners of the C. had commenced an action in Norway against the owners of the O. & in June, 1920, when the reference was held in the limitation proceedings & the registrar made his report, the trial of the Norwegian action was still pending. The owners of the O. accordingly took out a summons asking that the report be not confirmed & that they might have leave to file a claim against the fund in respect of any liability they might incur under the Norwegian proceedings. The judge declined to postpone the distribution of the fund & dismissed the summons. Pltfs., the owners of the O., appealed:—Held: (1) pltfs. had no absolute right under the limitation sects. of M. S. Act, 1894 (c. 60), to have the distribution of the fund stayed & to bring forward a claim when ascertained; (2) limitation proceedings do not contemplate claims by pltfs., & the owners of the O. could not file a claim against the fund in their own right; (3) had an application been made in proper form the ct. would have had a discretion to extend the time before distributing the fund, in order to allow pltfs. to ascertain their liability under the pending Norwegian judgment & to apply to the ct. to adjust the distribution of the fund so that pltfs. might obtain credit for the amount payable under the Norwegian judgment; but, having regard to the lapse of time & to the fact that limitation proceedings contemplate that claims shall be brought in promptly &

the distribution of the fund not be unreasonably delayed, the ct. had rightly exercised its discretion in refusing to postpone the distribution of the fund.—THE KRONPRINZ OLAV, [1921] P. 52; 90 L. J. P. 398; 125 L. T. 684; 15 Asp. M. L. C. 312, C. A.

The notice contained no other statement of the questions intended to be raised, & no charges were specifically formulated against the master before or at the inquiry that he was in fault in connection with any of the matters on which he was examined. The ct. found the master guilty of an error of judgment in taking wrong helm action & in failing to stop & take soundings, & suspended his certificate for three months. The ct. found the master guilty of negligence & severely censured him, but did not deem it necessary to deal with his certificate. The master served notice of appeal on the Board of Trade, but the Board took the view that no appeal lay unless the officer's certificate had been suspended or cancelled. A motion to determine, as a preliminary point, the question of the right to appeal was decided by the Div. Ct. in the master's favour, & at the subsequent hearing of the appeal the master was held not to have been guilty of the acts of negligence attributed to him:—Held: (1) as a matter of principle, as the Board of Trade had not ordered the inquiry, & merely appeared on the appeal in discharge of a public duty, costs ought not to be awarded against the Board; (2) the question of the right to appeal, contested by the Board, raised a matter of public interest, & the master was entitled to the costs of the

Ct. reversed the judgment to the extent of holding the vessels to blame in equal degrees, & appts. were given the costs of the appeal. Resps. in the Div. Ct. appealed on the question of costs:—Held: by R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 65, r. 1, the question of costs is left in the unfettered discretion of the ct. or judge, & unless the judge can be shown to have taken into consideration matters which are immaterial to the issue his decision is unappealable.—THE YOUNG SID, [1929] P. 190; 98 L. 1697a. ———— Appeal & cross-appeal dismissed—No apportionment.]—In an action of damage by collision plffs.' vessel was held four-fifths to blame & defts.' vessel one-fifth to blame. Defts. appealed & plffs. cross-appealed. The Ct. of Appeal dismissed both appeal & cross-appeal with costs. On taxation plffs.' bill of costs of £802 14s. 6d. was taxed down to £755 17s. 9d. The bill of costs of defts., the unsuccessful appts., lodged for taxation at £1,935 10s. 1d., of which a moiety was claimed from plffs., was taxed down to £91 4s. 11d. on the ground that, beyond a possible slight prolongation of the hearing & a few small items in connection with the notice of the cross-appeal, defts.' costs had not been increased by reason of the cross-appeal. On a summons for a review of the taxation of the bills, BATESON, J., held that the bills must go back to the assistant registrar for apportionment of the costs of each side between the appeal & the cross-appeal, with reference to the actual course taken & the time properly occupied on the hearing of the appeals. Plffs. appealed:—Held: the learned judge was wrong in applying the principle of apportionment; in the absence of a special order the principle of no apportionment laid down as to claim & counterclaim cases in Medway Oil & Storage Co. v. Continental Contractors, Ltd., [1929] A. C. 88, applied; & defts. Defts. objected to payment of plffs.' costs on the High Ct. scale, on the ground that the matter was within the Admty. jurisdiction of the county ct., where the action should have been commenced:—Held: plffs. were warranted in commencing proceedings in the High Ct. & were entitled to have their costs taxed on the High Ct. scale.—THE NORFOLK COAST (1922), 153 L. 1724a. ———— Between ship & dumb barge in tow.]—While in tow of a tug, plffs.' dumb barge, which was fitted with rowing chocks & a rudder, was brought into collision with defts.' tug. Plffs. brought an action in respect of the damage on the Admiralty side of the City of London Ct., & defts. moved to set aside the proceedings on the ground that the barge was not a ship & accordingly the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the action. The judge held that as at the material time the barge was not being propelled by oars she was to be regarded as a ship & that accordingly the ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the claim. Defts. appealed:—Held: the appeal failed; (a) per BATESON, J., on the ground that the decision of the ct. below that the barge was to be regarded as a ship was right; but (b) (per CUR.), even if the barge was not to be regarded as a ship, the decision could be supported on a ground not argued in the ct. below, viz., that the old Ct. of Admty. would have had jurisdiction to try a case of collision between two vessels in which one of the vessels involved was a ship; subject to a pecuniary limitation the same jurisdiction was conferred on county ct.s. by County Ct.s. Admty. Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), & County Ct.s. Admty. Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869 (c. 51), merely enlarged the jurisdiction to include cases of damage to ships caused otherwise than by collision & did not restrict the words of sect. 3 of the earlier Act.—THE CHAMPION, [1934] P. 1; 103 L. 91b. Foreign sovereign power.]—In the agreement dated Dec. 28, 1929, between the British &

German Govts. as to the liquidation of German properties, & the agreement concluded with Germany at the Hague Conference, both ratified in May, 1930, there is nothing to show that the German Govt. was thereby expressly or by necessary implication purporting to act as agent or trustee on behalf of its nationals so as to give its nationals a right of action.

The relation of trustee or agent which is alleged to exist between a Sovereign Power & the subjects of that Sovereign Power in the negotiation & conclusion of a treaty is one which cannot exist in any State like ours & I may add, in any State like that which now exists in Germany (MAUGHAM, J.).

The second defts. were paid a commission by the first defts., & received nothing from pltfs. The first defts. were unable to deliver the

In an action for damages:—Held: as the second defts. were not in fact the agents of pltfs. but only of the first defts., & as the mere description of the second defts. as del credere agents, without any further words making them del credere agents of either party in particular, did not make them agents of pltfs., the action failed as against the second defts.—*NOUVELLES HUILERIES ANVERSOISES S. 108 i. Broker.—A broker is an agent of a special kind. A broker who approaches a buyer or seller acts in the first instance as agent of the person who employs him, but directly the other party is aware of the fact that he is a broker, he becomes the agent of both parties, not with a plenary power to bind both parties as he chooses, but to communicate between them until they are ad idem.—*JACOBE LEVITATZ & BRAUDE v. 149 iii. — Statute of Alberta, 1906 (c. 27).—It is merely the terms of the agency agreement, whether they may be meagre or detailed, that must be in writing under the above Act. The price & the other terms of the proposed sale may or may not be mentioned. If they are, in the circumstances, an essential part of the agency agreement they ought to be in writing. But it is a question of interpretation, even since the statute, whether the terms mentioned as those of the proposed sale are intended merely as a basis on which the agent may negotiate or are intended to bind the agent strictly to a sale on; he named terms before he can claim his commission.—KING v. SOHON, [1918] 3 W. W. R. 892; 44 D. L. R. 111.—CAN.

SECT. 4.—AGENCY OF NECESSITY (Vol. I., p. 293).

For "See HUSBAND & WIFE; SHIPPING & NAVIGATION," substitute as follows:—

- 215a. Extent of doctrine.—An agency of necessity can arise in other cases than that of carriers by land or sea or the acceptor of a bill of exchange for the honour of the drawer. Extraordinary circumstances, such as war conditions, which make it impossible for a buyer of goods on behalf of a principal abroad either to despatch them or to communicate with him, would entitle the buyer to sell the goods as an agent of necessity. But in order to establish an agency of necessity the agent must prove that there was an actual & definite commercial necessity for the sale, & that the transaction was bond fide in the interest of the principal.

Where an agent in London bought skins in 1915 & 1916 to be forwarded to his principal in Roumania as the principal might direct, & in consequence of the occupation of Roumania by the Germans in 1916, the agent was unable to send the skins to his principal or communicate with him, & the agent thereupon sold the skins without authority:—Held: the agent had failed to establish agency of necessity because (a) the deterioration of the furs might have been prevented by putting them in cold storage at a comparatively small expense, & moreover, they had steadily increased in value, & (b) the agent had not acted bond fide in selling the skins.—*PRAGER v. 246a. ————.]—In 1935, pliffs. engaged W. with a view to procuring finance for, & marketing, their patents in a number of foreign countries. It was found as a fact that, upon the construction of certain documents, including a power of attorney, according to foreign law, W. had power to bind pliffs. as against third parties, of whom defts. were one. In 1937, pliffs., by certain correspondence, purported to revoke W.'s power of attorney. Thereafter, defts., acting upon the instructions of W., expended a sum of money which, they alleged, was expended on pliffs.' behalf, their contention being that W.'s power of attorney was irrevocable, & therefore could not be validly revoked by pliffs. Against that, pliffs. contended that, as W.'s power of attorney had been revoked, the money had been expended without their consent, & that, consequently, it was recoverable as money had & received by defts. to the use of pliffs. The power of attorney, although its formation was governed by foreign law, was intended to operate in England, & two questions arose—namely, (i) whether W.'s authority was governed by English law, & (ii) whether it was an authority coupled with an interest, & as such, irrevocable.—Held: (1) as W.'s authority was to operate in England, it was governed by English law; (2) according to English law, the authority was not one coupled with an interest, & as such, was revocable, & as pliffs. had validly revoked the authority, they were entitled to recover.—SINFRA AKT. v. Deft. declined to accept the conveyance on the ground that a trustee for sale could not delegate the execution of the trust to his attorney. They informed the bank in writing that the two managers of their business had authority together to sign & indorse cheques, to draw & indorse promissory notes & bills of exchange, & to transact on their behalf all business connected with the accounts. Banks in Australia frequently issue to a customer, in exchange for a cheque in favour of the bank, a cheque, described as a "bank cheque," drawn by the bank on itself in favour of a person designated by him, or to bearer. In exchange for cheques drawn in favour of applt. bank by the managers, the bank issued to one of the

The above price to be clear of all commission charges." The agent, within the fourteen days, signed a contract of sale by which the property was sold to pltf. for $8,700, payable $1,000 deposit ($50 preliminary deposit, to be increased to $1,000 within one month), $2,250 within three months, & $5,450 within six months, possession to be given after the second payment $2,250 at the end of the three months. There was no provision for interest on the balance:—Held: the document signed by defts. was not an authority to the agent to sign a contract containing the above terms as to payment.—BOYD v. O'CONNOR, [1923] V. L. R. 603.—AUS.

398 iii. — Contract containing penalty clause.—Held: the existence of the penalty clause, which was not covered by the agent's instructions, & was not separable from the remainder of the contract, justified the principal in repudiating the agent's action, & the contract must be set aside.—*DUPREX v. q1. — General authority.—Pltf. contracted with defts. to purchase & deliver potatoes at an agreed price per bushel. The farmers from whom the potatoes were to be purchased required cash payments, & defts. agreed to make advances to put pltf. in funds for this purpose. Defts. were not prompt in providing funds, & pltf. complained of the delay which hampered him in buying, & in order to induce him to carry out the contract, defts.' agent offered an advance of 25 cents per bushel on the contract price for four cartloads of potatoes:—Held: the agent on the spot, looking after defts.' interests, had a general authority sufficiently broad to cover the making of the contract for the advanced price.—LEGACY v. DAVISON (1919), 52 N. S. R. 543.—CAN.

P. falsely represented to pltf. that he could obtain £525 for the A. tapestry, & pltf. allowed him to take it away for delivery to a purchaser, who in fact did not exist. P. then sold the A. tapestry to deft. for £250. Subsequently P. who never had authority to sell the L. tapestry, stole it from pltf. & sold it to deft. In an action for conversion deft. contended that P. had been in possession of the tapestries as a mercantile agent within the Act of 1889, & that as he had bought them from P. in good faith he had acquired the property in them. He also contended that pltf. had held out P. as a person with authority to sell & was estopped from saying that P. had no such authority in fact:—Held: (1) although P.'s authority was limited, & although he was not acting for any principal other than pltf., yet these facts did not prevent him from being a mercantile agent & in the circumstances he was a mercantile agent & in possession of the A. tapestry with the consent of pltf., & as to that tapestry the defence under the Act of 1889 was established; (2) as to the L. tapestry, as P. was never in possession of it with pltf.'s consent, the defence under the Act failed, & as pltf. had never represented to deft. that P. had authority to sell it, there was no estoppel, & pltf. was entitled to recover the value of the L. tapestry alone.—*

deft. alleged that pltf.'s husband had given him a lease for four years from Dec. 1913, & that he was a tenant from year to year. Pltf. denied any knowledge of a lease for a term, or that she had given authority to her husband to make such a lease:—Held: the fact that pltf.'s husband had collected her rent was no evidence that he had authority to make a lease for four years on her behalf.—*VOGE v. The agent submitted the property to pltf., who elected to take a lease. The agent drew up an agreement to lease the property upon the terms mentioned by deft., & signed it on deft.'s behalf:—Held: deft.'s letter did not authorise the agent to bind him by a concluded contract, but merely amounted to an authority to find a purchaser.—*QUICK v. The transaction was carried out by means of the printed forms used by debts. in their business, which were more appropriate to a case in which they bought a vehicle & let it on hire-purchase to a third party, than to the present case. H. being in possession of the lorry then fraudulently sold it to plffs., who were not aware of the previous transaction between H. & debts. The payments due from H. to debts. under the hire-purchase agreement between them having fallen into arrear, debts. resumed possession of the lorry & refused to deliver it to plffs. at their request. Plffs. thereupon brought an action against debts. claiming delivery up of the lorry or damages for its detention:—Held: H. was not in possession of the lorry as a "mercantile agent" within Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 2 (1), but as a bailee, & therefore the sale of the lorry by him to plffs. was not rendered valid as against debts. by that sub-sect.—*STAFFS MOTOR GUARANTEE, LTD. v. was not in order. S. & Co. having gone into liquidation, plffs. sued debts. for the return of the documents or damages for their detention or conversion:—Held: plffs. were "owners" of the goods represented by the documents within Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 2 (1), as being the persons who could authorise a sale of the goods & S. & Co. were mercantile agents within the sub-sect., so that the pledge of the documents by S. & Co. to debts. in the ordinary course of their business was valid. C. C. made such payments to plff. co. as were made under the agreement between the co. & F., & although F. had agreed not to change the permanent garage of the vehicle, which was expressed to be at his mother's residence, nor to part with its possession or control, & had signed a document acknowledging that he had received delivery of the car, the car remained in C.'s garage, in his possession, & under his control. On Aug. 9, 1935, C. let the car on hire under a further hire-purchase agreement to debt., who took it in good faith & without notice of the transaction between C. & T. In an action by plff. co. to recover the car from debt.:—Held: that C., having sold the car to plff. co., had continued in possession of it within Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45), s. 8, with the result that the delivery or transfer by C. of the car to debt. had the same effect as if C. had been expressly authorised by plff. co. to make the same, & plff. co. could not, therefore, succeed in the action.—*UNION TRANSPORT FINANCE, LTD. v. 495a. Act of 1889—Agent obtaining possession by trick—Authority to sell—At specified price.]—The owner of a motor car delivered it to a mercantile agent for sale. The owner stipulated & the agent agreed that the car should not be sold at less than a specified price without the owner's permission. The agent intended from the beginning to sell the car immediately for the best price he could get & to use the proceeds for his own purposes. On the day on which he got the car he sold it for less than the specified price to a purchaser who bought it in good faith & without notice of the agent's fraud. The agent misappropriated the proceeds. The car was subsequently purchased by debt. In an action of detinue by the owner of the car against debt. —Held: (1) debt. acquired a good title by virtue of 1889 Act, s. 2; (2) the mercantile agent had not rendered himself liable to be convicted of larceny by a trick, inasmuch as he was authorised by pltf. to pass the property in the car to a purchaser; (3) as pltf. in fact consented to the mercantile agent having possession of the car, it was immaterial whether the latter committed larceny by a trick. —*FOLKES v. 495b. — To specified person—Sale to third party.]—Pltf., desiring to sell his motor car for £210, & being informed by N. that he had a friend H., who would probably buy it for that price, allowed N. to have possession of the car for the sole purpose of showing it & endeavouring to sell it to H. There was no such person as H., & N. represented that there was with the intention of obtaining the car for his own benefit. N. afterwards through an intermediary sold the car to debts. for £110. Before N. got possession of the car he had been convicted of theft & other offences, but that was not known to any of the parties. While N. was in possession of the car he obtained an appointment as car salesman to a firm of motor engineers. In an action by pltf. against debts. for the return of the car or its value & damages for its detention:—Held: (1) N. had obtained the car from pltf. by larceny by a trick, pltf. never having given any real consent to his having or passing the property therein, & pltf. should succeed in the action unless debts. had some valid defence thereto; (2) debts. could not rely upon the defence that under 1889 Act, s. 2 (1), the sale to them was as valid as if the seller had been expressly authorised by pltf. to make the same, inasmuch as N. was not a "mercantile agent," & if he was, the sale by him was not a sale in the ordinary course of his business as a mercantile agent, within that sub-section; & further, because debts. had failed to satisfy the proviso to that sub-section by showing that they had not at the time of the disposition notice that N. had not authority to sell the car; & debts. had no defence to the action.

(3) Under 1889 Act, s. 2 (1), proviso, the onus is on the person taking under the disposition of the goods made by the mercantile agent of proving that he acted in good faith & without notice of the agent's want of authority, & is not upon the person whose goods have been disposed of by the agent of proving the contrary. —*HEAP v. sr. — Purchase by salesman.]—

After a salesman, employed by a co. which sold motor cars at retail, had used one of its cars for demonstration purposes, he was induced by the president & manager of the company to buy the car. The co. when it purchased the car had been "financed" by an acceptance corpn. to which it gave as security a lien note & a chattel mtge. On an interpleader issue following the seizure of the car by the acceptance corpn. the salesman attacked the mtge. on the ground that it was not executed under the seal of the co. & in the alternative, claimed to be a bond fide purchaser without notice of the mtge. or lien agreement registered against the car. —Held: the mtge. was not invalidated by the lack of seal but the claimant was entitled to succeed on his alternative claim, under the principle embodied in sect. 3 of Factors Act, R. S. A., 1922.—RE INDUSTRIAL ACCEPTANCE CORPN., LTD.,

In 1917, an agreement was entered into between deft. & the general manager of the owners & a third person, whereby the latter became the tenant of the licensed premises & deft. was released from all obligations under the tenancy. The licence, however, was not transferred, & deft.'s name remained painted up over the doorway. During the continuance of the new tenancy liquor as well as food was sold on the premises. Pltfs., during this period, supplied fish, fruit & vegetables to the tenant. The accounts were not fully met, & pltfs., on discovering that deft. was the licensee, which discovery was made after the goods had been supplied, sought to make him liable for the price on the ground that the tenant was either the agent of deft. by operation of law, or that deft. was estopped from denying such agency:—Held: where two people agreed that one should illegally & improperly occupy a position which could only be lawfully occupied by the other, that did not necessarily make the person occupying the position the agent for all purposes of the person who ought to be occupying it; the tenant was not in fact deft.'s agent; & as between himself & pltfs., deft. was not estopped from setting up the true state of affairs, because, whatever misrepresentations were made, they did not reach pltfs. nor cause them to act to their detriment.—*MACFISHERIES, LTD. v. PART V. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 18.

8041. Agent—Implied authority from circumstances—Husband authorised to purchase stock for wife.—The fact that a husband was authorised to act, & has acted, as his wife's agent in the purchase of stock through brokers does not in itself justify the brokers in assuming that he is her agent to direct a sale of it; & even assuming that the rules of the stock exchange subject to which the order to purchase was placed confer on the husband authority to direct such sale, the brokers' responsibility to the wife for the proceeds of the sale is not discharged by payment to the husband unless they show that he had authority, either express or implied, to receive the money.—AIKMAN v. BURDICK BROTHERS, [1923] 4 D. L. R. 852; 3 W. W. R. 785; varying, [1923] 1 D. L. R. 1165; 31 B. C. 478.—CAN.

808 v. — Break in market.—Instructions by an owner of wheat to his agent to "sell" without more means "sell as soon as possible," unless there is something in the circumstances or the custom of a particular trade known to both parties to give the words a different meaning. Where instructions to sell, without stipulating any price, were given after the close of the market on May 3:—Held: the agent was justified in selling without further instructions at the opening of the market on May 4, though the market had broken by reason of the Grain Exchange having withdrawn option trading & the possibility of the Govt. fixing the price.—GRAHART v. QUAKER OATS Co., [1919] 3 W. W. R. 883.—CAN.

809 II. a. — Def.—Def. wired to S., a land agent: "Bed-rock, £13,350 net, £400 down, stock & furniture at valuation." S. replied, "Your wire says £400 down; suppose you mean £4,000, wire us giving authority to sell if we can get your net price." Def. then wired, "Four thousand down. Sell if you can get my net price." S. replied, "Have sold in accordance with your wire, freehold for £13,750, stock & furniture at valuation, showing you £13,350 net, £4,000 to be paid down, balance to be arranged on mtgs. by you. Possession as soon as license granted, not later than Aug. 30, £500 deposit paid." Held: S. had no authority to sell on the terms on which he did sell.—PRINGLE v. MOKAY, [1922] N. Z. L. R. 818.—N.Z.

815 III. a. — GRAHART v. QUAKER OATS Co. (1919), 43 D. L. R. 791.—CAN.

815 III. b. — *A land agent, whom pltf. had informed of his willingness to sell a property for £900, obtained an offer of £825 & telegraphed it to pltf., but through a mistake in transmission the message as delivered to pltf. mentioned £925 as the amount of offer. Pltf. telegraphed his acceptance without naming an amount. The offer having been withdrawn, the agent agreed to sell the property to def. for £825, & let him into possession. On the tender of the formal contract to pltf. for execution a month later he learned about the mistake in the telegram for the first time & refused to complete:—Held: the specific authority originally given to the agent did not authorise the sale of pltf.'s property for less than £900, & no land agent as such is held out as having a general authority on behalf of his client to sell on any terms or at any price.—SHORTAL v. BUCHANAN, [1920] N. & L. R. 103.—N.Z.*

815 v. — Pltf., an incorporated co., owning lots of land, appointed C. their general manager to supervise the sale of the lots. In the agreement between pltf. & C. it was provided that he had no authority to make any representation as to pltf.'s properties other than those contained in their printed matter, & that he should have authority to accept offers for the purchase of lots according to pltf.'s price-list. Pltf. employed G. to sell their lots. G., in Mar. 1914, telephoned to def. from pltf.'s office & induced def. to buy two of the lots, upon the express agreement that pltf. would resell the lots not later than Aug. 1914, at a profit of £100 on each lot; G. informed def. that he was authorised by C. to make this arrangement. C. was present when G. was telephoning, & heard what G. said; C. told G. that he should not have said that pltf. would resell the lots; but, according to the testimony of G., C. himself was not called as a witness. C. ratified the representation made in his name & ostensibly by his authority.—Held: C., as general manager, had ostensible authority to make or ratify the collateral agreement, & any secret restriction of his authority would not affect def., who relied upon his being the general manager.—CANADIAN GENERAL SECURITIES Co., LTD. v. GEORGE (1918), 43 O. L. R. 580; 13 O. W. N. 355; 14 O. W. N. 71; 43 D. L. R. 30.—CAN.

817 II. — Implied authority.—A broker who had purchased corn on margin for a customer:—Held: justified in selling on the customer failing to forward margin money when a slump occurred in the market-price, a general condition of the broker transacting such business being that he reserved the right to close transactions without further notice when margins were unsatisfactory, which condition the ct. inferred must have been known to the customer who had been for some time a "room trader" & dealer on a larger scale in the broker's office.—MALOOF v. BICKELL, [1920] 1 W. W. R. 407; 50 D. L. R. 590; 17 O. W. N. 394; 59 S. C. R. 429.—CAN.

817 III. — Authority to find purchaser.—On Jan. 30, 1920, def. handed to his brokers a letter in these terms: "I authorise you to procure a buyer of the above premises for Rs. 45,000 & on your sending same, I shall pay you as remuneration at 1 per cent. on the purchase-money. The same will be paid at the registration of the conveyance, otherwise not." The offer contained in the letter was accepted by pltf. & thereupon the fact of such acceptance was communicated on the same day to def.:—Held: the offer contained in the letter amounted only to an offer to be put into touch with intending buyers of the premises & it was in no sense an authority to the brokers to sell def.'s property or an offer on the part of the vendor to sell the premises to whoever might be brought in touch with the vendor by the brokers.—PURNA CHANDRA DUTT v. INDRA CHANDRA ROY (1921), 1 L. R. 49 Calo. 389.—IND.

821 I. — General authority—Sale in own name.—Held: position of pltf. being that of brokers, in selling in their own name they acted beyond the scope of their authority.—PATSON v. MCCALLUM, [1921] N. Z. L. R. 369.—N.Z.

834a. ———.]—A general authority to an agent to find a purchaser of a house does not authorise the agent to sign a contract binding on the vendor. There must, to justify such a signing, be a special & express authority to sign.—LEWCOCK v. BROMLEY (1920), 127 L. T. 116; 37 T. L. R. 48; 65 Sol. Jo. 75.

834b. ———.]—The mere employment of an estate agent by an owner to dispose of a house confers no authority to make a contract. The agent is solely employed to find some one to negotiate with the owner. But if the agent is definitely instructed to sell at a certain price, those instructions involve authority to make a binding contract & to sign an agreement.

But the authority is limited to signing an open contract & does not authorise the agent to sign a contract with special conditions, e.g. as to title with which it is no part of an estate agent's duty to deal.—KEEN v. MEAR, [1920] 2 Ch. 574; 89 L. J. Ch. 513; 124 L. T. 19.

836b. ———.]—Authority alleged to be limited to state price.]—Action for specific performance of a contract alleged to have been entered into by letters between plffs. & H. & R., estate agents, whom plffs. alleged were agents for the first deft. for the sale to plffs. of freehold premises. The defence was that the agents had a limited authority to state a price only. The premises had been offered for sale by auction by order of the mtgees. under particulars & conditions of sale referred to in the correspondence on Jan. 18. H. & R. inclosed plan & auction particulars to plffs. stating in their letter that their client would be willing to sell the freehold at £550. On Jan. 27, plffs. offered £400. On the 28th H. & R. submitted that offer to the first deft., & asked for her instructions. On Feb. 8, the first deft.'s husband communicated with H. & R. over the telephone, & on Feb. 10, they wrote to plffs. stating that their client would not accept £400, & that "we are now authorised to close with you if you will increase your offer to £450." Plffs., on Feb. 14, wrote to H. & R. referring to the letter of Feb. 10, & stating "we are prepared to accept your offer of this property agreeing to the price of £450. Kindly forward the contract in due course." On Feb. 17, H. & R. wrote informing the first deft. that, as instructed by her husband, they had offered the property to plffs. for £450, & that plffs. had agreed to buy. The second deft. was prepared to purchase the property from the mtgees. at a price more than £450 :—Held: the agents had authority to conclude the contract, & plffs. were entitled to judgment for specific performance of it.—*ALLEN & CO., LTD. v. 945a. ———.]—Pltfs., who were financially interested in goods to be shipped to B., employed defts., B. Bank, who, in turn, employed sub-agents to collect the proceeds. Pltfs. wrote to defts.: "We beg to hand you herewith the undermentioned bills for collection, subject to the deduction of commission & expenses & to the condition mentioned." That condition was: "Collections are undertaken at depositor's risk only on the understanding that no liability whatever attaches to the bank in connection therewith or with the storage and insurance of the relative goods." In the margin of the document under the heading "Instructions" was the following: "Documents to be surrendered against payment: if goods are not taken up, please do your best on our behalf to warehouse & insure them against fire." This document was received by the deft. bank, who acted upon it. Goods to which the bills related were destroyed by fire at the Customs House, B., when uninsured. Pltfs. alleged that their loss was due to negligence on the part of the deft. bank & (or) their sub-agents in omitting to insure the goods. It was contended for pltfs. that the clause providing that no liability should attach to deft. bank must be disregarded, as being repugnant to the contractual duty undertaken by the defts. to do their best to warehouse & insure the goods against fire. The action was brought by the C. P. Asscn. against B. Bank & the A.P. Co., their sub-agents:—Held: although in certain cases where the employment of a sub-agent was authorised the agent might be impliedly authorised to create privity of contract between the principal & the sub-agent, there was no general rule of English law that such authority should be implied when a sub-agency was authorised. In the present case no such authority was to be implied & the claim against the sub-agents failed.—CALICO PRINTERS' ASSOCN., LTD. v. BARCLAYS BANK (1931), 145 L. T. 51; 36 Com. Cas. 197, C. A.

- 1033a. — After issue of notice to abate—Before institution of proceedings.]—By a bye-law of the city council of W., which was the sanitary authority of W., it was provided that whenever the council was in vacation the mayor & the chairmen of the respective committees of the council might give such instructions as were requisite with respect to any matter of an urgent nature, provided that all such acts were in due course reported to the council. The council of W. held no meeting between July 26, 1917, & Oct. 18, 1917—the summer vacation, & the public health committee of the council did not sit between July 17, 1917, & Oct. 9, 1917. On July 17, 1917, the public health committee passed a resolution appointing its chairman, & in his absence the acting vice-chairman, to deal with all urgent matters on behalf of the committee during the summer vacation. This resolution was reported to the council & approved by them on July 26, 1917. About the middle of Sept. 1917, the medical officer of health, being satisfied that a nuisance existed upon certain premises in the district of the council & city of W., caused a written notice of the fact of its existence to be served on the owner of the premises under Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 3. As the nuisance was not abated, the matter was reported by the medical officer to the chairman of the public health committee, & the latter, considering that the matter was urgent, & acting under the authority conferred upon him by the resolution of the public health committee, which had been confirmed by the council, as before stated, directed that a notice should be served upon the owner of the premises requiring him to abate the nuisance in accordance with the provisions of sect. 4 of the Act. This notice, which was issued in due form, was served upon the owner on Sept. 25, 1917. This action of the chairman was reported to the public health committee at their first meeting after the summer vacation, on Oct. 9, 1917, & approved by them, & the matter was later on, on Oct. 18, 1917, reported to & approved by the council. As the nuisance still continued, proceedings were taken against the owner by the sanitary inspector, & on Dec. 5, 1917, an order was made for its abatement by the magistrate who heard the complaint. The owner thereupon applied for & was granted a rule nisi for certiorari to quash the order of the magistrate on the ground that the same was made without jurisdiction, the notice of Sept. 25, 1917, not having been given by the authority or direction of the council or of the public health committee, or after consideration by them in pursuance of Public Health London Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 4 (1):—Held: as the act of the duly authorised agent of the council, namely, the chairman of the public health committee, appointed to act in urgent matters during the vacation under the bye-law & in pursuance of the resolution of the committee subsequently ratified by the council, was reported to & approved & ratified by the council prior to the institution of proceedings against the owner of the premises, the ratification related back to the time of the doing of the act in question, namely, the serving of the notice of Sept. 25, 1917, & the magistrate had jurisdiction to make the order of Dec. 5, 1917.—*R. v. - 1238a. Duties of sole agent.—Pltf. co., who had the sole export agency for a certain brand of whisky in Australasia, made a contract with deft. co., whereby the latter became the sole agent in New South Wales for the sale of that whisky. By a clause in this contract, deft. co. agreed to devote the principal part of their energies, so far as Scotch whisky was concerned, by means of themselves, their travellers, & others, to pushing the sale of this whisky in bulk throughout New South Wales. They were, however, not precluded from selling proprietary brands of whisky in response to orders therefor, nor from disposing of their stocks of such whiskies. Pltf. co. became dissatisfied with the volume of orders received from deft. co., & sued them for breach of contract. It was also a term of the contract that pltf. co. should supply, inter alia, all corks for the bottling of the whisky, but, by a substituted agreement, deft. co. used a form of stopper which had a lead liner, & a quantity of whisky was thereby rendered unfit for sale. —Held: (1) deft. co. was under an obligation vigorously to promote the sale of the whisky exported by pltf. co., & to sell as much of that whisky as they could throughout the whole period of the contract, such obligation being subject to their rights under the contract to sell their existing stocks of whisky, & to supply proprietary brands in response to orders therefor. The obligation under the contract was not satisfied by inaction & merely not preferring other brands; (2) deft. co. had broken their contract, in that they had not made a steady effort to sell the whisky supplied by pltf. co., nor had they done their best to promote its sales in their tied & managed houses. Further, their travellers had solicited orders for other brands; (3) it was a breach of the contract to allow the exhibition of advertisements, in tied & managed houses, of competing proprietary brands; though they would be permitted to stock such brands, & to include them in their lists of brands stocked; (4) there was no implied warranty on the part of deft. co. that the stoppers were free from defect, but, from the relationship between the parties, who were both concerned with the reputation & success of this particular whisky, there was an obligation upon deft. co. to use reasonable care in the matter, & this they had not done.—DAVIS (B.), LTD. v. 1184 v. ———. ———. Goods not in accordance with order. ———. Defts. gave to pltf. a written order to ship one thousand two-gallon & two hundred & fifty three-gallon stoneware jars. Pltf. ordered jars from a manufacturer in England to be shipped in performance of this order. Two lots were shipped & delivered to defts. who paid for them. Delivery of the last lot, which comprised thirty-nine three-gallon & three hundred & forty-two two-gallon jars, was refused by defts. on the ground that there were twenty-three more of the three-gallon jars & twenty-five less of the two-gallon jars than had been ordered, & also that the mouths of a large number of the jars were not of the specified size. —Held: pltf. was under a duty to purchase goods for defts. of the description ordered, & his failure to do so amounted to a breach of duty. —BULLMAN v. They at once, however, tried to sell & after ten days did so. —Held: they were justified in selling at the price then obtainable & without receiving further instructions. —JACKSON v. In such a case the principal may recover either in tort or in contract, & it is no answer to his claim that he is also entitled to recover from the other party to the contract induced by his agent. —YOUNG v. TABBELL, [1918] N. Z. L. R. 924.—N.Z.

1243a. — Extent of liability.—Pltf. employed deft., a chartered accountant, to investigate the affairs of a co. in which he was interested. In a letter of instructions to deft. pltf. inserted libellous statements concerning two officials of the co. Deft. handed the letter to his partner, who negligently left it at the co.'s office. The manager found it, read it, & communicated its contents to the two persons defamed, each of whom sued pltf. for libel & obtained judgment against him for damages & costs. Pltf. then sought to recover from deft. the amount which he had paid for damages & costs in the libel actions as damages for breach of an implied duty to keep secret the letter of instructions:—Held: pltf.'s liability for damages in the libel actions did not result from deft.'s breach of duty, & deft. was liable for nominal damages only.—*WELD-BLUNDELL v. The entries in the books were falsely made by a fraudulent clerk, whose defalcations were not discovered, as they would have been if the entries in the books had been checked by reference to the pass-book:—Held: (1) the accountants were negligent; (2) they were liable in damages for the amount of the defalcations of each year which would have been discovered if the proper steps had been taken as to the pass-book.—*Fox & SON v. The owner of house property employed a firm of house agents to sell the property. These properties both belonged to another client of the agent's firm, who, in 1905, died insolvent, & heavily indebted to the firm. He had granted an ex facie absolute disposition of the tenement property in favour of the firm prior in date to the bond for £1,000, which loan was accordingly not validly secured; & the postponed bond for £200 was worthless, as the prior bond exhausted the value of the security subjects. None of these facts were communicated to the lender.—Held: while the agents were not guilty of negligence in investing the money as they did in 1903, in view of the fact that they were called upon to obtain a 5 per cent. investment, they were guilty of negligence upon the death of the borrower in 1905, in respect that, a conflict of interest having then arisen between them & the lender in connection with the £1,000 bond, they failed to inform their client of the position, failed to realise her investments, & failed to advise her to seek independent legal advice.—*WERNHAM v. 1260 i. Factor.—Where advances are made by a factor on the security of a world commodity, such as grain, consigned to him for sale, it is his duty to deal with the goods in such a way as to guard, not only himself, but the principal also, against loss. There is implied in every such transaction a right on the part of the factor to realise on his security whenever the exigency of the case demands it.—UNITED GRAIN GROWERS, LTD. v. MABEY, [1925] 1 D. L. R. 301; [1925] 1 W. W. R. 19.—CAN.

1260 ii. — —.—Where an elevator company advances money on the security of grain delivered to it in storage which it is authorised by the contract between it & the borrower to sell without notice at any time it deems itself unsecured, the co. is not, in the absence of an express agreement to that effect, restricted to resorting to the pledged grain to obtain repayment, but can sue on the implied promise to repay which is ordinarily incident to a loan; & moreover, the co. is not obliged to sell the grain & if it does sell it, cannot be held to have been negligent & therefore liable to the borrower merely because it did not sell at a time when it could have received a higher price than it did receive.—PATTERSON (N. M.) & Co., LTD. v. CARNDUFF, [1931] 3 W. W. R. 221.—CAN.

1262 ii. — Extent of duties.—If a local agent is entrusted by an absent owner with looking after & renting a furnished house, then, although he is not an insurer of the safety of the property, he must use reasonable care & diligence in its protection & preservation, & if he fails to do so he will be liable for the resulting loss. If furniture disappears or is damaged beyond reasonable wear & tear, he is prima facie liable to account for it. Evidence sufficient to excuse him from liability would in some instances be quite light, in others more burdensome, depending on such questions as the checking over or not of the articles of the furniture, the character of the tenants & the constituents of the tenant's family, the value & nature of the missing articles, etc.

When the owner claims damages against the agent for lost or damaged articles the question of liability may be directly involved in regard to each article, & that liability is a question for the judge, & in such case the value of any article or the damage done to it can be most conveniently determined by the judge when deciding the question of liability, rather than by a referee.—CARLILE v. NORTHERN TRUSTS Co., [1924] 2 W. W. R. 961.—CAN.

1262 iii. — —.—A house agent, employed to look after the renting of a furnished house, must keep a proper inventory of the furniture & check it over carefully with each incoming & outgoing tenant, & he must exercise care in seeing that tenants to whom he rents the house are the proper sort of persons to occupy it; but, in the absence of a special contract, the agent is not a guarantor of the rent, or bound to pay the taxes, or to notify the owner so as to prevent a sale of the house for non-payment thereof.—HYLAND v. COSTERTON (B. C.), [1927] 1 D. L. R. 1166; [1927] 1 W. W. R. 340.—CAN.

that they had performed their duty as agents to the owner when he had accepted the offer of the prospective purchaser subject to contract, they omitted to inform the owner of the offer of the tenant. Afterwards final contracts for the sale & purchase of the property were signed & exchanged by & between the owner & the prospective purchaser. The owner then brought an action against the agents for damages for breach of duty in not disclosing to him the offer of the tenant before the contracts were signed & exchanged. The agents counterclaimed for commission on the sale of the property:—Held: the obligation of the agents to the owner was not fully performed when he had accepted the offer subject to contract but continued until final contracts were exchanged; this obligation involved a duty to communicate to him the offer of the tenant; having committed a breach of this duty they were liable in an action for damages, & the measure of damages was the difference between the price named in the contracts & the price offered by the tenant; also in the circumstances the agents were entitled to their commission.

There may well be breaches of duty which do not go to the whole contract, & which would not prevent the agent from recovering his remuneration; & as in this case it is found that the agents acted in good faith, & as the transaction was completed & applt. has had the benefit of it, he must pay the commission (ATKIN, L.J.). — *KEPPEL v. 1263b. — Valuation.—Pltf., relying on a valuation of freehold property by defts., advanced money on mtge. to the owner of the property. The valuation was excessive, it having been made without the skill & care which defts. owed to pltf., & pltf. suffered loss owing to the default of the mtgor.:—Held: by the Ct. of Appeal, in an action by pltf. against defts. for negligence, pltf.'s damages were not limited to the difference between the amount of the valuation & the true value of the property at the time of the valuation, but he was entitled to recover the actual loss suffered by him as a result of his lending the money, including the difference between the sum advanced by him & that received by him when, having entered into possession of the property, he sold it, the amount of interest which the mtgor. had failed to pay, the cost of insuring the property & of maintaining it in repair while it was in pltf.'s possession, legal charges during that period, the expenses of abortive attempts to sell the property, estate agents' commission on the eventual sale of the property & legal charges in connection with the sale.—*BAXTER v. 1264 iii. — Advice as to values.—Pltf. employed defts. who were land agents, to dispose of certain land, & they induced him to exchange his property for certain other lands which were less in value than those of pltf. Pltf. was in humble circumstances & of little business experience:—Held: it was the duty of defts. to see that an inadequate consideration was not accepted for the disposal of pltf.'s property without advising him as to values. 1426a. Proceeds of sale of goods—Goods consigned by commission agents for principal—Right of agent to set off claims against consignors.—In 1917 ptlf. & F., merchants at Odessa in the Russian Ukraine, consigned large quantities of pigs' bristles to a Russian bank at Odessa, as commission agents, to send the goods to England for sale & remit the proceeds to the consignors. The bank, as principals, sent the goods to defts., as their agents, who knew that ptlf. & F. were the original consignors. Afterwards the revolution broke out in Russia, & in Dec. 1917, all private banks in Russia were abolished by decree of the Govt., & in 1918 their assets & liabilities were taken over by the People's Bank of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic. In 1920 the People's Bank was by further decree abolished & its assets & liabilities were transferred to the Central Budget & Accounts Administration of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic. One result of this legislation was that the head office of the Odessa bank in Petrograd was raided & its shares were confiscated, but the Odessa bank was allowed to carry on its business as usual until 1920, when it was closed by a local soviet. This permission was the result of the establishment of an independent republican Govt. over the Ukraine—the Ukrainian Soviet Govt., over which the Russian Soviet Govt. claimed neither a de facto nor de jure jurisdiction, & which was also recognised by foreign powers as an independent Govt. Later on a full federation was entered into between the Ukraine Republic & the Russian Soviet Republic & recognised as a de facto & recently, as a de jure Govt. by the Govt. of this country. During transit of the goods to England some of the goods respectively consigned by ptlf. & by F. became inextricably mixed, with the result that F. assigned all his rights in his consignment to ptlf., &

notice of the assignment was given to defts. Before the closing of the bank at Odessa the bank ceded all their rights in the bristles consigned to them to ptlf. & F. The bristles consigned to defts. were sold by them in 1920, & ptlf. demanded payment of the amount of the proceeds, less the amount of defts.' commission, but defts. refused payment, alleging (inter alia) that the goods belonged to the bank at Odessa & that defts. were entitled to set off against ptlf.'s claim a debt due to them from the People's Bank in Russia & the Russian Soviet Govt., & ptlf. in 1923 brought this action:—Held: (1) assuming that the bank at Odessa was an effective bank up to the time when the bank was closed, the bank's instructions to defts., followed by the transfer of the bank's rights to ptlf. & F. & the transfer of F.'s rights to ptlf., made it clear that the bank's title to the bristles had gone; (2) assuming that the bank was non-existent & that some other person or persons had given the instructions to sell, the sale by defts. was without the authority of the bank, & in that case the bank's title had gone. In either case ptlf. as a disclosed or undisclosed principal was entitled to the proceeds, less defts.' commission with interest from the date of the demand.—DORF v. NEUMANN, LUEBECK & Co. (1924), 40 T. L. R. 405.

C. employed pltfs., through their building department, to inspect the drains of the property & to make an estimate for putting them in order. As a result of the report C. claimed a reduction in the purchase-price. Subsequently after complaint by deft., pltfs. discovered that they had been acting in this way for both the potential vendor & purchaser, & by their sols., offered deft. to invite the purchaser to obtain an independent survey of the drains. Deft. did not accept the offer, but completed the sale at a reduction of the agreed price, the reduction being due to the work required to be done upon the drains. Pltfs. sued deft. for commission on the sale:—Held: (1) pltfs. had acted in good faith, & deft. had in fact suffered no damage, as C. would in any event have secured a report on the drains, & any competent person would have recommended an expenditure on the drains of more than the reduction in the purchase-price; (2) pltfs. constituted one person in law, however, many businesses they might carry on, & in acting as they did they committed a breach of their duty as agents of their principal, but as deft. with full knowledge of the breach of duty on the part of pltfs. had completed the contract at the reduced price, pltfs. were entitled to commission. - 1529a. — Unless full disclosure—Sufficiency of disclosure.]—Deft. bought shares in the B. Co. on the recommendation of T., who was in the office of E. & Co., stockbrokers. E. & Co. carried through the transaction & sent deft. two contract notes, on which were the words "bought of ourselves as principals," & no commission was charged. By arrangement deft. paid 25 per cent. of the price of the shares, the balance being carried over. E. & Co. subsequently became bkpt. & their trustee in bkpy. claimed the balance then due on the account from deft. — Held: E. & Co. had made a sufficiently full & accurate disclosure to deft. that they were selling as principals & deft. with full knowledge gave his assent to their position, & the trustee's claim succeeded — ELLIS & CO.'S TRUSTEE v. WATSHAM (1923), 155 L. T. Jo. 363.

- 1550a. — Broker.]—Applt. employed a broker to make speculative purchases of cotton for him, & became heavily indebted to him owing to the fall of prices in the cotton market. The broker, as he was entitled to do by the terms of his agency, closed the account by selling the cotton which he had bought for applt. He sold (inter alia) two lots of foreign cotton to different jobbers at the respective market prices of the day & immediately bought back from the same jobbers at the same prices equivalent amounts of cotton of the same description. The broker having assigned his property for the benefit of his creditors, resp. as trustee of the deed of assignment, sued applt. to enforce the broker's claim to be indemnified. The trial judge found that there was a real sale & a real purchase of the cottons in question, & the Ct. of Appeal accepted this finding:—Held: the simultaneous re-sale to the broker did not vitiate the sale by the broker & the account was effectually closed.—*CHRISTOFORIDES v. PART VIII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 10.

1530 i. — Remedies of principal—Principal may repudiate or adopt transaction.]—A principal who discovers that he has purchased his agent's own property may elect either to repudiate the contract or to affirm it. If he wishes it to stand & also claims the resulting profit, he must show that such profit arises from transactions completely covered by the prohibitive operation of the relationship between him & the agent.—ROBINSON v. RANDPONTIN, ETC., [1921] App. D. 168.—S. AF.

1535 ii. — — —.]—Pltf., a member of a syndicate, alleged inter alia that the trustee for & agent for the syndicate failed to disclose to its members that he was buying for its members property in which he had an interest & therefore he should account for the profits made by him. Rescission was not asked for & could not be granted because the property had been transferred by the syndicate to a co. — Held: even assuming that pltf. did not know the facts, relief could not be given her or the syndicate under the circumstances; the ct. would not fix a new price, the right of the syndicate was to be paid its loss on the whole transaction, & no proof of damages on the whole transaction was given.—*CAMERON v. PART VIII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 13.

1572 ii. — — —.]—In pursuance of an agreement debts obtained for pltf. a mtgce. of £100,000 at 5 per cent., but without pltf.'s knowledge entered into an agreement with the mtgce. by which, in consideration of a commission of 1 per cent. per annum to be paid to them by the mtgce. out of the interest payable by pltf., they agreed to guarantee the payment of principal & interest, & under that agreement debts were paid by the mtgce. £2,500, being £250 each half-year during the term of the mtgce. In an action by pltf. against debts. to recover the £2,500 as being a secret profit made by them while acting as his agent:—Held: pltf. was entitled to payment to him of the £2,500.—KEOGH v. DALGETY & CO. (1916), 22 C. L. R. 402.—AUS.

1572 v. — — —.]—A. authorised B., his agent, to sell property for a certain sum, A. agreeing to take a portion of the purchase price in cash & a mtgce. bond on the property for the balance. B. sold the property for the stipulated amount, but without the knowledge or consent of A. obtained & retained a commission from the purchaser for raising the bond:—Held: such commission was a secret profit, & B. in concealing it had acted dishonestly towards A.—LEVIN v. LEVY, [1917] T. P. D. 702.—S. AF.

— — —.]—Agent receiving present.]—Disclosure, after completion of a sale of land, by the vendor to certain directors of a purchasing co., who were concerned in the negotiations for the purchase, of his intention, afterwards carried out, to make a money present to the purchaser's manager & agent, who took the principal part in the negotiations, & assent thereto by such 1591a. ———.]—Deft. having agreed as agent for pltf. to give her particulars of any house suitable for purchase by her of which he might hear, bought a house for £2,000 through a nominee, who never had any interest in it, & subsequently entered into a purported contract to purchase it from him for £4,500. He then resold it to pltf. for £5,000, concealing from her the nature of the previous transactions, & representing that he had paid £4,500 for it:—Held: (1) though an agent might terminate the relationship of principal & agent by selling to his principal property which belonged to himself, it was his duty to act honestly & faithfully, & if he concealed material facts, obtaining an unfair advantage by fraud, the relationship was not terminated by such a contract; (2) accordingly, deft., having concealed the true nature of the transaction from pltf. by fraud, had acted in breach of his duty as agent & was liable to account to pltf. for all profits obtained by him without her knowledge & consent in his capacity as agent for her.—REGIER v. CAMPBELL-STUART, [1939] Ch. 766; [1939] 3 All E. R. 235; 108 L. J. Ch. 321; 161 L. T. 30; 55 T. L. R. 798; 83 Sol. Jo. 497.

1608a. ———.]—A hotel broker, who is acting as the vendor's agent for reward, is not entitled to enter into a second agency of the like kind on behalf of the purchaser, unless this arrangement is assented to with full knowledge by the original principal.—FULLWOOD v. HURLEY, [1928] 1 K. B. 498; 96 directors, is not effective to prevent rescission on the basis of secret profit to the agent if the vendor has, prior to the completion, secretly led the agent to expect that he would receive a substantial sum in the event of the sale being completed, & it is immaterial that the vendor's motive was to a large extent to recoup the agent for out-of-pocket expenses.—BENDIGO, ETC. CO. v. CUNNINGHAM, [1919] V. L. R. 387.—AUS.

ii. — Agent entering into contract with principal.—If an agent, without disclosing that he is the person dealing, himself enters into a contract with his principal, the latter on discovering the fact can have the transaction set aside, & it is immaterial whether there has been fraud or not, or whether the transaction is advantageous or otherwise to the principal.—ACHUTHA, NAIDU v. OAKLEY, BOWDEN & Co. (1923), 1 L. R. 45 Mad. 1005.—IND.

iii. — Agent for sale artificially inflating rates.—An agent for sale of goods cannot, while actually selling or making settlements on foot of such transactions, make any secret profit for himself, or for persons with whom he is associated, by artificially inflating the rates & then settling on the basis of those rates.—MATHRA DAS-JAGAN NATH v. JIWAN MAL-GIAN CHAND (1927), 1 L. R. 9 Lab. 7.—IND.

1581iii. ———.]—There are cases where an agent is entitled to retain profits, such as (1) where the connection between the agency & the profit is accidental, (2) where the transaction producing the profits is outside the scope of the agency & no conflict between duty & interest arises, (3) where the principal on account of his clear knowledge is deemed to waive his right to profits by his implied consent.—UNION GOVERNMENT v. CHAPPELL, [1918] C. P. D. 462.—S. AF.

1581iv. ———.]—Pltf. signed a written agreement by which he agreed to pay deft. 2½ per cent. on £2,500 if deft. sold property for that sum, & authorised deft. to keep any amount paid for the property in excess of that sum. Pltf. claimed a refund of the commission retained by the agent on the ground that he had secretly obtained a commission from the purchaser. The commission obtained by deft. from the purchaser, who had to pay cash to pltf., was for raising loans to enable her to pay the seller:—Held: as the commission obtained from the purchaser by deft. was not a commission on the price, but in respect of an entirely different transaction, his conduct was perfectly honest, & he had not forfeited his right to be paid a commission by pltf.—STANTON v. HUMPHREY, [1923] E. D. L. 419.—S. AF.

1594iii. ———.]—Held: pltf. could not recover any commission, because he was in a position where his interest was opposed to that of his principal, so that he had a temptation not to perform faithfully his duty, & failed to disclose the facts.—D'ARCY v. LAND (1920), 47 N. B. R. 203; 52 D. L. R. 660.—CAN.

1594 iv. ———.]—Pltf. sued to recover five Victory Bonds, or the proceeds thereof, handed by them to deft. H., a real-estate agent, in payment of the purchase-price of property owned jointly by the defts. Pltf. alleged that H., knowing that they were relying, because of inexperience, on his advice had induced them to give him the bonds for investment in the property without disclosing his interest therein, & the ground pressed on the ct. for their return was that a fiduciary relationship arising from agency existed between them & H. which put him under the burden of establishing the perfect fairness of the transaction, although it was nowhere distinctly alleged that they had employed him as their agent to buy the property:—Held: H. never was pltf.'s agent, & moreover, that he had fully disclosed his interest in the property before the sale. The dismissal of the action was, therefore, upheld.—HENDERSON v. HAMILTON, [1929] 1 D. L. R. 731; 1 W. W. R. 336; 38 Man. L. R. 67.—CAN.

1594 v. ———.]—The rule that where an agent for the sale of land is, without the knowledge of his principal, to receive a commission from the purchaser he cannot recover a commission from his principal applies to the case of an exchange of properties even though the two owners have listed them with the same agent.—*OLIVER v. vi. — Agent to raise money advancing sum himself.—Under a contract between a principal & a financial agent, by which the agent agreed to raise sums of money for the principal upon first & second mtgs., at stated rates of interest, of the principal's land, it is not illegal for the agent to find the money himself, unless there is a special stipulation to the contrary; the fact of the rates of interest being specified prevents a conflict of interest & duty in the agent.—D'ALBERTY v. GRAY, [1919] V. L. R. 588.—AUS.

vi. ———.]—The rules applicable to agents for the sale of land do not apply to a middleman employed merely to bring the vendor & purchaser together to enable them to make their own bargain; neither such a middleman nor the vendor is obliged to inform the purchaser of the payment by the vendor of a commission for introducing the purchaser.—*CLARK v. The upper part contained a clause by which the person signing was to pay "the regular commission"; & the lower part, signed by deft., contained the words: "I agree to pay a commission on $26,000 at 2½ per cent." on execution of the agreement to ptlf.:—Held: the agreement to pay ptlf. a commission did not satisfy *Stat. (2) Where an agent is employed to make inquiries about a particular business with a view to his employer's acquiring it, on the terms of his being paid by the purchaser a commission on the purchase price if business is transacted, & where the parties are brought together through his agency, he is entitled to commission, even where the actual purchase is ultimately effected through the intervention of another agent, provided that his services are really instrumental in bringing about the transaction.—*Bow's EMPORIUM LTD. v. permits the other to go to the trouble of finding a customer in the expectation of earning a commission, may well be a fact from which a promise to pay a commission may be inferred. A mere volunteer who acts as a go-between between buyer & seller & ultimately produces a sale cannot upon that fact alone found a legal claim for commission, nor can a third party, who acting for a possible purchaser, obtains from a property owner terms of sale or lease, & thus brings about a completed transaction upon those identical terms, legally claim a commission from the owner in the absence of some promise to pay a commission, either express or implied.—*CHAMBERLIN v. 1679 v. — Deposit on sale of land.—A licensed land agent, who does not hold from his principal a written authority to sell, & who, having effected a sale of his principal's land, has received from the purchaser, without his principal's knowledge, a deposit, is not entitled to retain thereout his commission.—*SMITH v. an. Amount of remuneration—Sale of mortgaged property—As if free from incumbrances.—Resp. placed a farm in the hands of applts. for sale or exchange & undertook, should a sale or exchange be effected by them, to pay commission at specified rates. Applts. found a purchaser for the property & an agreement was executed whereby resp. agreed to sell the property "as if free from incumbrances." Applts. sued for commission on the full value of resp.'s property unincumbered, but the magistrate held them entitled only to commission on the value of the equity of redemption.—Held: commission was payable on the gross price of the property sold.—*KNYVETT & PRATT v. so. Necessity for compliance with Land Agents Act, 1922.—Pltf., who was a land agent, received instructions from deft. to sell deft.'s property, & obtained a buyer at the price authorised, who paid pltf. a deposit of £200. On the same day that pltf. sold the property deft. sold it to another buyer & in effect repudiated the contract of sale effected by pltf. on his behalf. On the repudiation of the contract pltf. utilised the deposit of £200 received from his purchaser in the purchase of another property by the first buyer. Pltf. notwithstanding that he did not forward the deposit, with the signed contract to deft., less his commission, sued deft. for commission on the sale. Deft. applied for a nonsuit on the ground that pltf. had not complied with the provisions of Land Agents Act, 1922, s. 8, deducting his commission from the deposit, & handing the balance to deft. The magistrate having nonsuited pltf.—Held: sect. 8 deals with the application of trust money & if the deal was going through it was the duty of pltf. as agent to act in compliance with it, but if the deal was not going through, if there had been repudiation as the magistrate found sect. 8 had no application. Pltf. was accordingly entitled to payment of his commission.—BALLANTYNE v. CLOUTT (1927), 29 W. A. L. R. 93.—AUS.

(the purchaser) farms under said purchase agreement, & delivers your grain," & as to the remaining $780 "in the fall of 1931 under the same conditions of N. farming, & delivering the crop to you the same as 1930."* Pltf. had recommended N. to defts. as a man fit & competent to perform his contract with them, but in the fall of 1930 his position was such that he was unable to carry on & in consideration of a quit-claim deed, he was released from his contract. He had farmed the land in 1930, & delivered one-half share of the crop harvested by him to defts., but he did not summerfallow according to the terms of the contract, or pay the taxes or the interest on the unpaid purchase-money, & he negligently allowed 125 acres of standing crop to go to waste.—Held: the condition of pltf.'s right to the commission was, not merely the purchaser's delivery of defts.'s share of the grain grown on the land; but also his farming the land in accordance with the terms of his purchase agreement, & as he had not done so in 1930, pltf. was not entitled to the $500, nor to the additional $780.—*BROATCH v. 1702a. —. —.]—Deft. who was the owner of empty shop premises, authorised pltf. to attempt to let them on the terms that pltf. was to be paid a commission if he succeeded in doing so. Pltf. spoke on the telephone to A., whom he considered to be a possible tenant, but A. gave no definite answer, as he desired to consult his partner. W. overheard this telephone conversation & asked A. for information. A. merely mentioned that they were in the neighbourhood of Victoria, & added that, if his partner & himself did not want the premises, he would put W. in touch with them. W. thereupon, without communicating further with A., went to Victoria, &, finding deft.'s empty shop with a notice in the front window that it was to let, took it at a rent of £1,100 per annum.—Held: it was not pltf.'s action which was the causa causans of W. becoming the tenant of the shop. The deliberate withholding of the address of the premises by A. must be con-

1893 J-Deft. listed his property with pliffs., real estate agents, for sale at a fixed price & on named terms. Pliffs. mentioned the property to one F., who thereafter negotiated with deft. for the purchase of the property, & concealed from him the fact that pliffs. had sent him. Deft., then, without any knowledge of pliffs.' intervention, sold to F. on terms less advantageous to himself than those contemplated in the agreement between pliffs. & himself. There was nothing in the circumstances to put pliffs. upon inquiry as to whether pliffs. had sent to him. H. pressed C. to purchase, but after a time, as a matter of policy, let the matter drop, intending to approach C. again on a fitting occasion. In the meantime a member of S.'s staff indirectly approached C., who decided to purchase. — Held: H. had established a chain of causation between his offer to sell the rems., & was liable to effect the commission. — *HEALY v. 1702 3d ——. 1.—Pltf. as agent for the owner of certain property introduced it to A. The owner was asking $17 1/2. per week. Pltf. gave A. the key, on which was a label bearing only the name of the owner. A. told pltf. the property was unsuitable, & returned the key. About a fortnight later A., through seeing the owner's name on the label & consulting the telephone directory, discovered the owner's address, & met him to discuss the letting of the property, but did not tell him that she had seen pltf. After negotiations between A. & the owner extending for some time, the owner consented to let the property to, for twelve months at $13 1/2. per week. Held: pltf. was entitled to commission.—*STMONS v. After a delay of some weeks deft. & A. resumed negotiations, which led to a sale of the property to A. for $7,300. — Held: the relation of buyer & seller was really brought about by pfts., who were entitled to commission. — BIRTONELL v. The agent obtained a lease for three years, with an option of purchase at £1,682. st. —Commission payable on receipt of purchase-money—Payment by promissory notes.]—An agreement provided that commission was "to become due & payable when the purchase-money or any part thereof has been paid." —Held: defts. having accepted promissory notes in lieu of a cash payment, the promissory notes must be treated as a cash payment so far as ptff. was concerned. —CROSS v. WOOD (1921), 64 D. L. R. 105; 50 O. L. R. 15.—CAN.

sa. —Commission payable for services already rendered.]—When it has been definitely agreed to pay an agent commission for his services in negotiating a sale, & the payment was to be made for services already rendered & was not to be dependent upon the payment of the purchase price, the agent can recover the commission under the agreement, although the purchaser has failed to make any payment after the first one. —CARMICHAEL v. BOWERS (1922), 67 D. L. R. 515.—CAN.

sb. —Held: ptff.'s claim was not affected by changes made in the agreement between purchaser & defts. If defts. saw fit to vary the terms of the agreement & accept property in lieu of cash, that should not prevent ptff. from obtaining payment of his commission, which he earned when he procured a binding agreement for the sale of the property. —CRAWFORD v. IMPERIAL TRUST CO. OF CAN., [1929] 4 D. L. R. 913; 64 O. L. R. 433.—CAN.

1729 ill. —Sale of remainder of land.]—Ptff. employed deft. to sell a house & portion of the block of land on which it stood. Dft. found a purchaser & a contract of sale was signed under which ptff. gave the purchaser certain provisional rights over the unsold portion. Afterwards ptff. endeavoured to obtain from the purchaser a modification of the contract with regard to the rights over the unsold portion, & deft. did considerable work in trying to induce the purchaser to vary the contract in this respect. During the negotiations deft. repeatedly urged ptff. to sell the whole of the land. Negotiations having failed ptff. behind the back of deft. sold the remainder of the land to the original purchaser & the whole was included in a single transfer. —Held: deft. was not entitled to commission on the sale. —MCANDREW v. GRAY (1930), 30 S. R. N. S. W. 635.—AUS.

sw. Transaction similar — Further sale.]—A. in 1911 employed ptff. to sell a Crown lease, & an agreement was entered into which provided that if ptff. sold the lease for £25,000 he was to receive £5,000. In 1914 through the instrumentality of ptff. the lease was transferred to S. & on payment by S. of £5,000, ptff. received £1,000 as commission. In 1919 A. & S. sold the lease to T. for £14,000. Some years prior to this sale ptff. had submitted full particulars of the lease to T., who would not then buy. L., who was employed for that purpose by A. & S., had brought about the sale to T. Ptff. claimed commission in respect of the sale to T. —Held: ptff. was not entitled to commission. —DEWDNEY v. MATHESON, [1923] S. A. S. R. 105.—AUS.

sa. Agent to obtain money for project—Expansion & modification of proposal.]—Held: the agent was entitled to recover commission. —THOMAS v. GALE, [1927] 1 D. L. R. 593; S. C. R. 314; varying, [1925] 3 D. L. R. 757.—CAN.

sb. Agent to procure loan to third party—Loan raised by third party.]—Ptff. claimed a commission of 1 per cent. from deft. on the ground that the latter had requested him to raise a loan of £27,500, subsequently increased to £35,000, not on behalf of deft. but on behalf of one F. It was admitted that deft. had sold a certain property to F. for a sum of £45,000, £10,000 to be paid in cash & the balance to be secured by a bond over the property; through ptff.'s efforts the manager of a certain insurance co. was prepared to advance £27,500 to F. on a first mtge. over the property & that thereafter a sum of £35,000 was in fact advanced by the insurance co. upon that security, together with certain additional securities. Dft. denied that he had made the contract alleged with ptff. & stated that the real arrangement between them was that ptff. should raise a loan of £27,500 on behalf of deft. himself & not for F. & further, that if F. paid off the whole amount of the purchase price in cash ptff. was not entitled to any commission whatever, & that F. had personally raised on his own behalf a loan of £35,000 not on the security of the property alone but on additional securities belonging to him. At the trial ptff. applied for leave to amend his declaration so as to base his claim on a mandate to raise a loan of £27,000 only. The trial ct. refused to grant the amendment & held ptff. had earned commission on £35,000, the sum actually advanced to F., but as ptff. had declared himself satisfied with £275 awarded the latter amount. Dft. having appealed:—Held: commission of 1 per cent. was promised ptff. by deft. if the former was instrumental in obtaining a loan of £27,500 from the insurance co. to F.; further, in view of application for amendment, which should have been granted, it was unnecessary to consider whether ptff. was entitled to commission on the whole sum advanced, & as on the facts, it was clear that £27,500 would have been advanced on the property alone, the fact that £35,000 had been lent upon the property, together with additional security, did not debar ptff. from recovering commission on £27,500. —SAMUEL v. JACOBS & Co., [1928] App. D. 353.—S. AF.

so. Agent to sell—Third party entering into partnership with principal.]—A., an agent employed by P. to obtain a purchaser for a mill, introduced M. to P. The sale did not go through. P. eventually entered into a contract of partnership to work the mill, the partners being P., M. & O. —Held: as the transaction resulting from the agency differed substantially from that which A. had been employed to procure, he was not entitled to any remuneration. —ROBERT v. EDLEY, [1920] O. P. D. 19.—S. AF.

pi. —Held: —Ptffs. claimed for commission on sale of timber holdings of deft. co. The shareholders had passed a resolution authorising a sale at a fixed minimum price upon terms agreeable to the directors, & a letter from the co.'s managing director to ptffs. offered $35,000 commission should ptffs. make a sale at a certain named price, which price would net the co. such minimum price. A sale was made through other agents, not for a lump sum, but for a price based on board measurement to be paid for as the timber was taken, with an additional sum to be paid when the timber had been logged. —Held: the sale was not a sale within the contract. —ROBAY v. NIMPKISH LAKE LOGGING CO., LTD., & GARLAND, [1919] 2 W. W. R. 105.—CAN.

yi. —Held: —E. requested S., a servant of ptff., to obtain a buyer for his property. E. told S. that he wanted $850, & would pay commission. S. then asked E. if he would consider an offer. E. replied he wanted $800 clear. S. introduced K. to E., but the price offered was too low, & after various negotiations no sale took place. Six months later E. sold the property to K. for $800. —Held: as the buyer offered less than $800, ptff. was not entitled to commission. —ROBINSON v. EVES, [1917] S. A. L. R. 71.—AUS.

yl. —Held: —as the employment was a general one, the price mentioned being intended not to commission on the purchase by himself unless his principal has expressly agreed that such commission shall be payable.—HOCKER v. WALLER (1924), 29 Com. Cas. 296.

1751a. —.]—Pltfs., who were shipbrokers, negotiated on behalf of defts., the owners of a steamship, a charterparty of the steamship which was to be in force from Oct. 1920 for five years, & which contained a clause providing that the charterers should have the option of purchasing the steamship at any time between the signing of the charter & the completion of the charter period for £125,000. On the day when the charterparty was signed defts. signed & gave to pltfs. a commission note in these terms: "We hereby agree to pay you . . . 5 per cent. brokerage on hire. . . . Should the option of purchase contained in the charter be availed of, the brokerage on purchase to be 3½ per cent. . . ." The charterparty was acted upon until June, 1921, when deft. sold the steamship to the charterers for £65,000. Pltfs. brought an action against defts., claiming (inter alia) 3½ per cent. commission on £65,000, the price paid by the charterers for the steamship, &, in the alternative, a quantum meruit for their alleged services in effecting the same:—Held: (1) the former of these claims failed, the option of purchase mentioned in the commission note never having been exercised, & the sale effected being a sale at a different price from that upon which alone the brokerage of 3½ per cent. was to become payable; (2) the latter claim also failed inasmuch as the parties having reduced their bargain into writing in the commission note, there was no scope for the operation of the principle of quantum meruit.—HOWARD-HOULDER & PARTNERS, LTD. v. MANX ISLES S.S. Co., [1923] 1 K. B. 110; 92 L. J. K. B. 233; 128 L. T. 347; 38 T. L. R. 757; 66 Sol. Jo. 682; 16 Asp. M. L. O. 95; 28 Com. Cas. 15.

Later pltf. told deft. that he was not going on as a principal, & in Dec. 1933, deft.'s solrs. wrote to pltf.: "Our client instructs us to say that if S. or the people he represents purchase this property at the price of £25,000 he will be quite willing to pay you the usual scale commission." The property was not sold, but in Oct. 1934, a building lease for 99 years was entered into between deft. & a co. represented by S. at a ground rent of £1,250 per annum, which was worth twenty to twenty-three years' purchase, namely, £25,000 to £28,750. Pltf. brought an action in which he claimed scale commission from deft.:—Held: as there had been no general employment of pltf., nor had deft. promised to pay pltf. something for any purchaser he might introduce, pltf., who had done no more than bring deft. & S. together, was not entitled to recover.—*MOTE v. 1755a. —. —.]—Pltfs., who were estate agents, were instructed by defts. to find a purchaser for certain property "subject to contract." Pltfs. later wrote to defts. in these terms: "With reference to our conversation . . . we confirm your acceptance of the offer made by . . . Major H., to purchase the freehold of this property subject to contract. . . . We take this opportunity of confirming that in the event of the sale materialising we shall look to you for payment of the usual scale commission." Defts. replied as follows: "We have to acknowledge receipt of your letter . . . & confirm our telephone conversation with you . . . to accept the offer . . . for this property, subject to contract. . . . We also confirm that, in the event of this sale being satisfactorily completed, we shall pay you the usual scale of commission." An engrossment of the contract was signed by Major H., but defts. then refused to proceed, whereupon pltfs. claimed commission or, alternatively, damages for breach of an implied term that defts. would do nothing to prevent pltfs. earning their commission. It was found as a fact that Major H. was ready & willing to buy the property.—Held: although in an agreement "subject to contract," the matter, as between vendor & purchaser, must be deemed to remain in negotiation until contracts are exchanged, there must, as between pltfs. & defts., be implied a term that if the purchaser introduced by pltfs. was ready & able to complete the contract, defts. would not by refusing to complete prevent pltfs. from earning their commission, & as defts. had without just excuse refused to complete, they were liable to pltfs. in damages, the proper measure of which in the circumstances was the amount of commission pltfs. would have earned had the transaction been completed.—*TROLLOPE (GEORGE) & SONS v. 1755b. —. —.]—Pltfs., who were estate agents, were instructed by deft. to find a purchaser for certain property belonging to him, part of which he informed them was let to a tenant at £180 per annum. Pltfs. found an intending purchaser "subject to contract," but after negotiations had proceeded for some time deft. informed pltfs. that although the lease of the part of the premises referred to stated the rent to be £180, he had verbally allowed the tenant to pay £145 only, & would decline to go back on this arrangement. On becoming aware of this the intending purchasers declined to proceed unless the purchase-price was reduced, & as this was not agreed to by deft. the transaction went off. On a claim by pltfs. to recover commission or damages for breach of contract the county ct. judge gave judgment in their favour for the full amount they would have earned as commission if the transaction had gone through. On appeal:—Held: before an award of damages could be made equal to the commission pltfs. would have earned had the transaction gone through, it must be found as a fact that but for the action of deft. a binding contract with the purchaser would have been entered into; on the facts of this case this could not be said inasmuch as, except as to the price, none of the terms had been agreed; & therefore there must be a new trial to ascertain what damage pltfs. had actually suffered by being deprived of the chance of earning their commission.—*TROLLOPE (GEORGE) & SONS v. 1755c. —. —.]—Deft. verbally agreed to employ pltf., an estate agent, to sell certain property. On July 14, 1935, pltf. obtained an offer from W. & Co. to purchase the property & he communicated this offer to deft., who accepted it by letter on July 6, 1935, subject to a contract being signed & a deposit being paid within "say 10 days." W. & Co. wrote on July 18, 1935, expressing willingness to pay a deposit, but only upon the contract being signed. No deposit was paid & on July 30, 1935, deft. repudiated the contract. In an action for commission alleged to be payable took an undue advantage of his principal in representing an improvident transaction to be a very desirable one, which he should enter into in substitution for an exchange which had fallen through. The principal having repudiated the second transaction, the ct. refused to allow the agent the commission he would have obtained thereunder had it been completed, but allowed him commission on a quantum meruit based on the amount of commission contemplated by the first transaction.—*BURNS v. on the introduction of a willing purchaser:—Held: (1) on the evidence the condition as to the payment of a deposit within ten days had not been waived by deft.; (2) deft. was entitled to repudiate the sale upon the failure of the intended purchaser to pay the deposit within 10 days; (3) if the condition had been waived pltf.'s claim would have succeeded on the principle that where an agreement is "subject to contract" an agent is entitled to damages in lieu of commission in the event of non-completion of the contract due to default on the part of the vendor.—*MUSSON v. 1755d. —.]—An agent for the sale of 3 shops in course of erection by builders secured an agreement for the purchase of the same upon certain terms agreed to by the builders who were in fact the vendors. When the agreement was mentioned to the solr. for the persons financing the builders, he refused to allow the sale to go on, upon the ground that it was completely one-sided & too advantageous to the buyer. The builders then refused to go on with the sale & the agent sued for his commission:—Held: the fact that upon further consideration the bargain is far too favourable for the purchaser is not a just excuse for refusing to proceed with the sale, & the agents were entitled to damages for the loss of the opportunity of earning their commission, & such damages ought to be assessed at half the amount of the commission.—*BAMPTON (RONALD) & PARTNERS v. The condition of his agreement with deft. co. was: "in the event of our making the purchase." The negotiations were continued up to the day for completion, when the purchase was not completed by reason of the purchasers requiring certain further arrangements which the vendor was held entitled to refuse to consider:—Held: (1) there was an implied term in the agreement with the agent that the purchasers would not by their wilful default prevent him from earning the commission, & the purchasers had made such wilful default; (2) the measure of damages was the full amount of the commission, as the agreement to purchase was complete in every respect, & was not the subject of any further negotiation or inquiry into title.—*KAHN v. A tenant was proposed, who, though otherwise suitable, was only willing to pay the rent in arrear. After negotiations, this tenant was accepted by deft., but he then changed his mind & refused to accept her. On an action being brought by pltf. to recover damages for being prevented from earning their commission, it was contended by deft. that there had been no consideration by pltf. for any variation of the contract:—Held: when once deft. had agreed to accept the proposed tenant, the rent to be payable in arrear, pltf. had fulfilled their promise, & were entitled to their commission. The mutual promises were the consideration for the variation of the contract.—HARRODS, LTD. v. GENEEN, [1938] 4 All E. R. 493; 55 T. L. R. 139; 82 Sol. Jo. 1009, C. A.

1755g. —.]—Deft. cos. wished to dispose of certain property, & agreed to pay pltf. a commission on the completion of the sale to any purchaser whom he could introduce. He did in fact introduce a purchaser who was prepared to pay the price required by defts. Internal dissensions over the proposed sale arose among the directors of deft. cos., & as a result of these dissensions, if the sale had been proceeded with, the directors might have been charged with ultra vires acts, or, at least, with breaches of their fiduciary duty. In these circumstances, defts. refused to proceed with the sale, & thereupon pltf. claimed damages against defts. for having, as he contended, broken an implied term in the agreement between them that they would do nothing to prevent him from earning the agreed commission:—Held: in view of the state of internal dissension & of the charges which might have been made against the directors, defts. were justified in refusing to complete the sale.—*COOPER v. 1755h. —.]—Deft. had for some time been in negotiation for the sale of his property to a prospective purchaser, when he received another offer through pltf. Pltf. were informed of the earlier negotiations, but were told that, although the price had been agreed, no contracts had been exchanged, & that deft. was free to accept their offer, which was accordingly accepted on June 17, 1938, "subject to contract." On the same day, deft.'s solrs. wrote terminating the previous negotiations, & also on the same day sent a draft contract to the solrs. for pltf.' client. On June 27, deft.'s solrs. wrote pointing out that they had not received the approval of the draft contract, & that there were "other persons in the market making inquiries about the property." The solrs. of pltf.' client replied on June 29 that they were awaiting the result of certain searches, & also put several questions to deft.'s solrs. The latter on the same date wrote a letter stating that, owing to continued delay in settling the terms of the contract, their client had decided to sell the property elsewhere. On the following day, the purchaser's solrs. returned the draft contract approved. Meanwhile, on June 27, the first prospective purchaser had written to deft.'s solrs. re-opening negotiations, & the property was ultimately sold to him for the price which pltf.' client had agreed to pay:—Held: there was an implied term in the agreement between pltf. & deft. that deft. would not by his wilful default prevent pltf. from earning their commission. There had been no delay in the approval of the draft contract, & deft. had ultimately obtained only the price offered by pltf.' client, so there could not be a

"just excuse" for deft.'s action, the real purpose of which was to avoid the payment of two commissions. There had, therefore, been wilful default, & plffs. were entitled to damages.—WAY & WALLER, LTD. v. VERRALL, [1939] 3 All E. R. 533; 161 L. T. 86; 83 Sol. Jo. 675.

The charterparty provided for payment of a commission of 2½ per cent. on the hire paid & earned under the charterparty & on any continuation thereof. In an action by the brokers to recover commission for the remainder of the charter period:—Held: it was not an implied term of the contract that the ship-owners should not agree to put an end to the charterparty by the sale of the ship to the charterers, & the action failed.—*FRENCH (L.) & Co. v. Any amount over & above this figure to be paid to you as commission on the sale." Plff. found a purchaser who entered into a contract to purchase for £2,750. The bargain went off, however, owing to the purchaser's insistence on the removal of some restrictive covenants, which deft. was unable to effect:—Held: plff. having found a purchaser, & having brought about a contract for sale at a price of £2,750, was entitled to the sum of £150 by way of commission, & the subsequent failure of the transaction, through no default on his part, did not deprive him of his right to recover that amount from deft.—*FRACOCK v. When the time for taking delivery of the lambs arrived, plffs. refused to advance the price to the level of that of competing buyers & deft. was unable to procure the lambs which he had agreed for:—Held: plffs. had defaulted & were estopped from saying that deft. did not complete his contract.—*NEW ENGLAND DRESSED MEAT & WOOL CO. v. sl. Principal not negotiating in good faith.]—Where under an agreement to pay an agent commission on a sale of real estate, the agent is to be entitled to the commission only when the principal concludes a sale to a purchaser found by the agent, the law implies an agreement by the principal to negotiate in good faith with the purchaser proposed & to demand only such terms as, considering all the circumstances, might be conceivably demanded in perfect good faith. Where the principal does not negotiate in good faith & the sale is thereby prevented, the agent is entitled to damages.—McINTYRE & Co. v. LAW, [1918] 2 W. W. R. 359; 13 Alta. L. R. 273; 40 D. L. Subsequently the owners & the charterers entered into a contract of sale, which contained a clause cancelling the charter & so cancelling the clause therein providing for the commission:—Held: plffs. were entitled to the amount of commission which would have been payable if the charterparty had not been cancelled, but, especially having regard to the fact that the action was brought before the period of hiring under the charterparty had expired, subject to a fair deduction in view of the risk of the hire

Defts. found a purchaser R., who paid a deposit to defts. as agents for pltf., & entered into a binding contract with pltf. to purchase the business. For reasons, of which no evidence was given by defts., R. did not complete. Pltf. thereupon claimed the above deposit from defts. Defts. admitted the claim, but counterclaimed a larger sum as commission.—Held: defts., to be entitled to commission, were bound to introduce a purchaser ready, willing & able to complete; the onus of showing that R. was such a purchaser lay on them, & they had failed to discharge that onus, & were consequently not entitled to commission.—*MARTIN v. They paid this $300 to deft., who paid pltf. $150, retaining the balance, $150, as his commission on the whole purchase price. 1780 ix. — Agreement to pay commission on work done.]—Pltf., who was employed by deft. to sell a station property & to find a lease for another, found A., who was ready & willing to purchase the one & to lease the other, & with him deft. entered into a contract. Subsequently the contract having fallen through, pltf. was employed by deft. to raise money for him which it was hoped would enable the purchase & lease by A. to be carried through, & a written agreement was entered into between pltf. & deft., by which it was provided that in the event of the completion of the sale & lease deft. should pay to pltf. a certain sum "representing commission due to" pltf. "on these transactions." The sale & leasing were never completed. In an action to recover the sum mentioned in the agreement, the trial judge found that when the agreement was entered into pltf. had a right to recover a reasonable sum for commission in respect of the work he had then done, & that the contract did not deprive him of that right.—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover a sum made up of 1 per cent. of the purchase-money & 5 per cent. of a year's rent.—FRY v. BYRNE (1917), 23 C. L. R. 589.—AUS.

advertised the property for sale, & plffs. had sent him a "particular form" which was in blank, except the words: "I hereby instruct you to sell my business premises as per particulars above, which I declare to be correct, & agree to pay you a commission 5 per cent. on the total price paid by the purchaser & appoint you agents," which, as plffs. alleged, they had inserted on the form before sending it to deft. On July 8, 1928, deft. filled in the form & returned it to plffs., but he subsequently denied that the above words were on the form when he signed it. A firm of G. & Co., estate agents, believing that they had secured a likely customer for the property, communicated with plffs. & sent their representative, P., to them, & plffs. introduced P. to deft. Deft. alleged that P. had been introduced to him as a purchaser, but plffs. contended that he had been introduced to deft. as another agent who would be likely to find a purchaser. Ultimately P. found a purchaser in one T., who agreed to pay $4,000 for deft.'s property. In the "particulars form" deft. had stated: "Lowest price for goodwill, fixtures, & fittings, $4,500," but he eventually accepted $4,000. Meanwhile plffs. & G. & Co. had agreed to share the commission. Deft. subsequently paid commission amounting to $107 10s. to G. & Co. As this amount was $92 10s short of £200, the 5 per cent. commission on $4,000, plffs. on Nov. 2, 1928, issued a writ claiming the balance from deft. The completion of the purchase did not take place until Nov. 15, 1928, & deft. contended (inter alia) that he was not liable to pay commission until he had received the purchase price. The jury found (a) that the words in relation to the 5 per cent. commission were in the particulars form of July 8, 1928, when deft. signed it, (b) that the property was sold to T. through the instrumentality of plffs., & (c) that G. & Co. were not acting as sub-agents for plffs.:—Held: (1) plffs. were not to be deprived of their commission by reason of the fact that the property was ultimately sold for $4,000 instead of the $4,500 asked by deft. in the particulars form; (2) the jury's findings that the words about 5 per cent. commissions were in the document when deft. signed it, the property was sold through the instrumentality of the plffs., & that G. & Co. were acting as sub-agents for plffs., could not be interfered with;

& (3) although plffs. had done all the work required to entitle them to their commission, they were not in a position to claim payment of their commission until the purchase was completed, & as the writ was issued thirteen days before the date of the actual completion of the purchase, it was issued too soon & the action failed.—*PRICE, DAVIES & Co. v. 1789 lv. —.—A writing was signed by deft. agreeing to pay pltf. $200 upon the "due completion of the exchange." An agreement for an exchange was obtained by pltf., but there was no "due completion of the exchange." —Held: as the special agreement made the commission payable upon an event which did not happen, no recovery as upon a quantum meruit could be had. —PRICE v. 1798 ii. —.]—Deft. employed pltf. as agent to sell land & equipment of cattle, horses, implements, etc., & furniture, at a price on a basis of $80 an acre with a certain cash payment. Pltf. found a purchaser who wanted the land alone, but could not make a cash payment. Deft. & the purchaser came to an agreement for sale on crop payments at $60 an acre, & signed an agreement prepared by pltf., which was crude & improvident but one from which the rights of the parties could be defined. Subsequently a more elaborate agreement was drawn by deft.'s solr., which because of certain onerous additions therein for the protection of deft., the purchaser refused to sign, whereupon the transaction was broken off.

Held: there was in effect a sale of which pltf. was the causa causans, & he was entitled to payment for his services, on a quantum meruit basis.—

ad. Commission payable out of purchase money. Total purchase money paid into bank—Disclaimed by seller of interest in sum agreed to be paid to agent.)

—An agent for the sale of land was authorized to ask a price which would give him a certain amount for his own benefit. The buyer paid the total purchase price into a bank to be paid over to the seller, & the latter disclaimed any interest in the amount which he had agreed to let the agent have. The buyer then claimed that amount as his:—Held: the money belonged to the agent.—DEVALL v. GORMAN, CLANCEY & GRINDLEY, LTD., [1918] 3 W. W. R. 221; 42 D. L. R. 573.—CAN.

al. — Purchase-money payable in instalments.] — Failure to keep up instalments.] — An agreement between vendors of land and their agents stated that, whereas the agents had procured purchasers for certain parcels of the vendor's land, the vendor agrees to pay the agents a commission on the specific amount of the instalments, said instalments of principal & interest to be made out of, & to be a certain percentage of, the moneys to be collected annually from the purchasers. No provision was made as to what was to happen if the purchasers should default in their payments before the agents had received the full amount of their commission. This contingency occurred, owing to the fact that the purchasers, who abandoned their contract, were financially worthless: — Held: In the absence of a provision providing for said contingency, the agents were entitled to recover the full commission agreed upon. — WESTERN COLONIZERS, LTD. v. written listing to plaintiff, a real-estate agent, for the sale of his farm at a certain price, the terms to be a certain cash payment & the balance on half-crop payments. The commission was stated to be "five per cent. on all sales." Plaintiff, being unable to find a purchaser willing to make the cash payment, then introduced a father-in-law to whom defendant agreed to sell the farm for a certain price to be paid by half-crop payments. The principal & interest part of a half-share of the crop. Defendant then agreed in writing to pay the plaintiff a commission of a certain amount payable partly in cash within two weeks, "the balance by paying 25 per cent. of all money paid by said purchaser on principal as soon as the same are received." Defendant made the cash payment to plaintiff, & also other payments which amounted to 25 per cent. of all he ever received from the purchasers on principal. The purchasers being unable to meet their obligations, defendant took proceedings against them & the land reverted to him, nothing having been paid by the purchasers on the principal within the preceding three years. Plaintiff then sued for the balance due him on the basis of a 5 per cent. commission:—Held: the meaning of the second agreement was that it was a condition precedent to defendant's liability to pay any commission, over & above the cash payment, that instalments of capital should first be paid by the purchasers. —LEVINTSKY v. B. & C. assumed to make a sale at a purchase price showing a large nominal profit, which purchase price was to be paid by crop payments. During the period of the agency deft. negotiated personally & quite apart from plffs. with a purchaser who had never had any communication with plffs. & whom plffs. did not know. The result of the negotiations was that the property was sold to this purchaser. Plffs. thereupon claimed from deft. damages for breach of contract on the ground that, in selling the property direct to the purchaser, he had acted in breach of his contract with them & had thereby deprived them of their commission*:—Held: (1) plffs. were not 1841 vi. —.—Secret agreement to pool commissions.—On a proposed exchange of properties, if the agents, unknown to either of the principals, agree to pool their respective commissions & to divide equally, so that under such pooling agreement one agent receives more than the commission payable by his principal, that agent cannot recover any commission from his principal, as such an agreement gave him an interest adverse to the interest of his principal.—*DALY v. 1841 vii. —.—Agent acting for both parties—Rules of Real Estate Exchange.—Where the owner of property listed with a real estate agent for sale exchanged the property with the assistance of the agent for other property listed, to the knowledge of the owner, with the agent for exchange, but had not agreed to pay him a commission on the exchange & had not been informed by him that he still intended to act as her agent & to charge her a commission:—Held: (1) she was not liable for commission; (2) a rule of a Real Estate Exchange to which the agent belonged, that an agent who acted for both parties in an exchange could collect from each one-half the usual commission on a sale, did not legally entitle the agent to recover such half from her.—HACKNEY v. LYNE, [1925] 4 D. L. R. 361; [1925] 3 W. W. R. 614.—CAN.

1841 viii. —.——If a vendor with full knowledge of the facts agrees to pay commission to a purchaser's agent, he will be bound by his contract, but the onus is on the agent to show clearly that the vendor knew that he was acting in a dual capacity & assented to that state of affairs.—MOLLER v. FOMER (1927), 27 S. B. N. S. W. 69; 44 N. S. W. W. N. 42.—AUS.

1848a. —[.]—Pltf. was employed by deft., a music seller, to find a purchaser of the lease of deft.'s business premises, which were held under a covenant against carrying on any other business. Several tailors expressed to deft. their willingness to buy the lease for $2,500, but deft., believing that the landlords would not consent to the carrying on of a tailoring business, did not approach the landlords. Pltf., however, having found a tailoring co. who wanted to purchase the lease, received an assurance from the landlords that they would consent to a tailoring business, & he, by concealing this fact from deft., induced him to agree to sell the lease to the tailoring co. for $2,250 in ignorance of the fact that the proposed purchasers carried on a tailoring business. In an action for commission for finding a purchaser:—Held: as pltf. had taken advantage of the false position to persuade deft. to agree to take a lower price than deft. could have got elsewhere, the action failed.—HEATH v. PARKINSON (1926), 136 L. T. 128; 42 T. L. R. 693; 70 Sol. Jo. 798.

1852a. —[.]—Pltfs., a firm of mining engineers, were employed by defts. to negotiate the purchase of mining properties. Defts. were willing to give $9,000 for the properties, & agreed with pltfs. that if they made a bargain for less than $9,000, the difference between the $9,000 & the lesser sum could be taken by pltfs. as remuneration. Before the purchase was effected, pltfs. had arranged with the vendors to take commission from them on the sale:—Held: pltfs. had committed a breach of duty as agents for defts. & were not entitled to any remuneration from defts.

1872a. Promise to indemnify vendor of business to company—Vendor retained as agent for limited period—Assessment of vendor to super-tax on profits made within period.—Pltf., who was the owner of a stationery business, sold it in Aug. 1919, to defts., a limited co. One of the terms on which the business was sold was that as from Dec. 31, 1918, until Sept. 15, 1919, pltf. should be deemed to have been carrying on the business on account of & for the benefit of the purchasers, & that pltf. should account & be entitled to be indemnified accordingly. For his services until the date of completion pltf. was to be paid a fixed sum monthly. Pltf. was assessed for super-tax on the profits of the business from Apr. 6, 1919, to Aug. 22, 1919. He paid the amount demanded & claimed to recover an indemnity from defts.:—Held: pltf., as agent of defts., was entitled to be indemnified by them in respect of the amount of super-tax paid by him, although defts. as a limited co. would not be liable to pay super-tax.—ADAMS v. MORGAN & CO., [1924] 1 K. B. 751; 93 L. J. K. B. 382; 130 L. T. 792; 40 T. L. R. 70; 68 Sol. Jo. 348, C. A.

1850 VII. —[.]—Agent to sell acting for other principals—Breach of contract.—A contract, entered into in Feb. 1914, between a firm & a commission agent, whereby the latter was appointed agent for the sale of certain cotton goods dealt in by the firm, contained a clause prohibiting the agent from selling such goods supplied by others than his principals. From July 10, 1916, onwards the agent regularly sold goods of that class on behalf of another firm, & he also bought & sold such goods on his own account:—Held: the agent was not entitled to an accounting for the period subsequent to July 10, 1916, as he was then in material breach of his contract, but he was entitled to an accounting for the period prior to that date during which he had duly obeyed the contract.—*GRAHAM & CO. v. 1850 VIII. —[.]—Inducing principal to sell at undervalue.—Where an owner of land requests an agent to find a purchaser at a price not less than a stated amount the agency is a general one & the agent stands in a fiduciary relation to his principal; & if he endeavours to get the latter to sell at a price less than that which he knows the purchaser found by him is willing to pay he is acting in bad faith & therefore, disentitles himself to a commission even though the sale is finally made at the full price which said purchaser was willing to pay.—LAFFRENIERE v. BOUFFARD (Sask.), [1929] 4 D. L. R. 183; 2 W. W. R. 602.—CAN.

1852 VII. —[.]—Where an agent acts improperly & unfaithfully in the performance of his duties towards his principal, he forfeits any remuneration or commission to which he would otherwise have been entitled if his improper or unfaithful conduct is connected with the duty he had to perform. The mere fact of an agent receiving & retaining a secret profit or commission arising out of & in connection with the performance of his duty constitutes unfaithfulness & dishonesty, & disentitles him to any remuneration or commission.—LEVIN v. LEVY, [1917] T. P. D. 702.—S. A. F.

1852 VIII. —[.]—Where an agent effects a sale by way of exchange, he cannot recover the commission his principal has agreed to pay if he has failed to disclose to his principal that he is also acting as agent for & is to be remunerated by the other party in the same transaction, notwithstanding that the non-disclosure was without fraudulent intent.—*BARNETT (C. a). Agent selling at less than listed price.—An agent for the sale of goods is not entitled to a commission for introducing a purchaser where the goods are sold at a reduction from the listed price greater than the commission, & the agency contract provides that if any goods are sold for less than the current price list by the agent, the acceptance of such sale shall not entitle the agent to the commissions set forth, but such reduction in price shall be deducted from the agent's commission.—LAW & MACLEAN v. SAWYER MASSEY CO., [1918] 1 W. W. R. 727; 13 Alta. L. R. 126; 38 D. L. R. 333.—CAN.

1947a. —.]—By a contract in writing deft. appointed pltf. to be sole agents for the United Kingdom, with certain exceptions, for a period of three years. Pltf. were to be paid a commission at the rate of 22 per cent. on all goods sold throughout the United Kingdom, with the exceptions above referred to, whether the goods were sold through the instrumentality of pltf. or not, & deft. agreed with pltf. that he would keep them fully supplied with samples, & would execute all orders with due diligence, & would not, directly or indirectly, canvass orders or in any manner approach or solicit any of the customers, or potential customers, of pltf. in respect of the sales of his goods. Before the expiry of the three years deft. broke these undertakings & then wrote to pltf. cancelling the agreement:—Held: as it was a necessary implication from the terms of the contract that pltf. would not decline reasonably to introduce customers, the agreement was not void for lack of mutuality, & although the mere appointment of an agent on commission for a term of years does not carry with it the necessary implication that the business shall be carried on for that term, yet, as deft. had undertaken certain obligations to facilitate the earning of the commission & had broken his undertakings, he could not, by a purported cancellation of the contract, limit his liability for damages to the period prior to agents, entered into a contract with defts. under which they undertook to purchase & ship goods "on account & risk" of defts., & E. & Co. shipped the goods under a c.i.f. contract on board a German ship. Owing to the outbreak of war during transit the goods did not arrive at their destination until long after due time. The goods arrived on Oct. 20, & on Oct. 22 defts. cleared & trucked the goods to Johannesburg & sent pltf. a consignment note which he received on Oct. 26. Immediately on receipt of the note pltf. telegraphed to defts. instructing them to keep the goods for sale in Durban. Defts. on the instructions of pltf. had the trucks stopped & returned to Durban. Defts. in order to obtain delivery of the goods paid the railway charges & upon pltf.'s refusal to reimburse them declined to hand the goods over to pltf.:—Held: defts. in railing the goods without awaiting special instructions had acted in accordance with their ordinary duty as forwarding agents, & in the absence of special instructions to the contrary defts. were justified in so railing the goods.—*PATEL v. 1946 I. Principal bound to enable agent to earn commission.—By agreement dated Aug. 17, 1929, R. appointed C. his sole agent to sell a certain publication in Australia on a commission basis. The agreement provided, inter alia, that the agency should commence on the date C. & R. arrived in Australia, & that it could be determined by either R. or C. on the happening of certain specified events. None of those events in fact happened. The parties came to Australia & the business of the agency was embarked upon. In Jan. 1930, R. went into partnership with S. in the business of booksellers. On Mar. 15, 1930, R. gave C. six months' notice of the termination of the agency agreement of Aug. 17, 1929. On Aug. 1, 1930, R. & S. entered into an agreement with a co. for the sale to it of the goodwill & assets of their business including the agency rights. After Aug. 1, 1930, R. did not accept any new orders from C. under the agreement of Aug. 17, 1929. C. did not know of the agreement of Aug. 1, 1930, until after Sept. 15, 1930, up to which date he regarded himself as still employed by R. He took orders for the co. & received commission from it. From Sept. 15, 1930, he was refused further employment by R. He thereupon sought to recover damages from R. for his wrongful determination of the agreement:—Held: a term could not be implied into the agency agreement that R. could terminate the agency at any time by ceasing to carry on his business, & C. was entitled to recover from R. such damages as he sustained by reason of the wrongful determination of the agreement.—*COUTLER v. 1951a. —.—.]—By an agreement made between pltf. & a limited co., which carried on business in Lancashire, in consideration of pltf. subscribing for £1,000 in shares of the co., & of introducing to the co. certain new classes of goods to be manufactured by them, the co. appointed him their sole agent in the United Kingdom, India, & the Colonies for the sale of those goods for the term of seven years, if the agent should so long live, & thereafter until the agreement should be determined by six months' notice on either side. The agent was to use his best endeavours to obtain orders for the co.'s goods at prices to be from time to time agreed upon, & all orders obtained by the agent were at once to be communicated to the co., who upon approving or rejecting the same were to inform the agent thereof & who were to carry out such orders as were accepted without undue delay; & the agent was not definitely to accept orders for the co., but only subject to confirmation & acceptance by the co., such confirmation or acceptance not to be unreasonably withheld. The co. were to pay the agent a commission upon the invoiced prices of all goods delivered by the co., & duly paid for by the respective purchasers. A few months afterwards the co. required fresh capital, & they applied to pltf. to assist them in finding it, telling him that otherwise they would have to close down. Pltf. tried to do so, but failed. The co. then asked pltf. to give up the agency for the Manchester district, telling him that he would have to stand down so far as that district was concerned, in which case they thought that they could find the necessary capital, but he refused. The co. thereupon being insolvent passed resolutions for voluntary winding up & ceased to do business through pltf. & eventually sold their business. In an action to recover damages for breach of the agreement to employ pltf. as their agent for the seven years:—Held: the agreement was to employ pltf. as agent for the seven years & a term could not be implied to the effect that the co. could terminate the agency at any time by ceasing to carry on their business; & the circumstances coupled with the voluntary winding up showed a repudiation by the co. of the agreement, & they were therefore liable in damages for the breach.—REIGATE v. PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.

—B.
1959 II. For this number read "1967 I."

1967 II. —.—.]—In a five years' agreement between a selling agent & a firm of merchants it was provided that, if at the end of the first three years the agent had not realised a certain turnover, the merchants should be entitled to terminate the agreement. The agreement further provided that the merchants undertook to supply goods to the agent, who was bound to buy exclusively from them. At the end of the three years the value of the goods sold & delivered by the agent failed to reach the stipulated turnover, & the merchants terminated the agreement. The value of the sales effected by the agent had in fact materially exceeded the stipulated figure, but the value of the goods actually delivered by him fell short of it, owing to the failure of the merchants to supply him with the full amount of goods ordered by him. The merchants, who were not manufacturers, were dependent on delivery to themselves by the manufacturers, & owing to war conditions, they were themselves unable to obtain the full supplies they required. They had, however, obtained sufficient goods to have implemented the agent's orders, but they preferred to distribute these goods ratably among all their agents & customers, the agent in question receiving his full share. In an action by the agent against the merchants concluding for damages for unjustifiable termination of the agreement:—Held: defts. were not entitled to terminate the agreement.—DOWLING v. METEVEN, Sons & Co., Ltd., [1921] 8 C. 948; 59 Sc. L. R. 7.—SCOT.

1978 III. —.—.]—Pltf. & defts., an English business house, entered into an agreement by correspondence by which pltf. was to be the selling agent of defts.' goods in British Columbia. In the letter from defts. setting out the proposed terms of agreement were the words "this offer to be firm for one year." Defts. broke the agency agreement during the first year:—Held: pltf. was entitled to damages on the basis of loss of profits on two years' contract, as being reasonable in all the circumstances.—MACDONALD v. CASEIN, LTD., [1919] 1 W. W. R. 293.—CAN.

1978 IV. —.—.]—In 1911 resps. agreed to employ applts. as under-brokers for the business of a co. during the subsistence of an agreement which they themselves had as brokers to the co.; the latter agreement was for five years. In Aug. 1912, resps.

- been terminated, she again approached them, & renewed her previous offer, which was this time accepted. Pltfs. commenced action against deft. as sole exor. of M., claiming commission on the sale of the property:—Held: (1) the appointment of pltfs. as sole agents terminated the agency of A. & Co.; (2) pltfs. were entitled to damages for the loss of the opportunity of earning their commission, but, in all the circumstances of the case, they were not entitled to the full amount of commission as damages.—*HAMP- TON & SONS, LTD. v. wrongful, determined the agreement with appts. On Dec. 2, 1912, resp., bond fide & not as a means of limiting the damages, made a new agreement with the co., the terms of which were inconsistent with, & thus put an end to, the original agreement between resp. & the co. In Jan. 1913, appts. sued resp. for damages:—Held: the damages recoverable were limited to the amount w. appts. were liable to pay under the bond down to Dec. 2, 1912.—*LACHMANDAS, KHANDELWAL v. 2083 Byss.—Breach of covenant.—By ass. instrument by way of security the grantor transferred to the grantee by way of mtge. (a) certain stock specifically described in the sched. (b) all stock depasturing on the lands of the grantor; (c) "all stock which may now or shall at any time hereafter during the continuance of this security belong to the grantor, wherever the same may be depasturing or kept, & all the natural increase of such stock; but did not exp. the grantor the natural increase of stock in (a) or (b). The grantee was by the instrument appointed sole agent of the grantor to effect all sales of produce, stock, & chattels which the grantor might require or desire to sell. The grantor, without obtaining the grantee's consent, sold to deft. in the ordinary course of business certain lambs the natural increase of the stock specifically described in the sched., & the grantee split. The court recovered possession of the same or their value.—Held: the appointment of the grantee as sole agent to sell did not negative the implied power of sale, & the sale, although it might be a breach of covenant, gave to the purchaser a good title to the lambs, & the sole agent's remedy was for damages for breach of contract.—NEW ZEALAND FARMERS' CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCN. OF CANTERBURY, LTD. v. CANTERBURY FROZEN MEAT & DAIRY-PRODUCE EXPORT CO., LTD., [1932] N. Z. L. R. 381.—N.Z.

um. Sale by principal.—A declaration alleged that deft. was possessed of a certain property & entered into an agreement under his hand with pltf. wherein, for valuable consideration, he gave pltf. "the sole selling agency" of the property, "such option to expire at" a certain time: & in breach of this agreement, deft. sold the property "otherwise than through the agency of pltf." On demurrer to this declaration:—Held: as the declaration did not allege that the sale of the property was by an agent other than pltf., there should be judgment for deft. on the demurrer. —HUFFMAN v. HANFORD (1936). 53 N. S. W. W. N. 76. —AUS.

st. Liability of principals to indemnify agent—Release of co-principal.—The release of one co-principal does not release another co-principal from his obligation to exonerate & contribute to the extent to which he would have been ultimately liable had the one

co-principal not been released.—

b1. — Goods sold—Knowledge of purchaser.—M. left two hundred & fifty cattle with B., a cattle dealer. He gave B. written authority to sell forty-eight, & B. was to graze the rest. B. sold one hundred cattle to C., purporting to act as M.'s agent, showing the written authority & alleging further oral authority. At B.'s request C. made a cheque for the purchase price payable to him. C. bought in good faith & for value. M. repudiated the sale & sued to vindicate the cattle sold without authority.—Held:—the written authority was a request for personal payment; should have put the purchaser upon inquiry.—MULLER v. CHRENNELS (1923), 44 N. L. R. 69.—S.A.F.

§ 2105 H. ———.j—Where an agent is entrusted by his principal with money to buy goods, the money will be considered trust funds in his hands & the principal has the same interest in the goods when bought as he had in the funds producing them. 2125a. Action for specific performance—Effect of non-disclosure of principal.—Pltf. procured C. to enter into an agreement to purchase land from defts. C. never disclosed to defts. that he was acting as the agent of pltf. Subsequently C. explained to defts. that he was acting as agent for pltf., & at his request the agreement was cancelled. In an action for specific performance:—Held: the agreement not being one in which any personal qualification by C. was a material factor, the mere non-disclosure of the person actually entitled to the benefit of the contract for the sale of real estate did not amount to misrepresentation.—DYSTER v. RANDALL & SONS, [1926] Ch. 932; 95 L. J. Ch. 504; 135 L. T. 596; 70 Sol. Jo. 797; [1926] B. & C. R. 113, C. A.

2126a. — Sold by agent—Effect of misrepresentation as to being principal.—G., employed as a traveller by a firm of builders, owed deft. £17 for goods sold. He asked deft. to buy timber from him, telling him that he had left the employment of the builders & had set up as a timber merchant on his own account, & deft. agreed to order timber from him on the terms that G.'s debt of £17 should be set off against the price. G. had not set up in business on his own account, but was employed by pltf. as an agent for sale on commission. Timber was delivered to deft. with invoices & letters bearing the name, address, & description of pltf., which G. told deft. were his own trade name, address, & description. Pltf. brought an action in the county ct. for the price of the timber, & the county ct. judge found that deft. honestly believed that the name, address, & description on the invoices & letters were those of G., but that deft. was put upon inquiry by the invoices & letters

& had notice that G. was not selling as a principal but only as an agent for pltf., & he gave judgment for pltf. for the price of the timber:—Held: deft. had no more than constructive notice that pltf. was the principal of G., & in the circumstances constructive notice was not equivalent to actual notice; deft. had made no contract with pltf., & was entitled to judgment.—GREER v. DOWNS SUPPLY CO., [1927] 2 K. B. 28; 96 L. J. K. B. 534; 187 L. T. 174, C. A.

2130a. — Sub-underwriting agreement.—Pltf., at the suggestion of M., who was a director of E. co. in Nov. 1927, was minded to underwrite shares in deft. co. about to be offered for public subscription. It had not then been started, but its object was to acquire & carry on as going concerns eight greyhound racecourses. An underwriting agreement was entered into by trustees for deft. co. & B. co. & a draft prospectus was prepared therein referred to. On the following day M. & O. offered to sub-underwrite 12,000 shares, & sent a cheque for £600 to B. co., which was accepted by them on Dec. 8. On Dec. 12, the co. was incorporated, the underwriting agreement ratified, & a similar prospectus signed by the directors, which, on Dec. 19, was issued to the public. The response not being sufficient, the balance of shares was issued to the underwriters or sub-underwriters. One of such allotments was for 8,160 to M. & O. as sub-underwriters. A number of sub-underwriters had repudiated their agreements on Dec. 16, but this was not known to the directors when they went to allotment on Dec. 17. Subsequently these 8,160 were renounced in favour of pltf. The consequence of the failure of some of the underwriting agreements was that two of the racecourses, representing about two-fifths of the estimated profits, could not be acquired. In these circumstances, this action was brought for rescission on the ground of material misrepresentations in the prospectus. Defts. denied these, & claimed for the balance due. They submitted that, the contract having been made with agents for an undisclosed principal, he could not recover:—Held: pltf. could not establish his case on the basis of principal & agent, as in such a case as this an undisclosed principal could not be substituted for the persons contracting; all the rights of the agents under the contract with the co. did not pass to pltf. by virtue of the agent's commission & expenses, money held by him in a fiduciary capacity, & if it is mixed by the agent with his own money in his general banking account & he becomes bkpt., the money can be followed if it is still traceable.—SALTER & ARNOLD, LTD. v. DOMINION BANK (1923), 4 C. B. R. 379; [1923] 3 W. W. R. 257.—CAN.

2120 will. — J., as agent of pltf., advanced sums to deft. in consideration of deft.'s going to work on a sugar estate, on behalf of K., who supplied money for the advance, to whom J. had to account, & to whom J. stated that he had accounted. Deft. stated that J. had recruited him to work for some person whose name was not given. Deft. contended in an action for refund of the advance that pltf. could not sue without omission of action from K.:—Held: pltf. had a right of action against deft.—GADLELA v. MOUNTJOY, [1921] E. D. L. 161.—S. AF.

21. Action for money paid under contract.—Pltf., desiring to have ten vessels constructed in Canada, entered into a preliminary agreement with A., whereby A. was to enter into contracts with three builders for the construction of the vessels, called "building contracts," & at the same time into contracts with pltf., called the "vessel contracts" providing for the payment for vessels, the nature of their construction & due delivery thereof. The "building contract" & the "vessel contract" each expressly stated that a copy of the other was attached to & made a part of it. By the "building contract" deft. covenanted to build the vessels according to the terms of the "vessel contract," & this contract was expressed to be made with pltf.

as well as with A., & deft. also confirmed provisions of the "vessel contract" for payment of the instalments of the purchase price to A. & appointed A. his agent to receive payments. Upon the signing of the contracts a first payment made by pltf. to A. was distributed by A. between the three "builders" who proceeded with the construction of the vessels. Upon pltf.'s failure to make the next deposit as provided for in the "vessel" contract, deft. gave notice terminating the contract. Pltf. having brought action for repayment by deft. of money paid on account of the vessels, less such expenses as deft. had incurred by virtue of the contract:—Held: pltf. had no right of action.—VAN HEMELRYCK v. NEW WESTMINSTER CONSTRUCTION & ENGINEERING CO., VAN HEMELRYCK v. NORTHERN CONSTRUCTION CO., VAN HEMELRYCK v. PACIFIC CONSTRUCTION CO. (1920), 29 B. C. R. 39; 55 D. L. R. 589.—CAN.

2139a. Agent acting in his own interest.—Where an agent, in contracting on behalf of his principal, has acted within the terms of a written authority given to him by the principal, but the existence of which was not known to the other party to the contract, the principal cannot, if the other party has acted bona fide, repudiate liability on the contract on the ground that the agent, in making it, acted in his own interests, & not in those of his principal.—HAMBRO v. BURNAND, [1904] 2 K. B. 10; 73 L. J. K. B. 669; 90 L. T. 808; 52 W. R. 583; 20 T. L. R. 398; 48 Sol. Jo. 369; 9 Com. Cas. 251, C. A.; revers., [1903] 2 K. B. 399.

2139b. Account stated & signed by agent.—In Mar. 1918, a tank steamer was damaged by fire & her repairs were entrusted to a firm of ship repairers at A. The steamer was insured. The owners sent out an agent from L. to expedite the repairs & authorised him to sign the repair account with the Lloyds' surveyor as "approved subject to adjustment & conditions of insurances." In Jan. 1919, the repairers delivered to the owners an account of the repairs signed by the owners' agent & by Lloyds' surveyor in the above form after a detailed examination of the account. The owners paid part of the amount due on this account but declined to pay the balance on the ground that the charges were excessive. The repairers sued the owners for the balance of amount due for work & labour done by pltf. & materials supplied at the request of defts., & in the alternative, claimed the balance as being the amount found due from defts. to pltf. on accounts stated between them & contained in an account signed by defts. by their agent, less the sums since paid by defts. in respect thereof. Defts. denied that the agent was authorised to agree the amounts due from defts. to pltf., or that he in fact purported to agree such amount, or that the account constituted an account stated:—Held: the signature of defts.' agent was an agreement by him, with their authority, that the amount charged for the repairs was correct, & there being no ground for re-opening the account, pltf. were entitled to judgment.—*CAMILLO TANK S.S. For the purposes of the liquidation he was authorised by pltf. to sell, & accordingly sold, certain shares standing in his name to defts., who were not members of the Stock Exchange, but who knew his position & that of pltf. as official assignee. Pltf. having sued defts. for the price of the shares:—Held: the action was maintainable, & defts. were not entitled to a set-off in respect of their debt.—*RICHARDSON v. 2194 vl. —.}—Engineers brought an action against shipowners for payment of the balance of the contract price of two boilers for a steamship. The shipowners denied liability, and also brought a counter-action for damages in respect of breach of contract. The actions were conjoined and a proof was led, in the course of which it transpired that the shipowners were not the registered owners of the steamship, as had up to that time been assumed, but merely acted as managers for a co. which owned her. Both parties thereupon amended their records; the shipowners averring in both actions that they had contracted, & were litigating, as agents for the limited co.; & the engineers, as defenders in the counter-action, pleading no title to sue".—Held: by prosecuting their own action to recover the engineers had agreed to treat debts as their debtors in the contract.—CRAIG & Co. v. The latter, pressing D. for a settlement, accepted as an accommodation D.'s personal cheque for the amount of his claim against the F. Co. On the afternoon of the same day, D. informed resp. that the cheque of the F. Co. had arrived. At that time, D. had also received from appt. co. two drafts payable to the order of resp. 2258a. —.]—Upon a draft agreement for the sale of certain blocks of flats the intending purchasers asked: "Are all the tenants' rents paid punctually & without dispute?" Reply was made upon the draft under the signature of one D., the managing director & solr. to the vendor co.: "There are no disputes & rents are paid promptly with very few immaterial exceptions." The reply had in fact been made by R., managing conveyancing clerk to D. in his professional capacity, on information obtained from A., property manager to the vendors. The representation as to the punctuality of rents was not incorporated in the agreement which was duly completed. In eleven cases the rents were not paid promptly. In an action by the purchasers for damages for fraudulent misrepresentation or alternatively for breach of warranty the learned judge found that there was no fraud, but he found that there had been a breach of warranty. On appeal:—Held: (1) in the absence of evidence that the parties entered into, or intended to enter into a collateral contract, there was no warranty of which there could be a breach; (2) the statement to R. by A. of that which was untrue to his knowledge, & the innocent use by R. of such untrue information to induce the purchasers to act to their detriment, amounted to fraudulent misrepresentation on the part of the vendor co.—LONDON COUNTY FREEHOLD & LEASEHOLD PROPERTIES, LTD. v. Z. used the documents for his own purposes, borrowed money upon them from the bank, signed his own name to them, crossed out defts.' name as consignees & substituted that of the bank. 2246 iv. —.]—Ptff., after negotiations with a sales agent of deft. co., signed at the co.'s office a contract form for the purchase of a motor-car & paid to the agent the purchase price in full. The receipt therefore expressed to be for "held cash," was signed by the agent personally. The contract form contained the words "Not binding until accepted by management," & the space for the manager's signature was not filled in. Ptff. did not want immediate delivery of the car, & the agent wrote on the form, "The agreement to be held until car wanted." In purported compliance with said offer to purchase, the agent delivered to ptff. a car belonging to the agent subject to a lien under which it was afterwards seized & sold. The agent had meanwhile disappeared with ptff.'s money, & the co. refused ptff.'s demand for a car, the manager saying that he knew nothing of the transaction. Ptff. then sued the co. to recover the money paid to the agent.—Held: ptff. was entitled to

L. induced deft. to purchase lots for $3,400 under an agreement made by a fictitious person as vendor, which L. delivered to deft. & received from him $1,600 as the cash payment. L. brought in to ptffs. agents an agreement for sale of the lots to a fictitious person for $3,000 of which $1,000 was payable in cash, which sum only he paid in. He also subsequently collected from deft., but never paid in, the deferred payments under deft.'s agreement. Ptffs. had no knowledge of L.'s fraud until after all the money had been paid to him.—Held: ptffs. were liable for the additional $500 of cash payment fraudulently contracted for & received by L.—DENTON v. 2273a. Liability for fraudulent preference by agent.]—If a principal leaves the control of his business in the hands of an agent so that the agent is employed to determine which of the creditors of the principal shall be paid, when they shall be paid, & why they shall be paid, a payment made by such an agent with an intention to prefer a creditor of his principal is, in the event of the bkpy. of the principal, a fraudulent preference by the principal within 1914 Act, s. 44. It makes no difference that the agent had not authority to sign the cheques he drew & presented to his principal, nor that the principal when signing them had no intention to prefer any creditor, but honestly believed the payments so made to be proper & in the ordinary course of business.

A firm of builders, having contracted to erect houses at S., employed T. as their salaried agent to control & manage the purchase of & payment for building materials, & generally to supervise & advise the firm on financial matters in relation to the contract. The partners had no knowledge as to the terms upon which the materials supplied had in fact been purchased, nor were they aware of any of the circumstances relating to any payments they in fact made. They signed cheques drawn by the agent as & when he prepared & presented them, but the agent had no right to make any payment except by cheques signed by his principals. The partners having become bkpts., it appeared in the bkpy. proceedings that less than three months before the date of the receiving order, T., intending to prefer S. & Co., creditors of his principals & then well aware of his principals' insolvency, presented to F., the managing partner, two cheques which T. had drawn & which F. signed without inquiry in the honest belief that T. intended thereby to make proper payments but which were in fact intended & devoted by T., one to the extent of £100 in payment of a debt due by his principals under a contract other than the S. contract, & the other to the extent of £647 in payment of goods delivered by S. & Co. on credit terms not then expired:—Held: the partners as principals were bound by the acts of their agent T. when he, acting within the scope of his employment & as their agent, made the payments in question, & the act of the agent in making the payments with knowledge of the principals' insolvency & with a view of giving a preference must be treated as the act of the principals.—Re DRABBLE BROS., [1930] 2 Ch. 211; 99 L. J. Ch. 345; 143 L. T. 337; 74 Sol. Jo. 464; [1931] B. & C. R. 200, C. A.

in conference with J. C. decided to invest through Messrs. J. P. & Co., stockbrokers, a sum of £5,000, part of the estate lodged on deposit with defts. J. C. accordingly drew out a form of cheque for signature by pltf. It was in the form "Pay J. P. & Co. or order" & was drawn on pltf.'s deposit account with defts. The cheque was signed by pltf. & left with J. C. to be posted to J. P. & Co. with instructions to invest the money. J. C., instead of posting the cheque to J. P. & Co., fraudulently inserted the words "per O. & P." in the blank space between the payees' name & the words "or order"; he then indorsed the document with the names O. & P. & paid it so altered & indorsed into the W. Bank to the credit of a co. in which he was interested & which had an account at that bank. The document was accepted without question by the W. Bank & passed through the clearing house, & the account of pltf. with defts. was debited, & that of the co. with the W. Bank was credited, with the amount on the face of the document. In an action by pltf. against defts. for conversion, negligence & breach of duty:—Held: pltf. had not held out J. One of these persons, the local manager of deft. co. had an individual private client, pltf. for whom he had invested money. Having $5,000 of pltf.'s money on hand he invested it by buying a part interest in the assignment of agreement for sale, & a declaration of trust was made by the trustees in pltf.'s favour to the extent of $5,000 & interest. not licensed to drive & had never been seen driving the car, which on many occasions was driven by the son, who worked with his father. In answers to interrogatories deft. admitted that she was the registered owner of the motor car; that her son O. & her daughter H. were licensed drivers; that she had purchased the car for pleasure; that she paid for all the petrol & oil; that her son J. resided with her; that she paid the rent for a look-up garage, the key of which was kept by her son C. A witness stated that he saw J. driving his mother's car more than once prior to the day of the accident. Deft. denied that she knew that J. had a key of the garage in his possession on the day of the accident, or that she knew he had access to the key, & stated that she never at any time gave J. permission to drive her car, & that he never drove it to her knowledge:—Held: if the answer of the jury that J. at the time of the accident was driving the car with the implied authority of deft., amounted to a finding of agency, must be set aside, on the ground that there was no evidence to support it.—*GIBSON v. P.'s widow sued deft. under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), for damages:—Held: as deft. was in the car, & there was no evidence that he had abandoned his right of control, he was liable notwithstanding that by a casual delegation he had entrusted its actual physical management & mechanical control to E.—*PRATT v. The landlord occupied the adjoining premises, & a lodger, who had no authority to enter the shop himself, complained to him of a smell of escaping gas coming from the shop. The landlord & the lodger went into the shop together, & the landlord commenced a search for the escape of gas with a naked light, which the lodger continued. Owing to the lodger's negligent conduct, an explosion was caused, resulting in damage to the tenant's goods on the premises:—Held: the landlord was liable for the damage on the ground (inter alia) of agency.—*BROOKE v. ss. In general.—By conferring authority upon his agent the principal gives third persons the right to assume that they can deal with the agent in the matters covered by that authority until they receive notice of his authority having been revoked, or at least until some circumstance arises which in all reason should put them upon inquiry, & this rule applies especially in favour of third parties who began to deal with the agent while his authority did in fact exist.—*WATSON v. Thereupon applts., in accordance with the contract of agency, paid the exporters the price of the timber, less their commission. In accordance with the contract of sale resp. accepted two bills of exchange drawn by applts. for the price of the timber. Subsequently resp. rightfully rejected the timber. On presentation of the bills of exchange resp. dishonoured his acceptances & applts. then brought this action to recover upon the bills of exchange:—Held: (1) applts. were not trustees or agents of the exporters in any way that would prevent them recovering on the bills of exchange; (2) the handing over of the shipping documents was good consideration for resp.'s acceptance of the bills; (3) there was no failure of consideration for the bills which were not affected by the failure of the consideration under the contract for the Coal Co., Ltd." The charterparty was signed as follows: "For the A. B. Co., Copenhagen, J. B. J., of the K. Coal Co., Ltd. For & by telegraphic authority of owners, for G. T. G. & Co., J. M., as agents only." It was admitted that J. B. J. signed on behalf of the K. Coal Co.:—Held: (1) the K. Coal Co. were not by reason

In 1917 V. had authority to accept chicory on behalf of applts., but when applts. entered into a contract with resps. for the 1918-1919 crop of chicory, this authority of V. had been withdrawn. Resps. tendered a consignment of chicory, which was accepted at Alexandria after examination by V., & sent to applts. at Durban; but it was rejected by applts. as being unsound in terms of the contract. Prior to the sending off of this consignment, applts. had notified all the farmers by circular that they would reject any chicory not "tip-top," & charge railage & storage to the senders:—Held: the circulars should have put resps. on inquiry as to V.'s authority.—*ELLIS BROWN v. sh. Lapse of time putting third party on inquiry.—Applt., a contractor, had obtained a contract to work the O. quarry for a municipality, one of the terms being that he should not transfer any of the work to other persons without the consent of the engineer of the municipality. During the period June to Sept. 1926, resp., in response to orders given over the telephone from the quarry, supplied applt. at the quarry with coal to the value of £35, which amount was duly paid by applt. Thereafter no further coal was ordered until Jan. 1928, when certain further orders were received by resp. over the telephone for coal to be delivered at the quarry. The coal was delivered

& the delivery notes were signed on behalf of the O. quarry. At this time applt. was no longer at the quarry, but he sublet the contract to S. & G. Applt. had not given notice in any form of this fact. After delivery of portion of the coal, resp. inquired from the municipal engineer whether the contract had been sublet, & upon receiving an answer in the negative supplied further coal to the quarry, making no attempt to communicate with applt. It was not disputed that orders had been given for the coal by S. & G., & that as between themselves & applt. they had no authority to bind the latter's credit:—Held: assuming S. & G. professed to act on applt.'s behalf, applt. could not have reasonably foreseen that a tradesman from whom he had ordered goods some eighteen months before over the telephone would act upon further telephone orders without communicating with him, & he was therefore not estopped from denying the authority of S. & G. to find his credit.—*MONZOLI v. In the letter he wrote: "All orders are booked on the understanding that my principals are given the option of shipping by steamer or sailing vessel." Defts. gave pltf. an order. Pltf. wrote to defts. saying: "I have oahed the order over to-day & I hope soon to be able to give upon cable acceptance." Subsequently he wrote: "I am glad in being able to inform you that the above-mentioned order has been booked by my principals & will send you official confirmation in due course." Pltf.'s letters were all signed "Niels Storaker" without any qualification.—Held: pltf. was contracting merely as agent, not as principal, & was not entitled to sue on the contract.—*STORAKER v. When the work was finished he was paid a sum on account, but when trying to get payment of the balance he was told that the work had not been ordered on behalf of the co., but for other principals. Thereupon he sued H. The judge found that H. impliedly undertook personal liability for the work, that pltf. gave credit to the co. up to a certain date,

L., who, at the inquiry, was acting for several clients, ordered the notes verbally but, when doing so, did not state specifically that he was ordering them on behalf of any of his clients. R. sued L. for the price of the notes. At the hearing the presiding judge held that he was not satisfied that a custom, under which, in the circumstances, L. would be liable, had been proved, & granted a non-suit. On appeal:—Held: the true question for determination was whether the contract between the parties was such that deflt., when ordering the notes, made it clear that he was not to be personally liable. Therefore, the non-suit should be set aside.—RUTTER v. LINTON (1935), 35 S. R. N. S. W. 132; 52 N. S. W. W. N. 13.—AUS.

- 2548a. ——— Unnamed principal.]—Appells., ptf. in the action, were English timber brokers. In Oct. 1929, they, as brokers acting on behalf of a foreign seller, sold to resp., an English buyer, a quantity of timber. The contract of sale was signed by appls. as brokers & was expressed to be made "on account of our principals," but the name of the seller was not disclosed. Delivery was to be made by instalments, & the first instalment was accepted & paid for by resp. without question. The second instalment was then delivered, but before paying for it resp. discovered that the seller was a merchant at D. with whom he had previously been in litigation & against whom he had a judgment which was still unsatisfied. Resp. thereupon refused to pay for the second instalment but offered to set off the price against so much of his unsatisfied judgment. Appls. had meanwhile paid the foreign seller themselves & had obtained the documents from him, and they brought this action in their own name to recover the price from resp. :—*Held: dismissing the appeal (1) as appls. had only signed the contract in their capacity as brokers they had not themselves either rights or liabilities under it; & (2) on the evidence there was no custom in the trade under which the ct. could imply an independent contract by the buyer to become liable to pay the brokers instead of their principals.—FLATAU, DICK & CO. v. The steamer was to load a cargo of coal on the Tyne & proceed to a foreign port, & provision was made for the payment by the charterers of demurrage in the event of the steamer being detained beyond the stipulated time either at the port of loading or at the port of discharge. The charterparty contained numerous other provisions imposing obligations on the charterers. The owners were aware at the time when the charterparty was signed that J. McK. & Co. were acting for other persons. In an action by the owners against J. Clause 6 of the lease stipulated that, in the event of its gas main being from any cause injured, appl. co. was to have no claim or demand against "His Majesty, His servants or agents." During the execution of the contract, a break occurred in the gas main, & appl. co. claimed damages alleging negligence of the resp. co. in dredging the bed of the canal:—Held: resp. co. was not a "servant" or an "agent" within the contemplation of clause 6 of the lease & was therefore liable in damages.—*MONTREAL LIGHT, HEAT & POWER CO. v. - 2753a. ——— Sale of goods—Principal not entitled to sell.—Where an agent purports to make a contract for a principal to buy goods, whether ascertained or not, or to sell unascertained goods, disclosing the fact that he is acting as agent, but not disclosing the name of his principal, he is personally liable to the purchaser if it afterwards appear that the principal had no right to sell, it being presumed that the purchaser would be unwilling to contract solely with an unknown man. But this presumption does not exist where a specific chattel is so sold, it being impossible to suppose that a purchaser would impose or an agent accept such a liability.—BENTON v. CAMPBELL, PARKER & Co., [1925] 2 K. B. 410; 94 L. J. K. B. 881; 134 L. T. 60; 89 J. P. 187; 41 T. L. R. 662; 69 Sol. Jo. 842, D. C.
- 2755a. Authority to compromise action.—T., who owned a paper, formed a co. with a capital of £500 in £1 shares, & transferred his paper to the co. in consideration of the allotment to him of the 500 shares. T. gave Miss P., who was the editor of the paper, 475 shares, retaining 25 shares himself. T. & Miss P. were the directors of, & the only shareholders in, the co. Defts. published in one of their papers two articles which T. considered to be a libel upon himself & the co. to which he had transferred his paper. T.

& the co. commenced actions for libel against defts. There was a meeting between T. & H., a representative of defts., with the object of settling the litigation, & eventually terms of settlement were arranged on Oct. 10, 1932, & initialled by T. & H. The terms, which were headed with the names of two actions, provided: “I accept the sum of 1,000 guineas on account of costs & expenses incurred in full discharge & settlement of my claims against” defts. “& the claims of the” co. “& the officers of that co., arising out of the articles published in the Daily Mail . . . & I will forthwith instruct my solrs. to serve notice of discontinuance, or to take such other steps or to agree to such other steps being taken to end the proceedings now pending.” Provision was also made for a letter in the terms of an agreed draft to be written to T. by H. Pltf. co. & Miss P. did not agree to the proposed settlement, although defts. were ready & willing to carry out the settlement, & the actions proceeded to trial. Defts. counterclaimed against T. for breach of warranty of authority. The jury returned a verdict for both T. & pltf. co., & judgment was entered for each of ptfs. with costs. The Ct. of Appeal, however, held that the alleged libel was not a libel on pltf. co., & set aside the judgment in favour of pltf. co. The judge at the trial held that T. represented & warranted that he had authority to settle the action on behalf of pltf. co., whereas in fact he had no such authority, & defts. were entitled to an inquiry as to the damages they had thereby sustained. Defts. appealed (inter alia) by leave of the trial judge, on the question of costs in both actions. Pltf. T. appealed against the judgment against him for damages for breach of warranty of authority on the ground that he had never represented that he had authority to settle the action on behalf of pltf. co., & because the transaction relied on in the counterclaim was only an executory accord giving rise to no rights.—Held: inasmuch as T. warranted that he had the authority that he professed to have, whereas in fact he had not that authority, he had broken his warranty & was liable in damages.—*BRITISH RUSSIAN GAZETTE & TRADE OUTLOOK, LTD. v. 2748 vi. ———.]—In an action for breach of warranty of authority, the cause of action is the breach of the express or implied promise of the person who assumes to act as agent that he has authority so to act, the consideration necessary to make that promise binding being found in the action of the other party in entering into the contract. Pltf. in such an action need not establish that he believed deft.'s representation that he had authority, though it must appear that he acted in reliance upon it.—LEGG v. BROWN, [1923] V. L. The burner was installed, but the co. denied liability on the contract &, after setting up a defence to an action thereon, went into bkcy. Pltf. then sued the present deft. for damages for breach of warranty of authority. The judge held that deft. was the real purchaser & gave judgment against him for the purchase price; leave being given to pltf. to amend the statement of claim to accord with the evidence & the judgment. Dft. appealed & pltf. cross-appealed for judgment for breach of warranty of authority.—Held: the appeal should be allowed on the grounds that deft. was not the real purchaser & pltf. had not made out a case against him of breach of warranty of authority.—FRASER OIL BURNERS OF CANADA, LTD. v. HUTCHINGS, [1933] 2 W. W. R. 141; [1934] 1 D. L. R. 335; 41 Man. L. R. 307.—CAN.

st. Liability for return of deposit.—Where a person, falsely representing himself to be the agent for the owner of certain land, entered into a contract for the sale thereof, & received a deposit on account of the purchase money, but the vendee could not obtain specific performance of the contract :—Held: his remedy against the agent for the return of the deposit was at law, & that a bill for that purpose would not lie.—*GRAHAM v. Imperial Govt. exported timber to this country, &, in accordance with the conditions of the licence, paid the purchase money received by them for the timber to def. bankers for the credit of the Russian Govt. They then became entitled to receive from the Govt. in Russia an equivalent amount in roubles at a fixed rate of exchange. In Mar. 1917, the Imperial Govt. was overthrown by a revolution, & was succeeded by a Provisional Govt., which in its turn, was, on Nov. 7, 1917, displaced by the Bolsheviks, who, on Dec. 18, forcibly dissolved the Constituent Assembly & established a Soviet Republic. *Pltf.*s. having received no roubles in Russia, brought actions against the bankers to recover two sums of money, one of which was paid to them by *pltf.*s. in the second action before Nov. 7, & the other by *pltf.*s. in the first action on Nov. 9, at which date they did not know of the Bolshevik revolution. *Pltf.*s. in both actions alleged that the bankers & the Russian Govt. were merely trustees for them, & the money having been paid under a contract, the consideration for which had entirely failed, they were entitled to recover. *Pltf.*s. in the first action further contended that they had paid the money under a mistake of fact, & on that ground also they were entitled to recover it:—Held: (1) this money had been paid to the bank as agents for the Russian Govt., & the ct. would not order payment of it in the absence of that Govt. or its representatives; (2) the bank were entitled to keep the money in their hands, but must undertake not to part with it without notice to *pltf.*s. & an order of the ct.—*STEAM SAW MILLS CO. v. sr. Breach of trust.—[Under an agreement between pltf. finance co. & deft. co. which was a retail dealer in motor cars, the former co. financed for the latter co. certain shipments of cars consigned by the manufacturers, under bills of lading with draft attached, to the deft. co. By the terms of said agreement deft. co. covenanted not to sell, mtge., etc., the cars without first having paid in cash the unpaid balance of the purchase-price, & to hold the cars in trust for pltf. until their price had been paid in full, & by the latter clause deft. co. also expressly admitted that until such amount was paid it had no right or title in the cars. The cars were never in the possession of pltf. nor did pltf. have any dealings with the manufacturers with respect to them. The agreement was signed for deft. co. by deft. M., its president; & through him deft. co. sold the cars without having made the payments called for by the agreement. Pltf. sued both defts. for damages for conversion. The defence of the co. was struck out & the action proceeded against M.—Held: by the agreement deft. co. became at least a trustee for pltf., & that the sale of the cars in violation of the agreement was a breach of the trust, for which deft. M., as well as deft. co., was liable in damages.—DEALERS FINANCE CORPN., LTD. v. MASTERSON MOTORS, LTD. & MASTERSON, [1931] 1 W. W. R. 214; 4 D. L. R. 730; revg., [1931] 1 W. W. R. 194; 25 S. L. The jury found that the representations made were untrue, that they had been made by deft. recklessly & without regard to their truth or falsehood, & that they had induced pltf. to purchase the business:—Held: the jury was justified in treating deft.'s statements as definite representations & in concluding that they were made to induce & did induce, pltf. to buy the business.—*EASTBROOK v. - 2964a. Negligence—Valuation.—A block of flats was purchased by the promoters of pltf. co., & in the course of the promotion of the co., & before the co. was actually formed, the promoters employed a member of deft. firm to value the property. The valuation turned out to be too high, by reason of the fact that wrong figures relating to the rates payable on the property were supplied to the valuer. These figures were supplied to the valuer by two of the promoters. The co. sued, claiming damages for negligence in the valuation. As the valuation was made before the co.

was formed, the claim in contract failed, & it was contended that defts. had made this valuation knowing that it was to be used for the purposes of the co., & therefore owed a duty to the co. to take proper care in making the valuation. This contention was based on the doctrine of M'Alister (or Donoghue) v. Stevenson, [1932] A. C. 562; Digest Supp.:—Held: the doctrine in M'Alister (or Donoghue) v. Stevenson is confined to negligence which results in danger to life, limb or health, & does not extend to the facts of this case.—*OLD GATE ESTATES, LTD. v. War broke out between England & Austria in Aug. 1914, but pltf. was exempted from internment & was 3040a. ———.]—By an underwriting contract dated Dec. 3, 1919, a syndicate agreed with a co. in consideration of a commission to subscribe for 150,000 of 350,000 shares to be offered to the public by a prospectus then about to be issued, & all allotments to the public were to be applied in relief of the syndicate's obligation to take up the 150,000 shares. By a sub-underwriting letter applt. agreed with the syndicate to subscribe 10,000 of the 150,000 shares underwritten by them & stated: "We now hand you application for the shares hereby underwritten by us together with cheque for £1,250, being deposit of 2s. 6d. per share." The letter also provided that applt. was only to be allotted & pay for so many of the 10,000 shares as should be his due proportion of the shares not taken up by the public, & that he was to receive a commission on the shares sub-underwritten by him. The letter also contained this clause: "This contract & our said application shall, notwithstanding any withdrawal on our part &/or any repudiation of our responsibility hereunder, or under the said application form, be sufficient to authorise & empower the directors to allot to us the above-mentioned shares & enter our name in the register of members in respect thereof." Applt. did not in fact sign or hand to the syndicate any written application to the co. for the 10,000 shares as contemplated by the sub-underwriting letter, but he handed to the syndicate the letter together with his cheque for £1,250 in their favour. On the issue of the prospectus only 55,000 shares were applied for by the public. On Dec. 12 the syndicate verbally applied in their own name & in the names of several sub-underwriters including applt. for an allotment of the total amount of the shares which they were bound to take up & paid with their own cheque for the total amount of the application money. On the same day the co. allotted to applt. 6,334, being his proportion of the 10,000 shares under his sub-underwriting letter. On Dec. 22, applt. wrote to the co. withdrawing his application for shares, meaning his sub-underwriting letter, but on Dec. 29 the co. sent him the usual formal notice of the allotment to him of 6,334 shares. On motion by applt. to rectify the register by removing his name therefrom as the holder of the 6,334 shares:—Held: the authority given by applt. to the syndicate to apply for shares was a continuing & irrevocable authority coupled with an interest which he was not entitled to withdraw.—Re OLYMPIC REINSURANCE CO., POLE'S CASE, [1920] 2 Ch. 341; 89 L. 3e. — Whether "holding" includes "part of a holding."]—Held: In the construction of Market Gardeners (Scotland) Act, 1897 (c. 22), the term "holding" includes "part of a holding," & consequently sect. 4 of the Act applies where part of a farm, held under an ordinary agricultural lease, had been cultivated as a market garden prior to the commencement of the Act.—CALLANDER v. SMITH (1900), 37 So. L. R. 899.—SCOT.

3f. "Agricultural holding."—Two enclosures of "permanent grass park" 10 & 8½ acres in extent, on which there were no buildings, were used by the tenant, a dairykeeper, for the grazing & feeding of 5 cows & 1 horse. In his dairy business, which had existed before he got the enclosures, he sold the milk produced by his own 5 cows,

& the milk, which he bought of other 10 cows belonging to neighbouring farmers. The horse was used for the purpose of the holding & for conveying the milk to market.—Held: the subjects were not "held for the purpose of a business or calling not primarily agricultural or pastoral," within Small Landholders (Scotland) Act, 1911 (c. 49), s. 26 (3) (g), & consequently were not excluded from the operation of the Act.—*HOWATSON v. PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

1. — Unregistered.]—In an action of removing from an agricultural holding it was admitted that a removal notice had been sent by unregistered letter & had been received. It was also conceded that the provisions of Removal Terms (Scotland) Act, 1886, did not apply.—Held: under rule 113 of Sheriff Ct. (Scotland) Act, a landlord was entitled to adopt any one of the three methods of giving notice there set forth, but must adopt one or other of them; &, accordingly, the notice of intention to bring the tenancy to an end sent by unregistered letter was invalid.—*DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE FOR SCOTLAND v. one tenant.]—Two brothers were tenants & joint tenants under a lease renewable by tacit relocation. The elder brother, the active partner, gave notice in writing to the landlord that he intended to leave the farm. Subsequently they declined to remove from the farm, on the ground that the notice being in the name of one of the joint tenants only, was insufficient to prevent renewal of the lease by tacit relocation.—Held: (1) the notice necessary, under A. H. (Scotland) Act, 1908 (c. 64), s. 18 (1), to prevent tacit relocation, might be given by a duly authorised agent for the tenant; (2) as the evidence showed that the elder brother had sufficient authority to terminate the lease on behalf of the partners, the notice given by him was effectual to prevent tacit relocation, although the fact that he was acting both for himself & as agent for his brother did not appear ex facie of the notice.—GRAHAM v. STIRLING, [1922] S. C. 90.—SCOT.

refused to give up possession, contending that the clause was not applicable, by reason of the provisions of Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908, s. 22, & that in any event it should be construed to ensure that the term should end on the last day of a year of the tenancy:—Held: (1) the provision for six months' notice contained in Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908, s. 22, applied only to cases where by law a half-year's notice was necessary & sufficient, & in this case the clause in question did apply; (2) read fairly, the clause operated to enable ptfs. to give notice at any time.—*WEMBLEY CORPN. v. - 29b. ————.]—In Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), s. 16 (1), which specifies the various kinds of question, difference, or claim to be determined by arbn. under the Act, the words "arising out of the termination of the tenancy of the holding" apply to a question, difference, or claim of any of the kinds previously mentioned in the sub-sect., & consequently, no question, difference, or claim of any of these kinds can arise for determination by arbn. under the Act until after the termination of the tenancy.

The landlord of an agricultural holding gave to the tenant a notice to quit on a certain day. The landlord alleged that before that day the notice to quit was withdrawn by mutual consent. The tenant denied that he ever consented to a withdrawal of the notice to quit, & continued to occupy the holding after that day. Subsequently, on the application of the tenant the Minister of Agriculture & Fisheries appointed an arbitrator to determine in accordance with Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923, the following claims, questions, or differences between the parties—namely, (a) whether the tenancy had been determined by the notice to quit; (b) whether the tenant was entitled to compensation for disturbance, & if so, the amount thereof; & (c) the amount of the compensation to the tenant for improvements & certain other matters:—Held: questions such as these were not questions which under sect. 16 (1) of the Act should be determined by arbn. in accordance with the Act, unless were questions "arising out of the termination of the tenancy"; that inasmuch as it did not appear that the tenancy had been terminated by the notice to quit or otherwise, these questions could not be said to arise out of the termination of the tenancy, & consequently that the arbitrator should be prohibited from proceeding with the arbn.—*R. v. On Dec. 23, 1914, T. conveyed about half the farm to *pltf.*s, subject to & with the benefit of the tenancy agreement. By a notice to quit dated Oct. 10, 1923, the agents of T.'s exors. & the agent of *pltf.*s jointly gave C. notice to quit the whole holding on Oct. 11, 1924. By an agreement dated Oct. 1, 1924, T.'s exors. agreed to sell their part of the farm to C., & it was conveyed to him on Apr. 17, 1925. C. refused to give up possession to *pltf.*s of their part of the holding, contending that under sect. 26 of the above Act the contract by T.'s exors. to sell to him rendered the notice to quit null & void. *Pltf.*s brought an action for a declaration that the notice to quit was effective, & to recover possession of their land:—Held: as the contract to sell a part was not made by the persons who gave notice to quit the entire holding, but only by some of them, sect. 26 of the above Act did not apply; the tenancy had been duly determined as regards *pltf.*s' land, & *pltf.*s were entitled to the declaration which they asked & to an order for possession of their land.—ROCHESTER & CHATHAM JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. CLINCH, [1925] Ch. 753; 95 L. J. Ch. 49; 134 L. T. 139.

- 30f. ——— To what holdings applicable—Holding let for horse breeding.—A holding let for the breeding of pedigree horses is not necessarily an agricultural holding within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9).

A lessor sold to pltf. the freehold of certain property subject to a lease to deft. The lease described the property as the P. stud farm; it contained covenants to repair, varnish, & distemper paddock boxes, stables, & coach-house, to graze down turf by stocking & moving, & not to use the premises otherwise than as a stud farm: & the schedule contained a description of the stud farm. The tenancy was due to expire by effluxion of time shortly after the sale to pltf., but deft. refused to give vacant possession, alleging that the lease created an "agricultural holding" within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), & that the holding had not been terminated by twelve months' notice, as required by sect. 23 of that Act. Upon a summons by pltf. for a declaration that the lease did not create a holding within the meaning of that Act, & that no notice was required for the termination of deft.'s tenancy:—Held: the main purpose of the letting was the breeding of race-horses, & although there were in most of the fields plots of grass or portions of pasture land, the holding was not "wholly pastoral," & therefore Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), s. 23, did not apply.—*Re JOEL'S LEASE, BERWICK v. - 30g. ——— Sale of holding—Agreement that notice to quit shall be valid—Form.—The agreement of a tenant from year to year of a holding, by writing, that a notice to quit shall be valid, within sect. 26 (1) of 1923 Act need not be in the express words of the sub-sect. Where the landlords of such a holding gave the tenant notice to quit stating that they contemplated selling the property, a reply by the tenant acknowledging the receipt of the notice to quit & continuing: "We are sorry to leave & will give you possession of the farm & buildings" on the dates mentioned in the notice to quit, was held an agreement, by writing, that the notice to quit should be valid within the sub-sect.—*RIGBY v. buildings comprising 138 acres more or less, as described in a schedule attached to the agreement, on a yearly tenancy, at the rent of 248. The tenant covenanted to manage & cultivate the land in a husbandlike manner, & that he would not plough or otherwise break up "any grass land" without the consent of the landlord. In the schedule to the agreement the premises were described as consisting of 130 acres 1 r. 31 p. of arable & 8 acres of grass land. In 1898 the tenant laid down 40 acres more to permanent grass. On notice being given to him to determine the tenancy on Sept. 29, 1919, he claimed the right to plough up this 40 acres of permanent grass which had been arable at the commencement of his tenancy. In an action by pltf. to restrain him from so doing in breach of his covenants an interim order was made granting the injunction on the usual undertaking as to damages. Def't. counterclaimed for damages by reason of the interim order:—Held: (1) on the true construction of the agreement, the covenant not to plough up any grass land was not restricted to the 8 acres of grass at the date of the demise but extended to the grass land in dispute & pltf. was entitled to the relief claimed; (2) on the evidence, the proposed dealing with the land would have been a breach of the covenant to cultivate in a husbandlike manner; (3) def't. had suffered no damage from the granting of the interim injunction.—CLARKE-JERVOISE v. In ejectment for a forfeiture:—Held: (1) the work thus to be performed meant any work for which teams are generally used, & therefore included drawing coals to B. completed on Jan. 2, 1899, the purchase-money should bear interest at 5 per cent. A dispute arose about the wording of the conveyance, & the purchase was not completed on the day fixed; the purchaser brought an action for specific performance, & the judge held that the vendors had been wrong in the dispute & gave judgment for specific performance with costs. After the commencement of the action one of the farms agreed to be sold fell vacant. The vendors did not let it, but occupied it themselves, paid the valuation of the outgoing tenant, & farmed the land:—Held: under the account of rents & profits directed by the order for specific performance, which was not on the footing of wilful default, the vendors were entitled to be allowed what they had paid for the valuation & the expenses of 226a. ———.J.—Where the tenant of a farm held on a verbal tenancy becomes bkpt., & the trustee, having entered into possession of the farm, subsequently disclaims the tenancy, he is excluded from all benefit as well as liability thereunder, including the tenant-right or right to compensation under custom of statute for unexhausted improvements by the tenant, & the amount fixed for compensation having been paid by the incoming tenant to the landlord, to whom arrears of rent are due, the landlord is not bound to account for such payment.—*Re WADSLEY, BETTINGSON'S REPRESENTATIVE v. 227a. Assignee of farming stock or other agricultural assets.—Under Agricultural Credits Act, 1928 (c. 43).—The tenant of an agricultural holding by a charge under Agricultural Credits Act, 1928 (c. 43), dated Apr. 29, 1933, charged in favour of a bank his farming stock & other agricultural assets as defined in sect. 5 (7) of 1928 Act. The charge was duly registered & became a fixed charge on Oct. 14, 1933. The tenant quitted the holding on Oct. 11, 1933, & subsequently became bkpt. The bank made a claim to the whole of the sums due from the landlords to the tenant at the termination of the tenancy free from deductions. The landlords disputed the right of the bank to make the claim, & in any event claimed to deduct from any sums to which the tenant was entitled at his outgoing all sums due from him in respect of arrears of rent & dilapidations. An arbitrator was appointed by both parties under the provisions of Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9). At the arbn. the landlords contended that the bank were not the tenants of the holding within the definition of "tenant" in sect. 57 (1) of 1923 Act, & that there could be no arbn. under that Act between the landlords & the bank. The arbitrator stated a special case, & a county ct. judge held that the bank never were tenants of the holding within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), the charge, on which the arbn. was based, did not vest the land or the benefit of the contract of tenancy in the bank, & sect. 16 (1) of 1923 Act only provided for an arbn. between landlord & tenant, & therefore there was no valid submission to arbn. On an appeal by the bank:—Held: the definition of "tenant" in sect. 57 (1) of 1923 Act did not include a mere assign of "farming stock & other agricultural assets" or a person who was the assign of a right to compensation under 1923 Act, & therefore the bank were not entitled to proceed to arbn. with the landlords.—*ECCELESIASTICAL COMRS. Less than two months later, he intimated a claim for compensation for improvements to the purchaser, & applied to the Board of Agriculture, who appointed an arbitrator:—Held: the "landlord" liable to make payment of compensation to the tenant was the selling owner, in respect that he alone was the "landlord" at the termination of the tenancy when the tenant quitted the holding & the claim for compensation emerged, & the obligation so incurred did not transmit to the purchaser, & interdict against the arbn. proceedings granted.—*WADELL v. small-holding from year to year from Feb. 2, 1916, at a rent of £132 10s. a year payable by half-yearly payments on Feb. 2, & Aug. 2, each year. The tenant agreed "to pay on entry any allowance or compensation which may be due from the council to the outgoing tenant in respect of feeding stuffs or manures or any improvements mentioned in A. H. Act, 1908, Sched. 1, Part III." Deft. entered into occupation of the small-holding on Feb. 2, 1916. At that date the amount of the compensation payable to the outgoing tenant had not been fixed, & it was not until Feb. 11, 1918, that the amount of compensation was agreed to. It was then agreed that the council should pay the outgoing tenant £30 17s. 6d., & that sum was paid by the council to the outgoing tenant on Mar. 17, 1921. On Jan. 13, 1923, pltf. council brought an action in the county ct. claiming to recover from deft. the sum of £30 17s. 6d. under the agreement of Dec. 24, 1915. Deft. pleaded that pltf.' cause of action had arisen on Feb. 2, 1916, the date of his entry on the holding, & that therefore the claim was barred by Stat. Limitations, s. 3, because the action was not brought "within six years next after the cause of such action or suit":—Held: pltf.' cause of action against deft. did not arise on Feb. 2, 1916, when deft. entered on the holding but only on Feb. 11, 1918, when the amount of the compensation was ascertained by agreement; therefore the time only began to run from Feb. 11, 1918, & the action was not barred. — *CHESHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. The tenant planted trees & bushes in accordance with the agreement. These two arable fields were in 1919 laid down by the tenant as temporary pasture. SUB-SECT. 1a.—COMPENSATION FOR INCREASED OR DIMINISHED VALUE OF HOLDING.

A. Compensation to Tenant.

See A. H. Act, 1923, s. 9.

B. Compensation to Landlord.

See A. H. Act, 1923, s. 10.

264a. Notice of claim—Time for giving—Agriculture Act, 1920 (c. 76).—Held: the meaning of sect. 19 of the above Act taken as a whole was that the landlord should have a right of compensation for deterioration under the sect. if he gave a notice before the termination of the tenancy & not otherwise; but if he had a right under contract to claim for deterioration apart from the sect., nothing in the sect. should interfere with that right.

A tenant held a farm as a yearly tenant under the landlord upon the terms, as the arbitrator found, of an agreement in writing under which the father of the tenant had originally held the farm. On Aug. 20, 1920, the landlord served a notice to quit upon the tenant, which expired as to the land, other than the boozy pasture, on Feb. 2, 1922. The tenant gave up possession of the land except the boozy pasture, the tenancy of which did not expire until May 1, 1922, upon that date. On Mar. 28, 1922, the landlord gave notice of & particulars of a counterclaim against the tenant for waste wrongly committed or permitted by the tenant & for breach of contract or otherwise, whereby he claimed for neglect in the care of hedges & ditches on the land & dirty land:—Held: (1) the landlord's claim was not barred by sect. 19 of the above Act; (2) the boozy pasture & the rest of the farm were held under one contract of tenancy; the contract did not finally cease under sect. 10 (7) of the above Act until May 1, 1922, the date of the termination of the boozy tenancy, & the landlord's notice was therefore in time.—Re ARDEN & RUTTER, [1923] 2 K. 264b. ———. Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), s. 16 (2)—Claims independent of Agricultural Holdings Acts.—As the term of a lease of an agricultural holding was coming to an end the lessee made a claim in respect of tenant right, & the lessor made various counterclaims in respect of dilapidations. An arbitrator appointed under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), to settle all matters & questions between the parties in respect of the holding, stated a case under sect. 16 (4), for the opinion of the county ct. in which he found that particulars of some of the lessor's claims were given within two months of the end of the lease, but that particulars of others of the claims were not given within that time. The claims related in whole or in part to acts & omissions which were in fact breaches of agreements in the lease. The county ct. judge held that the arbitrator could only entertain those claims of which particulars were given within the two months:—Held: the provision in sect. 16 (2) of the Act, barring claims unless particulars are given within the time therein specified, does not apply to claims arising from breaches of the agreement of tenancy & giving ground for actions at law independently of the Agricultural Holdings Act, & the arbitrator parties, the relationship of "landlord" & "tenant" did not exist between them; & accordingly, the submission was not incompetent because it did not take the form, required by sect. 16 (1) of the Act of submission to a single arbitrator.—CAMERON v. NICOL, [1930] S. C. 1.—SCOT.

sk. —Effect of submission.—Held: when both parties to an agricultural valuation allow arbn. proceedings to be carried on by a method which is not in strict conformity with the provisions of Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1923, s. 16, & the arbr has issued his award, they are barred personally except from objecting to the competence of the proceedings.—CAMERON v. NICOL, [1930] S. C. 1.—SCOT.

PART V. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—H. (b).

254. Award—Particulars not specified in.—The proprietor of a farm & the outgoing tenant, entered into a submission, whereby they referred the valuation of certain crops, stocks, & implements, agreed to be taken over by the proprietor, to two arbiters, & to an oversman to be appointed by the arbiters to act in the event of their differing in opinion. An award was issued signed by the two arbiters & the oversman, which contained nothing to show in respect of which, if any, of the items under valuation the arbiters had differed in their estimate, thereby rendering necessary a devolution on the oversman:—Held: the valuation belonged to a class of arbn. where a rigid conformity with formal procedure was not exacted; & accordingly, that the award was not invalid because it did not distinguish between items valued by the arbiters alone & items upon which the decision of the oversman had been rendered necessary.—CAMERON v. NICOL, [1930] S. C. 1.—SCOT.

s. What questions arbitrator may determine—Termination of tenancy—Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1923 (c. 10), s. 15.—In a note of suspension & interdict brought by the landlords of a farm, craving the ct. to interdict proceedings in an arbn. under the above Act upon a claim by the tenant, who had vacated the farm in favour of a new occupier, for compensation for improvements, the complainants maintained that the tenancy had not terminated, & that the appointment of an arbr under the Act was illegal:—Held: the question of the claimant's title to present a claim was not one of the matters remitted by the Act to the exclusive jurisdiction of the arbr, but was a question precedent to the existence of a statutory claim, & the ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the action of interdict.—DONALDSON'S HOSPITAL (EDINBURGH) TRUSTEES v. EGGLEMONT, [1925] S. C. 199; on appeal, [1926] S. C. (H. L.) 68.—SCOT.

sk. Form of arbitration—Arbitration between outgoing & incoming tenants—Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1908 (c. 64).—There is nothing illegal in the outgoing & incoming tenants entering into an agreement for a common law arbn.—ROGER v. HUTCHESON, [1922] S. C. (H. L.) 140, 170.—SCOT.

must deal with those claims without attributing importance to the fact that particulars thereof were not given within the time specified in the sub-sect.

With regard to the sufficiency of the particulars, I am of opinion that in the present case, as in most other cases, that is a question of fact which the arbitrator should decide for himself (SCURFFON, J.).—OLIVE v. PAYNTER, [1932] 2 K. B. 686; 101 L. J. K. B. 786; 145 L. T. 65, C. A.

265a. — Right to compensation—Tenant holding over after notice to quit.—A tenancy was determined by notice to quit on a certain day. The tenant remained on in possession for about nine months, & was finally ejected. Two days before his ejection he furnished details of his claim for compensation:—Held: the tenant, from the date when his notice expired, was not holding under a contract of tenancy, & the land which he persisted in occupying unlawfully was not a holding within sect. 11 of the above Act, & he, therefore, was not within the benefit of the Act.—CAVE v. PAGE (1923), 67 Sol. Jo. 659, C. A.

265b. — Liability to pay compensation.—“Landlord”—Purchaser entitled to rents.—Purchase not completed till after claim.—Certain landowners let a farm to tenants. In 1917 they gave notice to the tenants to quit at Michaelmas, 1918, with a view to the sale of the farm. In Oct. 1917, they agreed to sell the farm to a purchaser. On July 5, 1918, the tenants gave to the purchaser, who was then entitled to the rents & profits, notice in writing under sect. 1 (1) of the Act of 1914 of their intention to claim compensation in terms of sect. 11 of the Act of 1908. On July 18, 1918, the sale of the farm was completed:—Held: (1) the purchaser was the “landlord” within the Acts; (2) the notice of intention to claim compensation was rightly given to him; (3) he was liable to pay compensation.—BRADSHAW v. BIRD, [1920] 8 K. B. 144; 90 L. J. K. B. 221; 123 L. T. 708, C. A.

265c. — Person entitled to rents at end of tenancy.—(1) Where the tenant of an agricultural holding, who has been disturbed in his tenancy, becomes entitled under sect. 11 of the above Act to compensation for loss in connection with the sale or removal of his household goods, implements, or stock on the condition, among others, of giving to the landlord a reasonable opportunity of making a valuation of such goods, etc., the question whether he has given such a reasonable opportunity is in each case a question of fact depending on the circumstances. The mere lapse of an interval of several months between notice of intention to claim compensation & sale or removal is not of itself sufficient to satisfy the condition.

(2) Where the tenant of an agricultural holding has given notice to his landlord under sect. 11, proviso (b), of his intention to claim compensation for disturbance, & the landlord before the appointment of an arbitrator under that sect. assigns the reversion, the person who is liable to pay such compensation as may be awarded is the person who is entitled to receive the rents at the termination of the tenancy, & the notice of intention to claim so given to the original landlord will enure for the benefit of the tenant as against such last-named person.

(3) Assuming sect. 48 (2) of the above Act to apply to proceedings for compensation for disturbance as well as for improvements, the commencement of the “proceedings” is not the service of notice of intention to claim compensation, but the appointment of the arbitrator.—DALE v. HATFIELD CHASE CORPN., [1922] 2 K. B. 282; 92 L. J. K. B. 237; 128 L. T. 194; 87 J. P. 11; 20 L. G. R. 765, C. A.

am. Agriculture Act, 1930 (c. 76), s. 10—Claim exceeding one year's rent.—Damage proved less than one year's rent.—A tenant claimed compensation for disturbance to an amount exceeding one year's rent, & the claim went to arbitration, in which it was proved that the damage sustained by him was less than one year's rent:—Held: the minimum amount of compensation payable to a tenant under Agriculture Act, 1930 (c. 76), s. 10, was an amount equal to one year's rent: & although, as the matter had gone to arbitration, a “dispute” had not been avoided, the tenant was

am. — Loss from error in valuation of waygoing grain crop.—Under the lease of a farm the landlord took over the waygoing crop of grain from the outgoing tenant at farm prices, the quantity of the growing crop being ascertained by arith. After threshing it was found that the quantity had been underestimated by the arbitrator. The outgoing tenant claimed, under the above sect., as compensation for loss in connection with the sale of the farm produce, a sum representing the difference between the price he had received & the price of the actual quantity threshed:—Held: the loss was not “directly attributable to the quitting of the holding” but had arisen from an error of the arbitrator.—McGREGOR v. BOARD OF AGRICULTURE FOR SCOTLAND (1925) 8 C. 613.—SCOT.

sp. Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1923 (c. 10)—Refusal of landlord to take over stock—Claim for loss on sale.—The tenant of a farm received notice to quit. Having taken over another farm with a bound stock, he sold his sheep at a dispenalising sale, the landlord refusing to take them over. In a claim for compensation for the difference between the price realised & the “going concern” value:—Held: the loss was directly attributable to the quitting of the holding under sect. 12 (b) of above Act.—KIRKWOOD v. WRIGHT, [1924] 8 C. 766.—SCOT.

266c. Agriculture Act, 1920 (s. 76).—Right to compensation.—Withdrawal of notice to quit.—What amounts to.]—In Sept. 1920, a landlord gave to the tenant notice to quit his tenancy of a farm for which he was paying a yearly rental of £506 2s. On Dec. 31, 1920, the landlord wrote to the tenant: "I have received an offer of £670 per annum for your holding. If you choose to give me the same, you are most welcome to continue the tenancy."—Held: having regard to sect. 10 of the above Act, the letter of Dec. 31, 1920, did not constitute an offer in writing to withdraw the notice to quit within the proviso to sect. 10 (1) of that Act.—Re PERRETT & BENNETT-STANFORD, [1922] 2 K. B. 592; 91 L. J. K. B. 930; 128 L. T. 57; 38 T. L. R. 849; sub nom. PERRETT v. BENNETT-STANFORD, 66 Sol. Jo. 680, C. A.

266f. ——— Ejectment proceedings following notice to quit.]—The landlord of a farm served on the tenant a notice to quit on Mar. 25, 1923. Owing to the illness of his wife, the tenant did not quit the farmhouse at the expiry of the notice, but he quitted the land, save as under the custom of the country, immediately after the expiry of the notice. Ejectment proceedings were brought by the landlord & judgment was obtained by default of appearance. On being served with the notice to quit, the tenant duly served on the landlord a notice of intention to claim compensation for disturbance under sect. 10 of the above Act.—Held: if the tenant was ejected, the ejectment was in consequence of the notice to quit, & therefore, the tenant had quitted the farm in consequence of the notice to quit terminating the tenancy, & the tenant was accordingly entitled to compensation under sect. 10 of the Act.—MILLS v. ROSE (1923), 68 Sol. Jo. 420, C. A.

266g. ——— Necessity for proof of loss or expense.—Entire holding in occupation of sub-tenants.]—The effect of sect. 10 (6) of the above Act is that as a condition precedent to his right to compensation for disturbance a tenant must prove that he has incurred some loss or some expense of the kind indicated in the sub-sect.; that on proof of that he is entitled as a minimum to one year's rent of the holding; but that unless he proves some loss or some expense of the kind indicated he does not bring himself within sub-sect. 6 & is not entitled to compensation. Therefore where a lease of a holding under the Act was duly determined by notice to quit & the holding was entirely in the occupation of sub-tenants whose sub-tenancies terminated without notice on the termination of the lease, & the lessee did not sell or remove any household goods, implements of husbandry, fixtures, farm produce or farm stock on or used in connection with the holding.—Held: he was not entitled to compensation for disturbance under sect. 10.—MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & FISHERIES v. DEAN, [1924] 1 K. B. 851; 98 L. J. K. B. 874; 130 L. T. 709; 40 T. L. R. 285; 68 Sol. Jo. 401, C. A.

266h. ——— Notice of claim.—Time for giving.—"Termination of tenancy"—Tenancy of different parts of holding expiring at different times.]—A landlord let a farm, according to the custom of the country, upon a yearly tenancy on the terms that the tenant should enter into occupation of the main portion of the land on Apr. 6, & of the farmhouse, farm buildings, & the remainder of the land on May 18, & that "on the termination of the tenancy" he should give up possession of the different portions of the farm on the respective dates, there being one rent reserved for the whole farm.—Held: the "termination of the tenancy" for the purposes of sect. 10 (7) of the above Act took place on May 18, notwithstanding that the main portion of the premises had to be surrendered at the earlier date.—Semble: the proviso to sect. 18 (2) of the above Act applies only to a case where the tenant has been allowed by a landlord to remain on, after the ceasing of the agreement of tenancy, under a new agreement.—SWINBURNE v. ANDREWS, [1923] 2 K. B. 483; 92 L. J. K. B. 889; 129 L. T. 650; 39 T. L. R. 545; 67 Sol. Jo. 726, C. A.

266i. ——— Given under Act subsequently repealed.—Necessity for notice under repealing Act.]—A tenant who had on Sept. 29, 1920, received notice to quit his farm on Sept. 29, 1921, gave notice on Nov. 17, 1920, to his landlord of his intention to claim compensation for disturbance under A. H. Act, 1908, s. 11. That sect. was repealed by the Act of 1920, which came into force on Jan. 1, 1921, & by sect. 10 substituted a new right to compensation for disturbance. The tenant gave no notice of his intention to claim compensation under that sect. as required by sub-sect. 7 (b) thereof.—Held: not having given notice under sect. 10 of the Act of 1920, he had no right of claim under that sect., but his right of making a claim under A. H. Act, 1908, s. 11, was preserved by Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 38, notwithstanding the repeal of sect. 11.—HAMILTON-GELL v. WHITE, [1922] 2 K. B. 422; 91 L. J. K. B. 875; 127 L. 266j. Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (s. 9).—Right to compensation.—Refusal or failure to agree to arbitration.]—(1) A landlord of a holding gave the tenant notice to quit, & in the same document stated that he had no desire to terminate the tenancy if the tenant would agree to his demand that the rent should be fixed by arbn. The tenant did not agree to arbn.—Held: the tenant did not thereby disentitle himself to compensation, for the refusal or failure to agree to arbn. dealt with by sect. 12 (1) (e) of the above Act is a refusal or failure which has taken place before the date of the notice.

(2) It cannot be laid down as a matter of law, that in no case can the minimum compensation of one year's rent provided by sect. 12 (6) be reduced under the provisions of sect. 12 (8) if the tenant, having held two or more holdings as tenant, remains in possession of one of them. But the provisions of sect. 12 (8) have no application to a case in which the tenant remains in possession of the other holding or holdings, not as tenant, but as owner.—WESTLAKE v. PAGE, [1926] 1 K. B. 299; 95 L. J. K. B. 456; 134 L. T. 612, C. A.

266k. — Amount of compensation—Tenant holding two or more holdings.—WESTLAKE v. PAGE, No. 266j, ante.

266l. — — — — — Where a tenancy of agricultural land is terminated by a notice to quit, the tenant, under sect. 12 (1) of Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923, is entitled to compensation for the disturbance. By sub-sect. 6 such compensation shall be a sum representing the loss or expense directly attributable to the quitting of the holding which the tenant may unavoidably incur in connection with the removal of his household goods, stock, etc. But it was provided by the sub-sect. that, for the avoidance of disputes, such sum should be computed at one year's rent of the holding—in the present case £100—unless a greater loss was proved. By sub-sect. 8, where a tenant holds two or more holdings, & receives notice to quit in respect of one of them, the compensation shall be reduced by such amount as is shown to the satisfaction of the arbitrator to represent the reduction (if any) of the loss attributable to the notice to quit by reason of the continuance in possession of the other holding. The arbitrator held that such reduction was £89 10s., which he deducted from £100, the minimum of one year's rent under sub-sect. 6, & awarded £10 10s. compensation, which he held to be the actual loss. The tenant contended that the statutory minimum under sub-sect. 6 still applied, & that the award should be £100.—Held: that the only way in which the two sub-sects. could be read together so as not to clash was to read them as put together into one sect. divided into three sub-sects. The first sub-sect. would be sub-sect. 6 as far as "compensation." The second would be sub-sect. 8. These would be the substantive enactments. Then sub-sect. 3 would be a proviso on the substantive enactments, being the second half of sub-sect. 6, to the effect that to avoid disputes the compensation should be one year's rent unless a greater amount was proved. The tenant was therefore entitled to £100, one year's rent.—BEBB v. FRANK, [1930] 1 K. B. 558; 108 L. J. K. B. 186; 160 L. T. 200; 55 T. L. R. 372; 83 Sol. Jo. 194; *sub nom. 266n. — — — — — Expenses of preparation of claim.—Under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), the landlord of a holding served upon the tenant a notice to quit which stated that the tenant at the date of the notice was not cultivating the holding according to the rules of good husbandry. None of the other reasons mentioned in sect. 12 (1) of the Act why compensation for disturbance should not be payable to him was alleged against the tenant. For the purpose of dealing with any claims which might be made each party appointed a valuer. On the termination of the tenancy by reason of the notice to quit the tenant quitted the holding, & made a claim to compensation for disturbance under the above-mentioned sub-sect. An arbitrator appointed to determine all claims between the parties stated a case for the opinion of the county ct. in which he found that at the date of the notice to quit the tenant was cultivating the holding according to the rules of good husbandry, & that the tenant did not incur any expense directly attributable to the quitting of the holding upon or in connection with the sale or removal of his property, but that he was liable to pay his valuer a fee for viewing the holding so as to enable him to prepare his claim for compensation for disturbance, & to disprove the allegation that he was not cultivating according to the rules of good husbandry.—Held: by the Ct. of Appeal, affirming the decision of the county ct. judge, (1) the fee paid by the tenant to his valuer was an expense "reasonably incurred by him in the preparation of his claim for compensation" within sect. 12 (6), & should be included in the compensation payable to the tenant under that sub-sect., notwithstanding that the tenant had not incurred any other such loss or expense directly attributable to the quitting of the holding as was mentioned in that sub-sect.; (2) as that fee did not exceed in amount one year's rent of the holding, the compensation payable should under sect. 12 (6) be computed at an amount equal to one year's rent of the holding.—DUNSTAN v. BENNEY, [1938] 2 K. B. 1; [1937] 4 All E. R. 510; 107 L. J. K. B. 311; 158 L. T. 34; 54 T. L. R. 167; 81 Sol. Jo. 1039, C. A.

266o. — Liability to pay compensation—"Landlord"—Agreement for sale—Whether purchaser entitled to rents.—In July, 1924, the owner of an estate, which included a farm in the occupation of tenants, agreed to sell the farm to a purchaser, who agreed to pay the purchase money in Oct. 1924. The agreement was subject to conditions of sale, by one of which the purchaser agreed to pay the balance of the purchase money on the day named in the contract, & in that respect time was to be of the essence of the contract; & it was further agreed that "all rents & periodical outgoings" should be "apportioned up to the completion," & added to or deducted from the purchase money as the case might require. On Sept. 23, 1924, notice was given to the tenants to quit the farm on Sept. 29, 1925. The purchase was not in fact completed until Oct. 1925.—Held: (1) "completion" in the condition of sale meant actual completion, & not the date named for completion; (2) on Sept. 29, 1925, the vendor was the "person entitled to receive the rents & profits" of the farm within sect. 57, & he, & not the purchaser, was the "landlord" within sect. 12 & the person to pay compensation to the tenants.—RICHARDS v. PRYSE, [1927] 2 K. B. 76; 96 L. J. K. B. 743; 137 L. T. 170, C. A.

266p. — — — — — Notice prevented by provision for immediate resumption of possession—Validity.—By an agreement made in 1936 D. agreed to let a farm to pltf. for two years, the tenancy to continue subject to two years'

notice terminating on Sept. 29. The agreement contained a proviso that the landlord could resume possession of any portion of the land so leased in case it was required for building purposes without payment of compensation, but with a proportionate reduction in the rent attributable to the area so taken by the landlord. Shortly after pltf. had entered into possession, the reversion in fee simple of D. expectant on the termination of the tenancy of a portion of the demised land became vested in defts. In 1938 defts. gave pltf. notice of this & that in accordance with the proviso in the tenancy agreement they would resume possession of a specified portion of the farm. Accordingly they entered, by one of their directors, upon the portion mentioned in the notice. Pltf., having disputed defts.' right to so resume possession & terminate the tenancy without giving two years' notice to quit, took out an originating summons to determine the questions (a) whether defts. were entitled under the proviso in the tenancy agreement or otherwise to determine the tenancy as to any part of the demised premises otherwise than by giving two years' notice in writing, & (b) whether they were entitled to immediate possession of the premises comprised in their notice:—Held: (1) on the true construction of the proviso in the tenancy agreement no notice was required before possession could be resumed of the part to which the notice related; but (2) the fact that defts. had actually (when intending to resume possession in pursuance of the proviso) given notice to pltf. of such intention, brought sect. 27 (1), sub-para. (b), of Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923, as to the payment of compensation, into force, notwithstanding the provision to the contrary in the tenancy agreement. The provisions of the Act as to compensation applied therefore as if the part to which the notice related were a separate holding; (3) as the proviso in the tenancy agreement rendered it impossible for pltf. to give the month's notice of intention to claim compensation for disturbance required by sect. 12 (7), para. (b), of the Act & thereby indirectly deprived him of the right to compensation for disturbance, the proviso was rendered invalid by virtue of sect. 50 of the Act, which avoided contracts entered into by the tenant of a holding purporting to take away from him a right of compensation under the Act.

The answer therefore to both questions to the summons was in the negative.—Re ISRAELI AGREEMENT, CLEASBY v. PARK ESTATE (HUGHENDEN), LTD., [1939] Ch. 382; [1938] 4 All E. R. 658; 108 L. J. Ch. 100; 160 L. T. 156; 55 T. L. R. 204; 82 Sol. Jo. 1031.

266q. — Notice of claim.—By whom given.—Joint tenancy.—W., who had been tenant of a farm for many years, entered into negotiations with his landlord to have his tenancy agreement, upon the termination thereof, transferred to himself & B., & as the result of those negotiations W. became joint tenant of the farm with B. at the request of, & for the protection of, the landlord. Upon the termination of W.'s tenancy B. paid W. for the tenant right & also provided the whole of the finance necessary for carrying on the farm. On Feb. 21, 1924, W. alone gave notice to quit. On Mar. 21, 1924, the landlord served notice to quit upon both tenants, upon the ground that they were not cultivating the farm according to the rules of good husbandry. Thereupon B. gave notice to the landlord of his intention to claim compensation:—Held: (1) the notice given by B., being the one of the joint tenants who owned the household goods & agricultural implements & had suffered loss by their removal or sale upon the expiration of the joint tenancy, was sufficient to give the arbitrator jurisdiction; (2) it being the object of sect. 12 (7) (b) of the above Act that the landlord should have notice of what compensation was claimed against him, it would, in the case of a joint tenancy, be a great hardship upon the tenant who had a proper & valid claim for compensation which was to be defeated because his joint tenant, who had no such claim, had not joined in the notice.—Howson v. Buxton (1928), 97 L. J. K. B. 749; 139 L. T. 504, C. A.

266r. — Notice to quit.—Reason must be stated.—Effect of notice giving alternative reasons.—A tenant in giving a notice to quit under sect. 12 (3) of above Act, on account of the landlord's refusal or failure to agree to the tenant's demand for arbn. as to the rent of the holding, is, as a condition precedent to his right to compensation for disturbance, bound to state correctly the reason for the notice which in fact exists, but he may put himself right by putting his notice in the alternative by stating that the notice given was either for the reason that the landlord had refused or that he had within a reasonable time failed to agree to the demand made on him by the tenant for arbn.

Where the landlord had within a reasonable time failed to agree to such a demand but had not refused to do so & the notice to quit wrongly stated that it was given by reason of the landlord's refusal to agree:—Held: the tenant could not succeed in his claim for compensation for disturbance.—Selleck v. Hellens (1928), 98 L. J. K. B. 214; 140 L. T. 363; 45 T. L. R. 179; 73 Sol. Jo. 76, C. A.

266s. — — — Form of notice.—The landlord of a holding served on the tenant notice to quit in the following form: "In accordance with sect. 12 (1) (a) & (b) of Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), we hereby as agents for" the landlord "give you notice to quit," etc. The tenant, in accordance with this notice having quitted the holding, claimed compensation for disturbance, contending that the notice did not sufficiently state that it was given for any of the reasons specified in sect. 12 (1) of the Act, or did not specify for which of those reasons it was given:—Held: the notice to quit sufficiently stated that it was given for the reasons indicated in sect. 12 (1) (a) & (b), & was an effective notice to bar the tenant's claim to compensation if the allegations were sustained.—Re Digby & Penny, [1932] 2 K. B. 491; 101 L. J. K. B. 615; 147 L. T. 221; 48 T. L. R. 403, C. A.

266t. — — — Reasons in accompanying letter.—A notice to quit under 1923 Act may be validly contained in two documents—one a formal notice to quit & the other an accompanying document which refers to that formal notice & states as the reason for giving it one or more of the causes set out in sect. 12 (1) of the Act.—TURTON v. TURBULL, [1934] 2 K. B. 197; 103 L. J. K. B. 593; 151 L. T. 265; 78 Sol. Jo. 367, C. A.

266u. — By purchaser before completion—Estoppel.]—Pltf. was the tenant of two farms on a yearly tenancy. The owner of the property died in 1928, & on July 17, 1930, his personal representatives agreed to sell deft. the farms. The date fixed for completion was Sept. 15, 1930, but the purchase was not completed till Oct. 30, 1930. Meanwhile deft. had on Oct. 9, 1930, sent to pltf. a notice to quit the premises on Oct. 11, 1931, & pltf. duly gave up possession on that date. Deft. disputed pltf.'s claim to compensation under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), on the ground that the notice to quit was invalid, because the purchase was completed only after the notice was given. Pltf. therefore brought proceedings claiming declarations that the notice to quit was valid; that, if not, deft. was estopped from denying its validity; & that he was entitled to compensation under the Act:—Held: (1) on the facts the pltf. was estopped from denying the validity of the notice to quit; (2) the ct. had jurisdiction to determine the matters at issue, notwithstanding the provisions for arbn. contained in sect. 16 of the Act.—FARROW v. ORTTEWELL, [1933] 1 Ch. 480; 102 L. J. Ch. 133; 149 L. T. 101; 49 T. L. R. 251, C. A.

266v. — Determination of rent—Notice of application for arbitration—Effect of delay.]—On Jan. 16, 1929, the tenant of an agricultural holding made to the landlord a demand in writing for arbn. under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9), as to the rent to be paid for the holding as from Apr. 6, 1930, the next ensuing date at which the tenancy could have been terminated by notice to quit given by the tenant at the date of the demand for arbn. The landlord consented to the matter being referred to arbn., but after a long delay, due to the fault of the landlord & his advisers, he refused to concur in the appointment of an arbitrator, to take part in the arbn. or to recognise the award. At the request of the tenant the Minister of Agriculture appointed an arbitrator who, on Sept. 23, 1931, made an award fixing a reduced rent for the holding as from Apr. 6, 1930:—Held: the award was good & enforceable as between the parties.—*GRUNDY v. SUB-SECT. 3a.—COMPENSATION FOR ENFORCEMENT OF PROPER CULTIVATION.

266x. Corn Production Act, 1917 (c. 46), s. 9 (9)—Who is person interested—Tenant.]—(1) A notice to convert certain land into tillage, made under sub-sect. 1 of the above sect. & Defence of the Realm Regulations, 1914, reg. 2 M, was served on the owner of land who was in occupation. After the service of the notice the owner agreed to let the land to a tenant who entered into occupation & carried out the requirements of the notice. The notice had not been served on the tenant. The tenant claimed compensation for loss alleged to have been suffered by him by reason of his having carried out the requirements of the notice, & the claim was referred to arbn. under the Act, & the arbitrator stated a case in which he asked the ct. certain questions:—Held: the tenant was a "person who was interested in the land in respect of which the notice was served," within sub-sect. 9 of the above sect., inasmuch as he was interested at the time when the loss was alleged to have occurred; & the tenant came within the words of the sub-sect. "who suffers any loss by reason of the exercise of the powers conferred by this sect." & was entitled to compensation for the loss, if any, though the notice had not been served on him, as he had carried out the requirements of the notice.

(2) Two notices were served, each in respect of a different field in a separate farm occupied by the same tenant:—Held: in the circumstances, the loss, if any, in respect of each field should be assessed separately.

(3) The tenant of certain land in respect of which a notice to plough had been served under the Act sent in a claim for compensation on Sept. 28, 1918, for the year 1918, & in 1919 he sent in a claim for compensation for 1919. The arbn. to assess compensation was held after both claims had been sent in:—Held: the assessment should not be based on the loss, if any, in each year separately; (BANKES, L.J.) the arbitrator should take the experience of the two years, setting off any profit in one year against any loss in the other; (SCRUTTON & ATKIN, L.JJ.) the whole effect of the exercise of the powers conferred by the sect. had to be considered by the arbitrator, including an estimate of the probable loss or profit in the future.—Re TODD & NORTH RIDING OF YORKSHIRE AGRICULTURAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, [1921] 1 K. SUB-SECT. 3b.—ASCERTAINMENT OF COMPENSATION.

266bb. In respect of what holdings compensation payable—Tenant sub-letting farmhouse.]—By an agreement of tenancy a landlord demised to the tenant a farm of 1,000 acres together with a farmhouse & some cottages. There was a provision that the tenant should use the demised premises for farming purposes. The tenant subsequently, with the permission of the landlord, sub-let the farmhouse to a lady who used it as a house for paying guests. Upon the determination of the lease, the tenant made a claim for compensation under A. H. Act, 1908:—Held: the ct. must have regard to the substance of what had been done; by the lease the holding was an agricultural one, & the fact that the farmhouse had been let to a sub-tenant did not cause it to cease to be a "holding" within the Act.—Re RUSSELL & HARDING (1922), 128 L. 266cc. Notice of claim—To whom given—Purchase—Taking subject to existing tenancies.]—Applt. was the tenant of an agricultural holding under a tenancy expiring on Sept. 29, 1922. In May, 1922, the landlord contracted to sell the holding, subject to the tenancy, to resp., completion to take place on Sept. 29, 1922. The completion in fact took place on Nov. 2. The contract of sale contained a general condition that the rents, profits or possession of the property should be received or retained & the outgoings discharged by the vendor up to the time appointed for completion, & that current rents should be apportioned. By a special condition it was provided that for the purpose of this general condition any rent payable on Sept. 29 was to be deemed "current rent," & was to be payable by the purchaser on completion. After the determination of the tenancy the purchaser as "landlord" made a claim against the tenant for dilapidations, & the tenant counterclaimed for compensation:—Held: the purchaser was not at the date of the termination of the tenancy the "landlord" within A. H. Act, 1908, s. 48, & Agriculture Act, 1920 (c. 76), s. 18.—TOMBS v. TURVEY (1923), 93 L. J. K. B. 785; 131 L. T. 330; 68 Sol. Jo. 385, C. A.

266aa. Particulars of claim—Sufficiency—Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1923 (c. 10), s. 15 (3).]—By a letter written on receipt of a notice from the tenant of his intention to terminate his tenancy of a sheep farm, the landlord intimated that he reserved his claim in respect of depletion of the sheep stock; & by a second letter, written within two months after the termination of the tenancy, in which he referred to his former letter, he stated that only 51 per cent. of the sheep stock had been delivered to the incoming tenant, & that the amount of the claim would be intimated when the exact shortage was determined:—Held: (1) in view of the severity of the penalty attached to non-compliance, the requirements of the above sub-sect. were sufficiently complied with if fair notice was given to the opposite party of the nature of the claim against him & of the case he had to meet; (2) the letters gave such notice, although they did not state the legal basis of the claim or its actual amount.—MONTGOMERY (DUKE) v. HART, [1925] S. C. 160.—SCOT.

under sect. 12 of A. H. Act, 1923, "for loss or expense directly attributable to my quitting the holding which I may unavoidably incur upon or in connection with the sale or removal of my household goods, implements of husbandry, fixtures, farm produce or farm stock on or used in connection with the holding, including any expenses reasonably incurred by me in my claim for compensation." On Apr. 6, 1932, the tenant quit the holding. On May 21, 1932, he gave notice under sect. 16 (2) of the Act, that the amount of his claim for disturbance was "one year's rent, viz.: Two hundred & twenty-five pounds (£225)." The county court judge held that the particulars were sufficient:—Held: no sufficient particulars had been delivered & therefore that the claim was barred, on the grounds: (1) the notice of Nov. 23, 1931, was merely a notice that a claim would be made & not a rendering of particulars, & (2) the notice of May 21, 1932, although it quantified the claim at the minimum sum to which the tenant was entitled under sect. 12 (6) of the Act, did not furnish particulars of some loss or expense to which the tenant had been put.—*SPRECKLEY v. 266hh. Award—Setting aside—Jurisdiction of court—Error on face of award.—The inherent jurisdiction of the High Ct. to set aside an award under A. H. Act, 1908, on the ground of error appearing on the face of it where there has been no misconduct on the part of the arbitrator is not taken away by that Act. That jurisdiction was not excluded by Arbitration Act, 1889 (c. 49), & when the jurisdiction under that Act with reference to arbn. proceedings under the A. H. Act, 1908, was transferred to the county ct. by that Act, the inherent jurisdiction of the High Ct. in those matters was neither expressly nor by implication transferred to it.—RE JONES & CARTER, [1922] 2 Ch. 599; 91 L. 266jj. — Time for notice of motion to set aside.—In an arbn. under the A. H. Act, 1908, the award was made on Apr. 8, 1921, & on June 3 applt. gave notice of motion to set aside the award on various grounds. There was no rule either under County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), or under A. H. Act, 1908, dealing with the time within which a notice of motion to set aside an award must be given:—Held: the words "principles of practice" in County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 164, did not refer to specific rules of the High Ct., & the time limit of six weeks under R. S. O., Ord. 64, r. 14, was not a "principle of practice" within that sect. of the Act; therefore the only time limit applicable in the present case was under Stat. Limitations & under the doctrine of laches, & the motion to set aside the award was made in time.—MCOREAGH v. FREARSON (1921), 91 L. J. K. B. 365; 126 L. T. 601, D. C.

266nn. Costs—Agreement as to—Validity.—The parties to an arbn. under A. H. Act, 1923, agreed beforehand that the successful party should have costs on the High Ct. scale. The agreement was not communicated to the arbitrator, who gave his award in favour of the landlord, & awarded that each party should pay his own costs. In an action by the landlord to enforce the agreement the judge gave judgment for the tenants, on the ground that the Act gave discretion to the arbitrator as to costs:—Held: the agreement was valid & enforceable.—MANSFIELD v. ROBINSON, [1928] 2 K. B. 353; 97 L. J. K. B. 466; 139 L. T. 349; 92 J. P. 126; 44 T. L. R. 518, D. C.

267a. — "Treated as a market garden."—(1) Held: the word "treated" in sect. 42 (1) of the above Act, in the collocation in which it was there used did not mean simply that the holding should be in use or cultivation as a market garden, but that it should be let by one person as landlord & occupied by the other as tenant as a market garden, & so treated as between them for the purpose of governing their rights in respect of the holding as a market garden.

By an agreement in writing dated Dec. 31, 1919, & made between the landlord of the one part & the tenant therein described as "market gardener" of the other part, it was agreed (clause 1): that the landlord should let & the tenant should take the farm therein described for the term of one year from Sept. 19, 1919, & so on from year to year at the yearly rent of £185 by half-yearly payments on Mar. 25 & Sept. 29 in each year, & that the tenant should pay to the landlord as a further rent at the rate of £6 per cent. per annum on all sums of money expended by the landlord in the supply of any fruit trees during the tenancy. By clause 7 the tenant was to cultivate the land on the best & most approved system of gardening in general practice in the neighbourhood, & was not to cut down, grub up, or destroy any fruit trees growing in or upon the land, or at any time to be planted thereon, under the provisions of the agreement, without the consent in writing of the landlord or his agent first had & obtained. By clause 9 the landlord was during the term to supply the tenant at his own expense with all fruit trees which might at any time be agreed between the landlord & tenant to be necessary, & the tenant was to pay a certain additional rent in respect of the fruit trees so supplied. Clause 11 contained the following proviso: "That nothing herein contained shall be deemed to be an agreement by the landlord that the premises hereby demised or any part thereof shall be let or treated as a market garden or give rise to a claim for compensation for fruit trees or bushes under A. H. Act, 1908, or any statutory modification thereof":—Held: (2) clause 11 of the agreement contained the clearest possible expression of the intention of the parties that the holding was not to be treated as a market garden; there was therefore no agreement in writing within sect. 42 (1) of the Act, by which it was agreed that it should be let or treated as a market garden, & therefore no claim to compensation on that basis arose, because the existence of such an agreement was a condition precedent to such a claim; (3) the agreement was not one which was avoided by sect. 5 of the Act, because the condition precedent to the tenant having the right to claim compensation had not been satisfied.—Re MASTERS & DUVEEN, [1923] 2 K. 267d. ——— Part of premises treated as market garden.—By lease made in 1904 a private residence at Sunbury, Middlesex, with gardens, pleasure grounds, & meadow lands, being about 27 acres in all, was demised to deft.'s predecessor in title for twenty-eight years at a yearly rent of £126. The lessee covenanted to keep the premises in repair & not to commit waste. He also covenanted not to occupy use or employ the premises for any trade except that of a nurseryman, market gardener, florist or farmer, without the written consent of the lessors. The lessee during the term ploughed up the grass land & cultivated it as a market garden. In 1924 deft., in whom the term was then vested, let the house & garden on a yearly tenancy, but continued to cultivate the rest of the land as a market garden. On the termination of the lease in 1931, the reversioners brought an action for damages for waste & for declarations that neither the demised premises nor any part thereof constituted a "holding" or "market garden" within Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9):—Held: the premises, excluding the house & grounds let in 1924, constituted a separate holding under the Act; they were let upon an agreement in writing made after Jan. 1, 1896, which provided that the holding should "be let or treated as a market garden"; it was therefore a "market garden" within sects. 48, 57 of the Act, & the claim failed.—SAUNDERS-JACOB v. A lease of a farm contained a covenant by the lessee to deliver up at the end of the term all the demised premises & all new & other buildings & erections thereon & all such fixtures as were in anywise affixed or fastened to the freehold of the premises:—Held: the covenant effectually excluded the provisions of sect. 21 of the Act, & the tenant was not entitled to remove certain buildings & fixtures erected & affixed by him during the term.—*PREMIER DAIRIES v. A contract for the sale of standing timber to be cut & removed by the buyer, who is given as much time as he desires "to remove it, is one which deals with an interest in land within the meaning of sect. 34 of Land Registry Act, R. S. B. C., 1924, & therefore, it is one which must be registered thereunder in order to pass such interest.—CARLSON v. DUNCAN, [1931] 2 W. W. R. 343; 3 D. L. R. 570; 44 B. C. R. 14.—CAN.

299a. ————.]—L., the tenant from year to year of a farm in the county of Durham belonging to Lord Eldon, agreed by his tenancy agreement not to dispose of any hay, etc., that was grown or brought on the farm, but to consume such hay, etc., by stock on the farm & in the proper manner. In May, July & Oct. 1932, L. entered into three contracts for the sale to H., a firm of hay dealers, of eight stacks of hay standing on the farm. The contracts provided for the sale of the hay at various prices per ton "put free on rails. . . . Cutting & tying to be done by Hedley Bros. Delivery of same to be taken when convenient, & only good marketable hay clear of mould to be delivered in a dry condition." H. paid L. at the time of entering into the contracts the estimated value of the stacks of hay. At the time L. entered into these contracts he was still the tenant of the farm & could not in the ordinary course determine his tenancy before May 13, 1934. In Oct. 1932, however, L. asked to be allowed to terminate his tenancy on May 13, 1933, & on Nov. 18, 1932, the landlord's agent agreed that the tenancy should terminate on May 13, 1933. In Jan. 1933, the landlord's agent informed H. that L.'s tenancy agreement would terminate on May 13, 1933, & that the hay would not be allowed to be removed from the farm. On Feb. 13, 1933, the landlord levied a distress upon the farm for arrears of rent. The bailiff found that H. were in process of cutting into the eight stacks of hay & taking the hay away, & notwithstanding the presence of the bailiff they removed all the hay in the eight stacks. On Feb. 14, 1933, H. served upon the landlord a declaration under Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908 (c. 53), s. 1, that the tenant had no right of property or beneficial interest in the goods distrained. The landlord, thereupon, brought an action against H. alleging that their acts amounted to poundbreach & claiming treble damages therefor; in the alternative the landlord claimed £102 damages for the removal of the hay contrary to Sale of Farming Stock Act, 1816 (c. 50), s. 11. At the trial it was proved that it was a common practice in the hay market for dealers to buy hay in stacks, sometimes for a lump sum, & sometimes for a price per ton, & that purchases of stacks, even though weight & price necessarily remained to be determined at the time of delivery, were regarded by all persons interested in the market as passing the property in the stacks to the buyers at the time of the bargain:—Held: Sale of Farming Stock Act, 1816 (c. 50), s. 11, has not been impliedly repealed by the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1923 (c. 9); L. was not freed from his obligation under his tenancy agreement not to dispose of any hay grown on the farm but to consume it by stock on the farm by Act of 1923 (c. 9), s. 30 (1), as there was no evidence that he had made adequate provision to return to the holding the full equivalent manurial value to the holding of crops sold off or removed from the holding, & further the hay had been removed from the farm in the year before L. quitted the holding. He ought, therefore, not to have disposed of the hay otherwise than as provided for in his tenancy agreement. The purchasers of the hay stood in L.'s shoes & had therefore committed a breach of the Act of 1816, & the landlords were therefore entitled to damages for the removal of the hay.—*ELDON (LORD) v. 311b. ————.]—At an auction sale of grass & crops held at a farm pltf. purchased the crop of swedes in one of the fields, & deft. purchased the grass on an adjoining field. One of the conditions upon which pltf. purchased the crop of swedes was that he should not remove from the field more than one-half of the crop of swedes, the other half having to be consumed on the field. Deft. put a number of sheep into his field of grass, & the sheep got into pltf.'s field of swedes & did considerable damage to the swedes:—Held: the fact that the right of pltf. to remove the swedes from the field was limited to one-half of the crop did not prevent him from maintaining an action of trespass in respect of the damage done by deft.'s sheep, as pltf. had such an exclusive right of possession in the crop as would entitle him to maintain an action of trespass.—*WELLAWAY v. On Feb. 10, 1936, a purchaser acquired the estate subject to the lease & became the owner & occupier of the adjoining land. On that adjoining land near the boundary of the demised land there was a beech tree which was in a dying condition & already dead from a height of about 16 ft. above the ground to its top, & a branch of that tree 40 ft. above the ground projected over the tenant's land. On May 30, 1936, that branch fell upon & killed a farm servant of the tenant who was at work upon his land. It appeared that at the date of the tenancy agreement there were many dead and dying trees on the estate, but that the risk of their branches falling had not become substantially greater by the date of the accident; & that in the meantime the owner had caused some of these trees to be cut down & was taking the advice of tree experts as to the best means of rendering the trees on the estate safe for all parties concerned. The tenant, having paid compensation under Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1925 to 1934, to the widow of his deceased servant, alleged that the owner was the person legally liable for the accident, & brought an action against him under sect. 30 (2) of the Act of 1925 for an indemnity:—Held: by the Ct. of Appeal, that the action could not be maintained for the following reasons—namely: that the tenant himself, if personal injury had been caused to him by the falling branch, could not have maintained an action against the owner inasmuch as, first (per GREER, L.J. & BENNETT, J.), the owner was under no duty to the tenant to protect him against the risk of the branch falling, the tenant having taken the demised land without objection in the condition in which it was at the date of the tenancy agreement with the dead branch overhanging it, & secondly (per GREER & MACKINNON, L.J.J., BENNETT, J. dissenting on this point) that, if the owner was under any such duty, he had taken reasonable care to discharge it; that the owner could be under no higher duty to the tenant's servant lawfully on the demised land or to the representative of such deceased servant than he was under to the tenant himself; that the fatal injury to the tenant's servant had not therefore been caused in circumstances creating a legal liability in the owner under the above-mentioned sub-sect.; & consequently that the tenant as the person by whom the compensation had been paid was not entitled under that sub-sect. to be indemnified by the owner of the estate.—*SHIRVELL v. 652a. ————.]—(1) By a settlement certain hereditaments were settled to the use of certain trustees during the life of A. without impeachment of waste upon the trusts, & with & subject to the powers therein after declared, with remainders as therein mentioned, & it was declared that the hereditaments were thereby limited to the trustees upon trust, during the life of A., that if at the time of such limitation taking effect in possession A. should not be or have been bkpt. the trustees should allow him to enter into & remain in the possession or receipt of the rents & profits of the settled estates during his life or until he should become bkpt. By an agreement, dated Dec. 7, 1920, A. agreed to sell all the timber standing in certain portions of the settled estates. On Jan. 18, 1922, a contract was entered into by A. for sale of part of the settled land, subject to the agreement of Dec. 7, 1920, & on Mar. 14, 1922, such land was conveyed to the purchaser, subject to the agreement:—Held: the proceeds of sale of the timber belonged to A.

(2) At the date of the contract for the sale of land & at the date of the conveyance, part of the timber, to the value of about £500, remained uncut:—Held: although as regards the purchaser of the land the timber was divided from the freehold, yet nevertheless it remained part of the inheritance & subject to the limitations of the settlement; accordingly, it did not vest in A., but being however part of the inheritance & still remaining subject to the limitations of the settlement, on severance it became the property of A., & therefore the £500 belonged to him.—*Re LONDESBOROUGH (EARL), SPICER v. 804 1. Contract to take timber by valuation—Valuation by joint valuers—Subsequent valuation by valuers of vendor.—Deft. agreed to purchase all merchantable timber whether "standing or down" on four lots belonging to pltf. at $7 per M. deft. to do his own logging & take the timber off. After logging for two years, deft. decided to cease work & as some merchantable timber remained the parties agreed that two cruisers, one appointed by each party, should estimate the quantity left & deft. should pay pltf. $7 per M. for what remained. The cruisers reported, but pltf. being dissatisfied with their finding, had two of his own cruisers to make an estimate & they found that more than double the amount of merchantable timber remained. On examination, the joint cruisers admitted they did not cruise two of the lots, as these lots had been logged by deft. & they concluded, without examination, there was no merchantable timber there. Pltf.'s own cruisers reported that there were 80,000 feet of "down" timber on these two lots, which were merchantable. Pltf.'s action to recover the value of the remaining timber as found by his own cruisers was dismissed:—Held: the joint cruise was such a partial estimate of the remaining timber that it could not be regarded as a cruise contemplated by the parties, & it was not binding.—*REINBETH v. 807 ii. ————.]—Construction—Time for removal of timber.—M. conveyed to B. all the timber on his land, with a right for B. at all reasonable times during — years to enter & cut & remove same:—Held: the instrument did not convey to B. the fee simple in the avoidable damage which might be done in the removal of the lots, & further undertook to cut and clear all the lots from the lands by Mar. 25, 1936, & if any timber should not be removed by that date, defts. should become liable for any damage that might be occasioned to the vendor by reason of such non-removal. Subsequently, by two conveyances of Nov. 11, 1933, & July 12, 1934, the vendor conveyed certain lands to pltf., which included the lands upon which then stood the trees comprised in the various lots sold to defts. These trees were excepted from the respective sales to pltf., & the lands were sold subject to the contract & the rights of the vendor & defts. contained therein. By an assignment of Apr. 27, 1936, between the vendor & pltf., the vendor assigned to pltf. the benefit of all the provisions on the part of defts. (other than the payment of the purchase money) contained in the contract, so far as the same were for the benefit of the lands comprised in the conveyances. Defts. felled the trees & removed the trunks before Mar. 25, 1936, leaving behind the lops & tops of the trees on pltf.'s lands, & refused to remove them. Pltf. instituted proceedings claiming damages in respect of (i) the cost of removing the lops & tops of the trees, (ii) loss in the exercise of the sporting rights, & (iii) damage caused to growing timber by the non-removal of the lops & tops. Defts. maintained that, according to the true construction of the contract & the custom of the trade in trees, the word "timber" did not include tops or lops of trees, & further, that pltf. was a stranger to the contract, & they were not liable to him in respect of any breach of it:—Held: (1) the word "timber" in the contract was used in a comprehensive sense, & could not be read as referring to only the trunks of the trees; (2) the assignment of

Apr. 27, 1936, transferred to pltf. all the benefit of the contract other than the right to receive the purchase money; (3) the lops & tops of the trees which were not removed remained the property of defts., & there had been a breach of the contract to remove them, & pltf. was entitled to damages in respect of such breach.—*SKIPWITH (SIR GREY) v. Merchantable timber was to mean & include all trunks & branches of trees not less than six inches in diameter at a height of four feet from the ground. The purchasers took possession of the forest, but shortly afterwards an agrarian law was passed in Latvia under which the forest & all the timber therein became the property of the Latvian State, the agreement became annulled, & all the rights of vendors & purchasers in the forest & the timber became entirely confiscated:—Held: the contract was not an executed contract on the 810b. Sale of timber with right to remove.—Whether right to remove amounts to condition.—On a sale of timber or an exception of timber together with a right to get it, it is not necessary to treat the words conferring the right as a condition of the sale or exception.

A conveyance of woodland contained an exception of timber with full right & liberty for the vendor to enter upon the woodland at all times up to a fixed date & to fell & remove the timber:—Held: the property in timber not removed after the fixed date remained vested in the vendor.—*ELLIS v. In the said licence was a reservation to the public, with the permission of the Crown, to go in at any time on the said lands & cut down timber for public works:—Held: the interpretation of the words "public works" or "public purposes" in the Crown Lands' Act, or the instruments issued under that Act, cannot be so construed as to be applicable to the building of a "railroad".—PHILLIPS v. REID (1899), 8 Nfld. L. R. 241.—NFLD.

sh. — Forfeiture for breach of covenant.—Waiver.—A timber licensee over an area in Newfoundland for ninety-nine years was issued in 1915 under the local Crown Lands Act, 1903, as amended in 1911, the licensee agreeing to pay an annual rent & royalties. The licensee provided that it was subject to the express condition that the licensee should erect a saw mill or pulp factory to be completed by 1920, also to the conditions of the Act, & that if the licensee should make default in performing "any of the conditions herein contained" the licence should be null & void. One of the conditions in the Act was that a licensee was to work the licensed area in a bona fide manner, & operate the mill or factory erected, in each year; but that condition was not set out in the licence. The Act, as amended in 1911, provided for forfeiture only for non-payment of rent or royalties; for any breach of the other conditions the licensee was to be liable to a penalty not exceeding $10,000, & a penalty not exceeding $100 for every day the breach continued. By an amending Act of 1918 a breach of any condition was made a cause of forfeiture. The licensee & his assign did nothing under the license except to pay the rent. Rent paid in 1928 was accepted, but was returned later. In 1930 the Crown sued for a declaration that the license was null & void, or was forfeited, & for penalties & damages:—Held: (1) the license was subsisting, because (a) the provision that upon relevant default it was to be void was to be treated as making it merely voidable at the option of the Crown; (b) the words "conditions herein contained" meant the conditions set out, & did not include the incorporated statutory conditions; (c) the condition set out as to the erection of a mill or factory had been broken once & for all in 1920, & forfeiture on that account had been waived by the acceptance of rent in 1928, & there had not been any later breach of a condition for which there was a right of forfeiture, as the Act of 1918 applied only to licenses issued after it was passed; (2) damages could not be recovered, as there was no contractual obligation by the licensee to perform the conditions, nor daily penalties, as there was no continuing breach; but, by agreement, the case should be remitted for the trial ct. to decide the amount of lump sum penalty to be imposed.—*JARDINE v. The timber had been cut under an agreement between def. & a lumber co., whereby def., as licensee, had granted to the co. the right to enter upon the lands to cut, remove & carry away therefrom, "for the co.'s own use & benefit" all the timber & trees situated & growing thereon:—Held: the royalties were payable by the lumber co., not by def.—*A. This bough suddenly broke in fine weather, fell upon pltf.'s vehicle then passing, & caused damage. Neither deflt. nor his servants knew that the bough was dangerous, & the fracture was due to a latent defect not discoverable by any reasonably careful inspection:—Held: deflt. was not liable, as the mere fact that the tree overhung the highway did not make the tree a nuisance, & as he neither knew nor ought to have known of the actual danger, & there was no absolute obligation on him to support a tree overhanging the road unless it appeared, or would appear on a proper inspection, that nature could no longer be relied upon to support it.—NOBLE v. Part X.—Fertilisers, Feeding Stuffs and Seeds.

NOTE.—Fertilisers & Feeding Stuffs Act, 1906 (c. 27), was repealed by Fertilisers & Feeding Stuffs Act, 1926 (c. 45).

971a. Feeding stuffs—Act of 1906, s. 1 (4).]—In Sept. 1922, pltf., a pig-keeper, saw defts.' managing director, who offered to sell him the bakery sweepings as pig food at 2s. 6d. a bag. Pltf. accepted the offer & purchased the sweepings from defts. & fed five pigs with it successfully from Sept. 1922 to Jan. 1923, when the pigs became ill & four of them died. The sweepings consisted of ingredients used in making bread, together with dust & dirt & other odds & ends & string:—Held: the words "on the sale of any article" in the above sub-sect. were wide enough to cover the sale of these bakery sweepings; the effect of the sub-sect. was to put the risk upon the seller, who, knowing the constituents of the article which he chose to sell as food for cattle, was made responsible if in fact it contained some article deleterious; if the seller desired to protect himself against the stringent provisions of the Act, it was competent to him to do so by a special contract made for that purpose.—PULLING v. 978a. — Effect of—"Reasonable excuse."—

(1) As the object of the Act of 1906 in requiring the vendor to give the statutory invoice & imposing on him a penalty in the event of his default is to protect the purchasers of fertilisers, the effect of non-compliance with the requirement is not merely to render the vendor liable to the penalty; but also to make the sale illegal & preclude the vendor from suing for the price. (2) The fact that, owing to the nature of the article sold as a fertiliser, an analysis of it would necessitate so expensive a process as to make it impossible to sell it after analysis at a profit, affords no "reasonable excuse" within sect. 6 (1), for omitting to give the invoice required by the Act. Semble: neither will impossibility of analysis afford any excuse, the intention of the statute in that event being to prohibit the sale of the article altogether. (3) The expression "without prejudice to any civil liability" in sect. 6 (1) refers to the civil liability of the vendor, not to that of the purchaser.—ANDERSON, LTD. v. DANIEL, [1924] 1 K. 978b. — Fertilizers & Feeding Stuffs Act, 1926 (c. 45)—Implied warranty of fitness—Sale for purpose of resale.—Pltfs. bought from defts., both being cattle food merchants, a quantity of linseed cake. Defts. sold in their own name, but they were in fact acting in the transaction as brokers for a bank to whom the goods had been hypothecated as security for certain bills of exchange which had been refused acceptance by the drawees. The sale note stated (inter alia) that the cake was sold "tel quel," & that the analysis, for which

defts. said they accepted no responsibility, showed that the cake was "castor free." Pltfs. resold portions of the cake to their customers as food for cattle. It then appeared on further analysis that portions of the cake contained castor seed, a constituent injurious to cattle; & in fact cattle which were fed on some of the cake were injured. Claims were thereupon made upon pltfs. by their purchasers in respect of the damage so caused to their cattle, & pltfs. then claimed damages from defts., including in their claim the amounts they had to pay to the sub-purchasers:—Held: (1) the sale of the cake by defts. to pltfs. was a sale for use as food for cattle, within sect. 2 (2) of above Act, notwithstanding that pltfs. themselves did not intend to use the cake for that purpose but intended to resell it to those who would so use it; (2) the sale, though in fact effected by defts. on behalf of the bank, was not a sale "in exercise of a statutory power to enforce a right or to satisfy a claim or lien," within sect. 24 of above Act, so as to be exempt from the operation of the Act; (3) pltfs. were entitled to damages from defts. for the breach of the statutory warranty, & were entitled to include in those damages the amounts they were liable to pay to their sub-purchasers.—*DOBELL (G. - 979e. Potatoes—Validity of charge.—Pltfs. were the Board constituted under S. R. & O., 1933, No. 1186, to administer the Potato Marketing Scheme. Under the scheme they had power to charge any registered producer who exceeded his “basic potato acreage,” if such excess was likely in the opinion of the Board, to increase their expenditure. The Board in 1934 passed a resolution that their expenditure was likely to be increased if in that year the potato acreage of any registered producer exceeded his basic potato acreage. The resolution then proceeded thus: “& whereas in the opinion of the Board each registered producer ought to contribute the sum of £5 per acre in respect of each acre of his excess acreage towards defraying such increased expenditure, . . . the Board hereby require every registered producer to pay to the Board on or before Aug. 1, 1934, the sum of £5 per acre in respect of each acre by which his potato acreage for the year 1934 exceeds his basic potato acreage”.—Held: this was not dealing with the registered producers collectively, but with each one separately. The charge of the registered producers was not an arbitrary one, but a proper exercise of the power vested in the Board.—POTATO MARKETING BOARD v. HARLOW, [1936] 1 All E. R. 489; 80 Sol. Jo. 347.

See Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24).

- 979g. Middlings—Whether flour or offals—Effect of Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24).—The Wheat Commission, as empowered by Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24), demanded quota payments from appls. in respect of fifteen consignments of certain goods produced by the milling of wheat imported by the appls. from Germany & described by them as wheat offals known in the trade as “middlings” to be used as animal or poultry food. The Commission contended that the alleged wheat offals contained a percentage of flour in excess of that permitted by the Act, & were therefore liable to quota payment. Payment of the quota on each consignment was made under protest by appls. who thereafter brought an action against the Commission to recover the money thus paid on the ground that the imported goods were not flour, but wheat offals exempt from liability under the Act. The Commission alleged that: (i) the consignments consisted of flour within the Act; (ii) no action lay against the Commission because provision was made by the Act & the bye-laws made thereunder by the Commission for the matters in dispute to be determined by arbn. to which, in accordance with the bye-law in question, the Arbn. Act, 1889, should not apply; and (iii) the payments in respect of three of the consignments having been made more than six months before the commencement of the action, the claim for recovery thereof was barred by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61).—Held: (1) Wheat Act, 1932 (c. 24), contained no express words ousting the jurisdiction of the ct., & resps. therefore exceeded their powers by making a bye-law that every dispute as to whether any substance was flour should be determined by arbn. to which Arbitration Act, 1889, should not apply; (2) appls. having proved that all the consignments consisted of wheat offals & not of flour within the Act, they were not liable to make any quota payments; (3) as resps. were a public authority the quota payments made by appls. in respect of three of the consignments were not recoverable on the ground that appls. did not sue for their recovery within six months of payment as required by Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (c. 61).—PAUL (R. & W.), LTD v.

49b. ——— Burden of proof.—(1) In 1893 ptfs. were admittedly German nationals, & on the bond fide assumption that they were still German nationals on Jan. 10, 1920, when the charge under Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi) attached, deft. was in possession of their London property as custodian. In an action to obtain release of their property:—Held: the onus was on ptfs. to show that they had lost their original German nationality before Jan. 10, 1920, & not on deft. to disprove it.

Ptfs. had left their birthplace, Idar, in the district of Birkenfeld, about 1893, & with the exception of short annual visits to their mother, & in the case of one, six weeks' military training in 1896, they had resided uninterruptedly out of Germany from 1893 to 1917 or 1918, when they were repatriated, after war internment, to Idar, where according to the police register entries, if genuine, they were registered as stateless on their arrival, & also on their departure for Amsterdam in 1920. On Jan. 29, 1923, the Birkenfeld Govt. after inquiry as to the period of ptfs. absence from Germany, & as to their German visits during that period, granted them certificates to the effect that during that period they had forfeited their German nationality by ten years' "uninterrupted" residence abroad within North German Nationality Law, 1870, s. 21, & were therefore stateless on Jan. 10, 1920. These certificates were based on the view of the Administrative Cts. which, in considering whether German visits break the ten years' period, look to the number, length, purpose & intent of those visits. They were, however directly contrary to the view of the Leipzig Reichsgericht, which holds that the smallest visit, accidental or otherwise, breaks the period:—Held: (2) the certificates, which were admittedly only prima facie evidence & open to review in any German ct., were not conclusive in an English ct., & the onus was on ptfs. to substantiate them; (3) if the Leipzig ct. view was right, the certificates were invalid; (4) even if the Administrative Ct. view was right, ptfs. had failed to satisfy the English ct. that an Administrative Ct. on being informed of all the circumstances, including fraudulent conduct by ptfs., applications as German nationals in 1915 & 1921, & previous false statements as to their German visits, would necessarily uphold the certificates; (5) having regard to the conflict of opinion in the German cts., ptfs. had failed to discharge the onus of proving that by unquestionable & undoubted German law they had lost their nationality on Jan. 10, 1920.—HAHN v.

H. was born in England of English parents but had resided in Germany since 1906 & had been twice married there to German wives. During the war, on Aug. 8, 1916, he obtained a certificate of naturalisation as a German. In these circumstances a summons was taken out by the trustees to have it determined whether the life interest of H. in the funds was forfeited by the charge imposed on property of German nationals in this country on Jan. 10, 1920, by the Treaty of Peace with Germany, art. 297, or Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, & how the income accrued since Aug. 4, 1914, ought to be disposed of. It was admitted at the hearing on behalf of H. that in a German ct. applying German law he would be recognised as a German citizen. No question arose as to the income before Nov. 4, 1915, which had been paid over to H.'s agent:—Held: (1) the decision whether a person was a German national within the Treaty & Order fell to be determined exclusively by German municipal law, & accordingly H. was a German national; (2) H.'s interest under the settlement was forfeited as on Jan. 10, 1920, & subject to the payment of costs the accumulations of income in the trustees' hands from Nov. 4, 1915, to Jan. 10, 1920, must be paid to the custodian; (3) as the question raised was one that might affect a large section of the British public the A.-G. was a proper party to the proceedings.—*Re CHAMBERLAIN'S SETTLEMENT, CHAMBERLAIN v. - 65a. — Detention of property—Ratification by Crown—Citizen of friendly State personally hostile to Crown.]—(1) It is not a good defence to an action of tort brought by a friendly alien resident in the United Kingdom against an officer of the Crown in respect of the wrongful seizure & detention of the alien's property that the seizure & detention have been adopted & ratified by the Crown as an act of State.
Pltf., who was born in Ireland, having become a naturalised American citizen, returned to Ireland in 1916 & took part in the rebellion of Easter, 1916, & was interned. On his release he took part in illegal drilling, & on being arrested in Ireland, a sum of money was found upon him, which was taken & detained by the police authorities, the seizure & detention being subsequently ratified by the Chief Secretary for Ireland. In an action by pltf. against the Chief Comr. of the Police for the recovery of the money, deft. pleaded that pltf. was an alien & that the money was detained by direction of the Crown as an act of State:—Held: the plea was bad & pltf. was entitled to judgment.

who was a British subject naturalised in this country & denationalised in Germany, at the election to be held in March of that year, on the ground of his enemy birth. Upon the invitation of the committee appt., first in a letter & afterwards at an interview, set forth various facts in proof of his loyalty to the country of his adoption, but eventually the committee refused to re-elect him. Appt. impeached this decision on the ground that the committee had acted arbitrarily & capriciously & had been influenced by irrelevant considerations:—Held: the decision of the committee had proceeded solely 198a. ———. ———. ———. In Jan. 1914, plffs. entered into a contract with defts., who were a co. incorporated under the laws of Belgium & had their registered office at Antwerp, to sell to them manganese ore deliverable in certain quantities during the second half of 1914 & the three following years alongside steamer in Bombay. In Sept. 1914, when the German armies were threatening Antwerp, the managing director of deft. co. removed all the co.'s goods & the money in bank to London & came himself to London, & there, without any formal authority from the co., carried on business in his own name, but for the benefit of the co. After the German occupation of Antwerp the German authorities placed the co. under compulsory administration. During the German occupation, meetings of the directors & shareholders were held at which formal business was transacted. These meetings were held so as to comply with Belgian law & to keep the co. in existence. The co. also collected & paid debts due to & owing by it in order to prevent the German authorities from winding up the co. & investing the uncalled capital in German War Loan, & with the like object it created a debt against its uncalled capital in favour of its bankers for the purpose of paying arrears of dividend on its preference shares. Plffs. contended that the co. was an enemy, & they claimed a declaration that the contract was dissolved & was no longer binding on them :—Held : plffs. were entitled to the declaration claimed; though acts which were necessary merely for the purpose of keeping the co. in existence might not amount to "carrying on business" within the Proclamation of Sept. 14, 1915, the collection of debts & discharge of liabilities with the intention of continuing the business amounted to a "carrying on business," & constituted the co. an "enemy" within the Proclamation.—CENTRAL INDIA MINING CO. v. 198c. Registered in allied country—Government overthrown—Non-recognition of usurping Government.]—Plffs., an insurance co. with its registered office at Petrograd & a branch office in England, in Apr. 1917, entered into a reinsurance treaty with defts., an English insurance co., whereby plffs. reinsured part of the risks of defts. At the end of the first year there was a balance in favour of plffs. In an action to recover the amount of the balance defts. pleaded that as the Bolsheviks had in Nov. 1917, usurped supreme power in Russia, & as the British Govt. was carrying on warlike operations against them plffs. were alien enemies, & that owing to the entire suspension of business in Petrograd by reason of the usurpation the basis of the contract had been destroyed :—Held : as the Bolshevik Govt. had not been recognised by this country as the Russian Govt., & as plffs. had not adhered to the Bolsheviks plffs. were not alien enemies; & as defts. with knowledge of the facts had continued to treat the contract as alive by crediting plffs. with premiums & debiting them with losses, the Bolshevik revolution had not so destroyed the basis of the contract as to put an end to it, & plffs. were entitled to recover.—EASTERN CARRYING INSURANCE CO. v. owners of the steamship K. for the amount of the damage arising out of a collision between the two vessels, & the damages were referred to the registrar & merchants for assessment. Before debts had filed their claim in the registry the war had broken out. A few days before the Peace Treaty was ratified the claim & vouchers were filed, but by consent they were treated as having been filed after the ratification. Thereupon pliffs. took out a summons for an order to set aside the filing & service of the claim & vouchers on the ground that under arts. 296 & 297 of the Treaty & Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi & xvii), the parties had no right to litigate the claim in the registry, inasmuch as, being a debt owing to German nationals, it had to be settled through the intervention of clearing houses:—Held: (1) debts' claim was not a debt but a right, which by the Peace Treaty, art. 297, was subject to the right to be retained & liquidated "in accordance with the law of the allied State . . . concerned," namely, Great Britain; (2) not being a debt, art. 296 did not apply; (3) although debts would not be able to handle the sum awarded, there was nothing in art. 297 or in Treaty of Peace Order, s. 1 (xvii) to deprive debts of their right to proceed to a reference, or to prevent pliffs. paying money into ct. with a notice that it was in satisfaction of the claim of German subjects.—THE MARIE GARTZ, [1920] P. 172; 89 L. 215 i. Licensed to trade for limited purposes—Banking transactions.—The London agency of a German bank, which at the outbreak of war in 1914 became an enemy, held a bill, drawn by a German subject & accepted by a Scotsman, which had been sent from Germany for collection. It had been the practice of the bank that, if bills so sent were dishonoured, no legal proceedings were taken against acceptors in Great Britain, but the bills were retransmitted to the German office so that proceedings might be taken in the German cts. against the German indorsers. Licences covering the whole period of the war were issued to the London agency, empowering it to carry on banking business under supervision, to the extent of completing current transactions, so as to make its realisable assets available to its creditors, "so far as those transactions would in ordinary course have been carried out through" the London establishment. The bill having been dishonoured on presentation, was retained by the London agency, which debited the German office with the amount, & filed a letter, which owing to war conditions could not be sent, to the German office intimating the circumstances. In an action on the bill brought in 1923 by the Public Trustee against the Scottish acceptor:—Held: as an action on the bill was not a transaction that would in ordinary course have been carried out through the London agency, the licence conferred no right to sue.—PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. DAVIDSON, [1925] S. C. 451.—SCOT.

215g. ———.]—Under the trusts of a marriage settlement of 1903 & in the events that had happened certain infant children, German nationals, were on Jan. 10, 1920, when the Peace Treaty came into operation, entitled contingently on attaining twenty-one or marrying to an annuity of £150 a year. If neither infant attained a vested interest the annuity passed to the husband, also a German national. The annuity was secured by the covenant of the wife's parents with the trustees, all British subjects, & was payable during the lives of the surviving covenantor & the surviving child, but the trustees were not to be liable for any loss occasioned by their neglect to enforce the covenant. The infants' contingent title accrued in possession on the wife's death on July 17, 1918, but the trustees had not enforced the payment of any instalment since then. The custodian having claimed the annuity, the trustees submitted the matter to the ct. The custodian had not obtained a vesting order:—Held: both the arrears & the contingent future instalments payable after Jan. 10, 1920, were property rights or interests within Peace Treaty Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi), & notwithstanding the infants' personal incapacity, were caught by the charge.—Re NEUBURGER'S SETTLEMENT, FORESHEW v. 215h. ——— Accumulations of annuities.]—By his will dated Mar. 31, 1911, a testator bequeathed an annuity of £250 to an Austrian national "until he shall die or voluntarily or involuntarily alienate or encumber . . . the same." Testator died on Aug. 22, 1914, during the war. The annuity was therefore accumulated in the hands of his legal personal representative, who made the proper returns to the custodian under Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914 (c. 12), s. 3, but no vesting order was made under sect. 4. By Treaty of Peace (Austria) Order, 1920, the annuity & its accumulations were, as from July 16, 1920, charged in favour of the administrator of Austrian Property, to secure (inter alia) payment of debts owing by Austrian to British nationals:—Held: (1) the accumulations up to July 16, 1920, passed to the administrator of Austrian property; (2) the charge created by Treaty of Peace Order was not an involuntary alienation or encumbrance within the meaning of the will, so that the current annuity since July 16, 1920, was not forfeited, but was payable to the administrator of Austrian property.—Re BIEDERMANN, BEST v. Art. 249 of that Treaty provided that "subject to any contrary stipulation" in the Treaty, the British Govt. might retain & liquidate the property in this country of "nationals of the former Austrian Empire" which expression, as the ct. found, included the Austro-Hungarian Bank, & charge it with the payment of claims by British nationals in respect of (inter alia) debts due to them by Austrian nationals. By the same article Austria undertook to compensate her own nationals for the retention of & charge upon their property. Defts. were the custodian of enemy property in this country & the administrator appointed by Order in Council to liquidate the property of Austrian nationals in this country & administer the above-mentioned charge. Pltfs. claimed that art. 206 was a "contrary stipulation" within art. 249, that the property of the bank in this country was consequently not subject to the charge, & that they & not defts. were entitled to administer that property :—Held : there was no inconsistency between the two articles, which dealt with different subject matters, the only effect of art. 249 upon the liquidation under art. 206 being to replace the assets of Austrian nationals in this country by assets of equal value in Austria if the Austrian Govt. carried out its undertaking, & the action must be dismissed.—*LUXARDO v. In regard to one of the above cos. no vesting order was ever obtained by the Canadian Custodian, but as to the others vesting orders were obtained subsequent to the action by the American Custodian, namely, in 1919, but none of the "securities" were ever transferred to him nor is it in evidence that such orders were served on the cos. :—Held : (1) the beneficial ownership in or title to the securities herein was in him who held the paper, & that it is the law of the place where the paper was that determined who was the holder. The contention that certificates of securities are but evidence of ownership, is not inconsistent with the idea that an assignment & delivery of the certificates carries the title and property in the securities; (2) under the Canadian Consolidated

Orders enemy property was not automatically confiscated, but the owners' enjoyment thereof was suspended until the restoration of peace, & subject to any legislation to the contrary or anything to the contrary contained in the Treaty of Peace, such enemy was then entitled to his property, or if liquidated, to its proceeds. It was only the transfer of securities by or on behalf of an enemy that was prohibited by the publication of these Orders; (3) under the Peace Order only two classes of enemy property passed to Canada: (a) property in Canada belonging to an enemy on Jan. 10, 1920, & not in the possession or control of the Custodian, & (b) enemy property in the possession & control of the Custodian on that date; (4) there was nothing to be found in the Canadian War Measures prohibiting or avoiding the transfers of the securities in issue as made by the American Custodian; on Jan. 10, 1920, the property, right or interest in the securities mentioned & the title to the same did not belong to an enemy & was not at that date in the control or possession of the Canadian Custodian; & the property, right or interest in such securities & the title to the same belonged to the Alien Property Custodian of the United States.—*SECRETARY OF STATE OF CANADA v. two of his sons, naturalised British subjects, with the necessary capital to establish a business in London. The agreement, under which he handed to his sons for that purpose for 20 years certain American securities valued at over nine million marks, further provided (inter alia), that after the father's death, but not in any event until after the expiration of 20 years from the date of the agreement, the two brothers should divide the value of the securities—the fund representing the securities having been in law throughout in this country—equally between themselves & their brother & their four sisters & the descendants of such of them as might previously have died. By his will the father later stipulated that if through political or other crises the two sons were not able to distribute the funds promptly in Apr. 1919—20 years from the date of the agreement—they should be entitled to wait until such time as they were in a position to do so. Acting under that testamentary provision the two sons prolonged the period under the agreement to Dec. 1927, but in Nov. 1927, the present applts., German nationals, who were two of their sisters & six children of a deceased sister, instituted proceedings claiming that they possessed beneficial shares in the securities which constituted them creditors of their two brothers. They further alleged that the Administrator of German Property in this country, who came in as a party claiming that applts.' interests constituted "property, rights, and interests" in this country within Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, had no claim upon the property. The question whether applts. enjoyed rights under the agreement of Apr. 4, 1899, admittedly depended on the construction & effect of the agreement on applying the law of the Saxon Civil Code:—Held: under the German law it was only on proving both an intention on the part of the promisor to be bound to the third parties & the adoption of the contract by the third parties that they could become parties to the contract, & in the present case neither by intention in the agreement itself nor by adoption did the applts. possess rights under the agreement, & whatever claims existed under it could only be enforced against the two brothers who were parties to it by a duly constituted representative in this country of the estate of the father. According to German law applts. had no interest except as members of the community of heirs, & inasmuch as there had been no partition of the estate no member of that community of heirs had any right to any specific asset or share, & the action was misconceived.—HARTMANN v. KONIG (1933), 50 T. L. R. 114, H. L.

- 215n. — — — Policy money—Payable in England.]—Pltf. co. was incorporated by special Act of the Legislature of New York, & had its central office & the bulk of its assets in New York. The co. had a branch in London, & in most of the capitals of Europe, the branch in Paris being its head office for Europe. The general manager of the London branch had no general authority to issue policies in this country. Certain life policies signed by the president & secretary of the co. & countersigned by the general manager for Europe were issued in London to German nationals before the outbreak of the war. The policies were not under seal. The policy moneys were expressed to be payable in London, but all premiums were payable either at the central office in New York or at the office where the insurance was payable & proofs of death were to be furnished at the New York office. An indorsement on the policy provided that it should be construed according to English law. In an action to determine whether the policy moneys payable under the policies in question, which had matured on or before Jan. 10, 1920, the date when the Treaty of Peace with Germany came into force, were "property, rights & interests within His Majesty's Dominions" belonging to German nationals, & as such were subject to the charge created by Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, s. 1 (xvi):—Held: (1) there was nothing in art. 299 of s. V. of the Peace Treaty, or in par. 11 of the annex thereto, to indicate that the property, rights, & interests of the assured under such contracts were to be excluded from the general charge under par. 4 of the annex to s. IV.; (2) inasmuch as a corp'n. might have a dual residence, & there was evidence that pltf's. were resident both in New York & in London carrying on business in both places & in both places being subject to the jurisdiction of the cts., it was permissible & necessary to look at the terms of the contracts & to determine from them at what place the debts would be recoverable. Applying that test in the present case, the debts were recoverable in London where they were expressed to be payable, & that being so, they were situate within His Majesty's Dominions & became subject to the charge.—*NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO. v. So far as English law is concerned one partner in a firm who purchases the share of an enemy partner therein during hostilities acquires no fresh right & has no fresh remedy as a result of such purchase. Such enemy's interest in the concern still falls within the category of "property, rights, & interests" subject to the charge created by Treaty of Peace Order, s. 1 (xvi) for the purpose of giving effect to art. 297, & by Treaty of Peace Orders, s. 1 (xvii) (ccc) is payable to the administrator of German property.—*FRIED v. - 215p. — — — Chose in action.]—In Feb. 1912, three parcels of goods were shipped in a British steamship from Baltimore for Hamburg. The ship sailed & was never heard of again. The goods were insured with M., who were German nationals carrying on business in New York. The assured claimed against M., & some time before Nov. 1918, were paid by M. for a total loss; whereupon the bills of lading were handed over to M. by the assured.

Actions on the contract of carriage against the shipowners were commenced in England for the benefit of M. & other insurers by the owners of the goods & damages were recovered, of which the sum of $4,538, being that portion which corresponded with M.'s share in the insurance, was claimed by deft. to be subject in his hands to the charge created by the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919. On Nov. 18, 1918, after the outbreak of war between the United States & Germany & after proceedings had been commenced in England, pltf., in pursuance of the American Trading with the Enemy Act, 1917, & executive Orders made thereunder, made a demand upon M., the effect of which was to vest in him as Alien Property Custodian all the property, rights, claims & assets of M. within the United States. In an action by pltf. claiming payment by deft. of the said sum of $4,538 so recovered by M. & in the hands of deft. as Administrator of German Property:—Held: (1) on the crucial date, Nov. 18, 1918, M. had by subrogation an equitable interest as against the owners of the goods in the right of action which those owners had for the loss of their goods to the extent that was necessary to recoup to M. the amount paid on the policies of insurance; (2) that right of action came within the general rule that choses in action must be taken to be situate in the country where they are properly enforceable; (3) notwithstanding the fact that the bills of lading & other documents relating to the claim against the shipowners were at the material time in the hands of pltf. in the United States as Alien Property Custodian, the situs of the right of action was in England, & therefore the sum recovered for M. therein passed to deft. & not to pltf.—SUTHERLAND v. GERMAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR, [1934] 1 K. B. 423; 103 L. J. K. B. 244; 150 L. T. 247; 50 T. L. R. 107, C. A.

- 215q. — Joint decisions of Clearing Offices—Effect.—In 1913 defts. had entered into contracts with German sellers for the purchase of a quantity of nitrate, delivery of which was to be made to defts.' agent alongside the vessel at Iquique, & payment for which was to be made in London after presentation of bills of lading. Several cargoes were shipped, but war broke out before the vessels arrived at their destination & before the bills of lading, which were made out to order, could be presented. In these circumstances defts. procured delivery to their sub-purchasers by giving an indemnity to the ships, & presumably received payment for the nitrate from their sub-purchasers. After an interval the German sellers duly notified their claim for the price of the nitrate & for interest to the German clearing office, which in turn passed it on to the British clearing office. Defts. were prepared to pay what the Germans claimed as the price of the goods, though they disputed the existence of any debt, either in the strict legal sense or in the sense in which the expression is used in Treaty of Peace, art. 298, & they disputed the claim for interest. As the Treaty only contemplated the admission of debts, & defts. were prepared to pay the amount claimed as the price of the goods, the British clearing office admitted the debt, & the principal money was cleared in 1923. At a later period the claim for interest was again put forward. This claim defts. still disputed, but the two clearing offices arrived at a joint decision that interest was payable upon the principal sum admitted by the British clearing office. Notice of the decision was conveyed to defts. in a letter dated Sept. 13, 1923. The decision took the form of an intimation that the British & German clearing offices had jointly agreed that interest in accordance with par. 22 of the annex to sect. III. of Part X. of the Treaty was payable upon the admitted debt at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum calculated from dates specified. The notice then continued as follows: "In default of a notice of appeal under r. 22 of the Rules of Procedure of the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal, the interest on the said sum of . . . at the rate of 5 per cent. from (the date named) to the date of crediting & advice to the German clearing office will be credited by the British clearing office to the German clearing office." No appeal was brought, & after the expiry of the time for appealing, pltf., the controller of the British clearing office, sought to enforce this joint decision by action on the ground that a joint decision unappealed from should, on a true construction of the Peace Treaty, be regarded in the same light as if it was a foreign judgment, or the award of an arbitrator, & should, therefore, be enforced by the cts. of this country on the same principle as either a foreign judgment or an award is enforced:—Held: under Treaty of Peace, art. 298, as carried out by Treaty of Peace Act, 1919, & Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, the joint decisions of the clearing offices were not in the nature of judgments or of awards under an arbn., so as themselves to be enforceable by action, & therefore the action failed.—*CLEARING OFFICE CONTROLLER v. Defts. to the action were the trustees & the three children, all German nationals, of a daughter of the testator who had married a German national in 1877 & had remained a German national until her death in 1927:—Held: (1) as the result of the Treaty of Peace with Germany, the Treaty of Peace Act, 1919, & the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, the property of German nationals which was in the United Kingdom at the date of the coming into force of the treaty was taken from them, & can be returned to them only by a conveyance or transfer; (2) in the agreement dated Dec. 28, 1929, between the British & German Governments as to the liquidation of German properties, & the agreement concluded with Germany at the Hague Conference, both ratified in May, 1930, there is nothing to show that the German Government was thereby expressly or by necessary implication purporting to act as agent or trustee on behalf of its nationals so as to give its nationals a right of action.—*GERMAN PROPERTY ADMINISTRATOR v. 215x. — Liability of trustees for payment of income to German national.—Subject to a life interest for B., trustees held part of a trust fund in trust for D. for life with remainder to her children. D., an Englishwoman married to an Englishman, at all material times lived with her family in Germany. B. died in 1917 & thereafter there was no communication between D. & her relatives in England, some of whom were the trustees, until 1927, when the trustees were informed that D. & her family had adopted German nationality during the war. D.'s income from the trust fund had been paid regularly since the end of the war into a bank in England at which D. kept an account, & continued to be so paid until D. died in 1934. The fact of D.'s German nationality was then communicated to the Administrator of German Property, who claimed against the trustees the amount of the income received by D. from 1927, when the trustees first heard of D.'s change of nationality, to Aug. 31, 1929, when all German-owned property which had been under the control of the administrator was released. Other claims had been made, but were abandoned during the hearing. The administrator claimed that the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919 (as amended), s. 1 (17) (ccc) & (e), effected a statutory assignment to the administrator of D.'s life interest, that after 1927 it became the duty of the trustees to pay the income thereafter accruing to the administrator, & that in paying such income to D., the trustees committed a breach of trust & that they were accordingly accountable to the administrator as the rightful beneficiary for the income thus wrongly paid to D. The trustees, in addition to denying that there was a statutory assignment, pleaded that they acted honestly & reasonably within the Trustee Act, 1935 (c. 19), s. 61, & ought fairly to be excused:—Held: (1) the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919, as amended, did not effect a statutory assignment of D.'s life interest; (2) if there were such a statutory assignment, the trustees ought, in the circumstances of the case & notwithstanding that they ought to have known the illegality of paying income to a German national, fairly to be excused for their breach of trust.—*HOLLAND v. The Dresdner Bank accepted the bills at their London branch & received as security Russian promissory notes. Debts provided no funds to meet the bills when they fell due &, under an arrangement between the Treasury & the Bank of England, the amount payable was discharged by the Bank of England. By 1917 the Dresdner Bank in London had repaid the sum due for principal & interest to the Bank of England. In 1918 the Board of Trade, under the above Act, ordered the business carried on by the Dresdner Bank in London to be wound up, & appointed a controller to wind up the business, with power to collect all moneys owing to the bank & to bring actions in the name of the bank:—Held: (1) the transaction was part of the "business" of the London branch of the Dresdner Bank; debts' liability to put the Dresdner Bank in funds to meet the bills was an asset of the London branch within the above sect., even if the London branch accepted the bills on the instructions of the head office in Berlin & debited the current account of the head office with the amount paid on the bills, & debts were liable to repay plffs. the money paid by them to the Bank of England in respect of the bills with simple interest at 5 per cent. on each instalment from the date of payment; (2) the action by the controller in the name of the Dresdner Bank (London Agency) was not an action in the name of a 230 II. ——— Proof of enemy's interest in property.—A British subject applied to the ct. to make a vesting order vesting in the custodian for Scotland a ship & £20,000, the freight earned by the ship while under requisition of the Admiralty. He averred that the enemy firm, & the two partners thereof, were "the owners or at least part-owners of the" ship:—Held: appt. had failed to aver a sufficient interest of the enemy firm & its partners in the ship to make s. 4 (1) of the above Act applicable.—*BURRELL v. 230 III. ——— Installments of purchase price of ship—Paid to builder by enemy—Ship requisitioned by Admiralty.—Scottish shipbuilders contracted to build a ship for Austrian shipowners. On the declaration of war between Great Britain & Austria the vessel was nearing completion, & the purchasers had paid installments of the price amounting to £79,732. On Feb. 17, 1916, the Admiralty requisitioned the ship as she then stood at the price of £86,000, but it was not until July 30, 1917, that the Admiralty paid the builders that sum, & they refused to pay any interest from the date of requisition. On Dec. 1, 1917, the Board of Trade pronounced an order vesting the sum of £79,732, with interest from the date of receipt of the installments, in the custodian for Scotland under the above Act:—Held: the custodian was entitled to decree for £79,732 with interest from the date of the interlocutor of the First Division.—*PENNEY v. al. War Measures Act, 1914 (c. 2)

—What property can be vested—Trust funds—Agreement by beneficiaries as to disposition of fund.—By the will of W., a citizen of the United States, who died in 1918 resident there, the residue of his estate was given to a trustee for the sole use & benefit of the wife & daughter, share & share alike. His daughter was married to a German national, & was residing in Germany at the time of her father's death. W.'s widow was a citizen of the United States. Early in 1917, an agreement was made by the trustee & the wife & daughter, pursuant to clause 11 of the will, by which, in effect, it was agreed that the whole of the assets in Ontario should be allocated to the widow. In May, 1919, an application was made to the ct., by the Secretary of State for Canada, for an order vesting in the custodian appointed under Consolidated Orders respecting Trading with the Enemy, 1916, one-half of the assets situated in Ontario of the estate of W., on the ground that the said half belonged to or was held or managed for or on behalf of W.'s daughter, who was an enemy. The motion was made under Consolidated Order 28, which was passed pursuant to the above Act:—Held: it was appropriate & expedient to make the order asked for.—Re WALKER (1919), 48 O. L. sm. Recovery of enemy debt—Effect of Treaty of Peace & subsequent Orders.—Before the war, F., a German firm, sent to W. Co. in Canada goods on consignment for sale on commission. During the war W. Co. sold the goods & shortly afterwards, sold its assets to C. Co. which assumed W. Co.'s liabilities, including the liability to F. In June, 1920, C. Co., having notice of competing claims by F. & its representative in France, for the amount of said liability, applied for & obtained from the master in chambers, in the Supreme Ct. of Ontario, an order for the payment of the amount into ct. In November, 1925, P., as attorney for F., & the Custodian of Alien Enemy Property each applied for payment to himself of the money in ct.:—Held: the Custodian was entitled to the money; it represented an enemy "debt" owing by a debtor in Canada & recoverable by the Custodian under the regulations of Treaty of Peace (Germany) Order, 1920, Part I.—*CUSTODIAN OF ALIEN ENEMY PROPERTY v. 235a. ——— To wind up partnership—Parties.]—At the outbreak of war three German subjects were carrying on business in London in co-partnership with F., their English partner. Under the partnership articles F. was the managing partner in London, & on the dissolution by the declaration of war he carried on the business & collected the assets with the view of liquidation. No accounts had been taken between the partners since Dec. 31, 1913. F. died in 1920, & deff. was his legal personal representative. By an order of the Board of Trade it was ordered that all the property, rights, & interests of the three German partners in the assets of the firm in respect of any claim against the English partner, or his estate, should vest in pltf., who should take all necessary proceedings to collect what might be due to the German partners. In an action by pltf. as custodian of enemy property with the object of winding up the partnership he claimed an account against deff. of all dealings between the German partners & the English partner, including all dealings with the partnership assets since the dissolution, payment of what should be found due, & an inquiry of what the partnership property consisted. The German partners were not added as pltf.s. in the action:—Held: in the absence of the German partners as parties to the action no such relief as was asked could be granted, & the action failed.—*PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. 236a. ——— Effect of Treaty of Peace & consequent Orders.]—By Treaty of Peace Act, 1919 (c. 33), Treaty of Peace Order, & the Treaty of Peace with Germany, the power conferred by Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914 (c. 12), s. 5 (2), on the ct. to authorise the custodian to pay out of property paid to him in respect of an enemy debts due by that enemy, has, so far as concerns pre-war debts due by German nationals to British nationals, come to an end. Payment of such debts can now be made only through the clearing office established under s. III. of Part X. of the Treaty.—Re NIERHAUS, [1921] 1 Ch. 269; 91 L. J. Ch. 107; 36 T. L. R. 425; 64 Sol. 236b. ——— ]—At the outbreak of war a debt was due from a German bank to the London agency of an Austrian bank. Vesting orders were made, under which the property in England of the German bank was vested in the custodian. An order had been made, under which the business of the London agency was wound up & a controller appointed. The controller applied to the ct. to give directions under the powers conferred by sect. 5 (1) or (2) of the above Act that the debt should be paid out of the property vested in the custodian:—Held: even if the power still subsisted under those sub-sects. to direct such payment to persons who were not British nationals under the Treaty of Peace, such power was discretionary & the ct. would not exercise it, except in very special circumstances, but would leave such debts to be dealt with under the Order in Council to be made at the termination of the war under sect. 5 (1) of the Act.—Re NATIONAL BANK FÜR DEUTSCHLAND, Re ANGLO-AUSTRIAN BANK, [1921] 1 Ch. 284; 90 L. J. Ch. 15; 123 L. T. 647.

237a. ——— Release of funds in favour of British creditors—Mode of distribution.]—Funds were released by the custodian of enemy assets in this country from his charge upon them under the Treaty of Peace Orders, the release being expressly limited in favour of creditors of British nationality. There were no German creditors, but there were some foreign creditors. Upon the trustee's application for directions:—Held: the ct. would direct the funds to be distributed according to Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), but would give the custodian an opportunity of being heard, if he so wished, before the order was drawn up.—Re WISKEMANN, Ex p. TRUSTEE (1923), 92 L. J. Ch. 349; [1923] B. & C. R. 28.

237b. ——— Right to dividends—On shares held by alien enemies.]—An English co. had certain alien enemy shareholders & certain assets in Germany. From time to time after the outbreak of the war with Germany, resolutions were passed by the directors & by the co. in general meeting declaring interim & final dividends respectively, subject in each case to a condition that as regards members of the co. resident in Germany, Austria & Turkey, the dividend should be payable only out of assets in Germany, & as regards members resident elsewhere out of assets in England. By an order made on Aug. 24, 1916, under sect. 4 (1) of the above Act, it was ordered that the right to transfer the shares held by alien enemies & to receive any dividends "now due & to accrue due thereon" vested in the custodian, & the shares were transferred into his name in due course:—Held: the resolutions, so far as they provided for payment only out of assets in Germany, were void as against the custodian, & the co. was liable out of any assets in its hands to pay him the amounts of the dividends, whether declared before or after the vesting order.—ARAMAYO FRANCKE MINES, LTD. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1922] 2 A. C. 406; 91 L. J. Ch. 643; 127 L. T. 661; 38 T. L. R. 756; 66 Sol. Jo. 611, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. Re ARAMAYO FRANCKE MINES, LTD., [1921] 1 Ch. 675, C. A.

237c. ——— Part of trust income—Payable to enemy.]—(1) Held: sect. 2 (1) of the above Act related only to moneys payable under contractual obligations arising out of loans, partnership or membership of a co., & not to trust income payable by trustees to an enemy even when the income was derived from dividends on shares.

(2) By his will a testator, who died in 1904, bequeathed his estate upon trusts whereby the residue & the proceeds of sale thereof were to go in equal shares to his children; & he directed his trustees to retain the share of each of his daughters upon trust during the life of the daughter to pay the annual income to her for her separate use without power of anticipation & until she should do or suffer any act or thing whereby the same, if payable to her absolutely or any part thereof, might have become payable or forfeited to or vested in any other person. In the event of a forfeiture under this provision the income was given upon a discretionary trust during the remainder of the life of the daughter, & subject thereto the daughter's share was to be held in trust for her children & issue as therein mentioned. One of the testator's daughters had intermarried with a German in 1908, & had since resided in Germany. Since the coming into force of the above Act, the trustees had accumulated the income of her share, which amounted on Jan. 10, 1920, the date of the ratification of the Treaty of Peace with Germany, to about £4,000:—Held: the daughter's life interest was not determined on the coming into force of the above Act, but ceased on Jan. 10, 1920, by reason of the Treaty of Peace charge, & the accumulations of income up to that date were subject to the charge.—Re HALLENSTEIN, HALSTEN v. BLANK, [1922] 1 Ch. 355; 91 L. J. Ch. 420; 127 L. T. 58; 38 T. L. R. 313; 66 Sol. Jo. 299.

237d. — Liability of custodian for super tax.—Property belonging to an enemy which is paid to or vested in the custodian under the above Act is, pending its disposition by Order in Council after the termination of the war, removed from the control & beneficial ownership of the enemy. During the interval the beneficial ownership is in statutory suspense or abeyance, the custodian having meanwhile limited powers of dealing with the property.

When war broke out in 1914, M., an enemy within the Act, owned real estate in England & shares & securities in British cos. By orders under sect. 4 of the Act the real estate, shares & securities were vested in the custodian. The Special Comrs. for Income Tax assessed the custodian to super tax as agent or receiver for M. The custodian disputed the legality of the assessment:—Held: (1) M.'s beneficial ownership of the property having ceased on the making of the vesting orders, the profits & gains received by the custodian were received by him in respect of M., but did not in his hands belong to M.; he did not receive or hold them as agent or receiver or trustee for M. within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 41, & therefore, he was not liable to be assessed to super tax; (2) as M. could not, after the war, ask to receive back the property except on the footing that a sum equal to the amount of super tax which, but for the war, he would have been liable to pay was paid, the custodian must, under the discretion given to the ct. by sect. 5 (1) of the Act of 1914, pay that sum to the Comrs. as analogous to payment of a debt under sect. 5 (2).—Re MÜNSTER, [1920] 1 Ch. 268; 89 L. J. Ch. 138; 36 T. L. R. 173; 64 Sol. Jo. 309.

A four-day order was obtained, directing the co. to rectify the register of members, but that order was not complied with. - 389a. — What amounts to "assignment"—Abandonment by enemy insured to neutral insurer.]—In 1916 a firm in Germany despatched to a firm in Lima, both consignors & consignees being at that date enemies within the meaning of the Trading with the Enemy Acts, a parcel of diamonds by a Dutch steamship sailing from Amsterdam, the diamonds being insured against war and other risks with a Swiss insurance co. The British authorities, acting under the Reprisals Order of Mar. 11, 1915, required the Dutch vessel to put in to Kirkwall, where her cargo was examined, & the diamonds being found they were in due course placed in the custody of the Marshal of the Prize Ct., which, in Feb. 1918, ordered their detention & sale. After that order was made, but before the sale was carried out, the assured gave notice of abandonment of the diamonds & ceded all their rights therein to the insurance co., which accepted the notice & paid the assured as for a total loss.

In 1919 the diamonds were sold, & the proceeds were ordered by the Prize Ct. to be handed to the predecessor in title of the Administrator of German property to be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles & the Treaty of Peace Order, 1919. The Swiss insurance co. claiming that as a result of the abandonment to them by the assured the diamonds became their property, now sued the Administrator of German Property to recover the proceeds of the sale:—Held: the action was not maintainable, inasmuch as (1) the notice of abandonment & its acceptance constituted an "assignment" within "Act B," s. 6 (1); (2) the proceeds of sale of the diamonds constituted a "chase in action" within the same sub-sect.; & (3) the Administrator of German Property, as representing the Crown, was entitled to rely on the provisions of that sub-sect. as precluding the insurance co. from recovering.—*ALLGEMEINE VERSICHERUNGS-GESELLSCHAFT HELVETIA v. The diamonds were returned to England by the postal authorities & were seized in the Postal Censor's office in Nov. 1917. They were condemned on the ground that the transaction was a trading with the enemy:—Held: the diamonds were properly condemned, since under Trading with the Enemy (China, Siam, Persia & Morocco) Proclamation, 1915, applts.' agent was for the purpose of "Proc. On Sept. 25, 1914, the Austrian firm wrote a letter purporting to be an assignment to the London firm of a debt due to them by B. The letter contained an enclosure signed by the Austrian firm addressed to B. amounting to a notice of assignment of the debt. In the following December the London firm forwarded it to B.:—Held: as the transaction of Sept. 25 amounted to a valid equitable assignment of a chase in action for valuable consideration, it was not illegal as contravening the above sect.—GRUNDY v. BROADBENT, [1918] 1 I. R. 433.—IR.

The bill was presented for payment on the due date with the shipping documents attached but was dishonoured by non-payment. Ptfs. filed a suit on Sept. 30, 1915, to recover the amount due on the bill:—Held: ptfs. were entitled to succeed, as by the above Proclamation the consignees were permitted to take delivery of goods from enemy ships in neutral ports.—*MOTILAL & Co. v. 402a. ————]—Pltf. was a British subject carrying on business as an exporter of Manchester goods to Turkey. At the outbreak of war between Great Britain & Turkey deft. bank, a Turkish subject, was the holder of sight bills for the invoice amount in sterling of goods consigned by pltf. to Beyrout, which had arrived there shortly before the outbreak of war, & were subsequently delivered to the customers by deft. bank against payment in piastres. At the conclusion of the war deft. bank claimed the right to pay to pltf. an amount in sterling representing the then value of the piastres which they had received in payment for the goods. Pltf. claimed to be paid the sterling amount of the bills, or, in the alternative, damages for their conversion :—Held : (1) as the bank in Beyrout accepted the payment in lawful money from the Syrian merchant & handed over the goods, it constituted itself, as in a question with the drawer, debtor for the sterling amount on the face of the bill ; (2) it was not every contract that was abrogated by the war ; it was only a contract which was still executory & which for its execution required intercourse between the British subject & the enemy, & as the contract had been partially carried out, the bills had been indorsed, & the bank had been handed them together with the indorsed bills of lading, from that a subsidiary contract arose, namely, that on payment of the bills the shipping documents should be handed over, to execute which no intercourse between a British subject & the enemy was necessary ; & the bank was entitled to do what it did, & there could be no question of conversion, & having constituted themselves debtors in sterling, in sterling they must pay. —*OTTOMAN BANK v. 405a. ————]—For many years there existed in Germany works for the manufacture of dyestuffs (Farbenfabriken), belonging to a German concern which carried on business in England through agents. In 1878 the agents were a partnership firm consisting of A. & two other persons. In 1895 A. was the sole partner. In that year a limited co. was formed & registered in England, & in 1898 its name was changed to B. Co. Its original capital was £5,000, divided into 500 shares of £10 each of which A. held five shares & the German concern 470. In 1905 the capital was increased to £25,000 by the issue of 2,000 new shares fully paid, & in 1909 it was increased to £100,000, by the issue of 7,500 like shares. At the times material the German concern held 9,912 shares & A. twenty shares. By an agreement dated in 1910 between the German concern & B. Co., the district of the German concern was defined as the whole world outside the United Kingdom with the Channel Islands & the Isle of Man, & the district of B. Co. as the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands & the Isle of Man. The German concern bound itself not to import 402 v. ————]—Repayment of instalments.—In Apr., 1914, the A. co. contracted to construct machinery for the B. co. by Dec. 31, 1914. Progress payments were made by the B. co., but none of the machinery was ever delivered. After the commencement of the war, an order was, on Nov. 13, 1914, made under Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914, s. 8, appointing C. controller of the B. co., & on June 13, 1918, under Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914-1918, s. 9B, requiring the B. co. to be wound up, & appointing C. controller. The contract was never completed :—Held : the contract became null & void as from the commencement of the war, & neither the B. co. nor C. was entitled to recover from the A. co. any portion of the sum paid as progress payments.—Re CONVENTIONAL (1919), 27 C. 402 v. ————]—A contract between a British firm & an Austrian firm, for the purchase by the latter of goods to be manufactured, provided for an extension of time for delivery if delay should occur owing to causes beyond the control of the sellers. The price was payable by instalments, of which £4,620 was paid to account of the whole when war broke out & it became illegal to implement the contract. None of the goods had at that time been delivered. Thereafter the goods were completed & sold in Great Britain at an enhanced price. Third parties having obtained a decree against the purchasers of the goods arrested money in the hands of the sellers of the goods :—Held : (1) the contract was dissolved by the outbreak of war ; (2) the sum paid to account of the price of the goods belonged to the buyers & was validly arrested in the hands of the sellers.—*DAVIS & PRIMROSE, LTD. v. 402 vi. ————]—In May, 1914, Scottish engineers contracted with Austrian shipbuilders to build a set of marine engines, payment to be by instalments. The first instalment had been paid, but no part of the engines had been built when war broke out & further performance of the contract became legally impossible. After the war on action brought for repetition of the instalment paid :—Held : as the instalment had been paid as part of the price of the engines, & as the engines had not been delivered owing to a cause for which neither of the parties was responsible, defenders were bound to make restitution of the instalment.—*CANTIERE v. In Sept. 1914, an agreement was entered into between the parties by which the terms of payment were varied :—Held : the agreement of Sept. 1914, was not rendered null & void by s. 3 (6) of the above Act, nor by Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914.—*BROOKS & HILL, PROPRIETARY CO., LTD. v. The goods were shipped on July 2, 1914, per a German steamer, which was subsequently captured with her cargo & condemned by the Prize Ct. :—Held : the contract under which the goods would be delivered in the Hooghly became impossible by the outbreak of war within Indian Contract Act, s. 56, & was void.—*MADHORAM HURDOR DAS v. 405 i. ————]—Effect of suspensory clause.—By a contract made after the outbreak of war with Germany to supply German dyes, deft. was not to be liable in case of non-arrival of the steamers at certain ports on account of the state of war. The ship & the dyes therein were seized & condemned by a Prize Ct. :—Held : (1) the contract was unenforceable ; (2) the Royal Proclamation of Sept. 8, 1914, put an end to the contract.—*ABDUL RAZACK v. sp. Debtor of alien enemy.—Payment of interest in respect of transaction entered into before outbreak of war.—Right to repayment.—Where a person indebted to an alien enemy had paid interest in respect of a transaction entered into before the outbreak of hostilities & sought a refund of the amount paid for the period between the outbreak of hostilities & the date of a license to trade obtained by the enemy firm :—Held : he was not entitled to such refund, as there was no suspension of interest in respect of goods into B. Co.'s district except for the purposes of B. Co., & B. Co. bound itself not to import into the German concern's district except for the purposes of the German concern. By an agreement, dated in 1912, between the same parties & operative for seven years, the German concern bound itself to sell to B. Co. & to no one else in the United Kingdom for sale in the United Kingdom anilines & chemicals manufactured by the German concern, & B. Co. bound itself to buy from the German concern & from no other manufacturer such dyestuffs. By unwritten agreement B. Co. was bound from its inception to import only from the German concern. From the time of the registration of B. Co. A.'s firm ceased to act as agents for the German concern. B. Co. sold not in the name of the German concern, but in its own name, & as a principal; but it announced to the world on its office windows, & to its customers on notepaper & other documents & by books, catalogues & samples, that it was the sole importer in England of the manufactures of the German concern. It was thus brought home to the customers that they were buying the produce of the German concern as before. The new régime was in effect a continuation of the agency though legally the agency had ceased. The business of B. Co. was conducted by A. & another director, both resident in England. The German concern supplied them with lists of prices to be charged by the German concern to B. Co., B. Co. making a profit by selling to customers at a price higher than the list. If an English customer offered to buy at a price lower than the list, the German concern would reduce its price to B. Co. accordingly. The overwhelming shareholding of the German concern in B. Co. caused it to be vitally interested, as seller & buyer, in the contract between itself & B. Co. & as seller in the contract between B. Co. & its customer. Down to the outbreak of war between England & Germany on Aug. 4, 1914, the control of B. Co., its business, affairs & acts, were in the hands of the German concern. On Apr. 1, 1914, B. Co. entered into a contract with a British firm for a supply to the firm of dyestuffs, identified by letters & numbers as the manufacture of the German concern or of other German manufacturers, of which samples from Germany were in the possession of the British firm. It was provided that any duties imposed by the British Govt. on the goods should be paid by the British firm or the price should be advanced accordingly. It was further provided that deliveries or orders off the contract might be suspended by either party if any contingency should arise beyond the control of the parties, such fire, as accidents, war, strikes, or the like. The contract covered a period unexpired at the outbreak of war. At that date quantities of dyestuffs remained undelivered & were never afterwards delivered. An order was made by the Board of Trade, under Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916 (c. 105), s. 1, for the winding up of the business of B. Co., & a controller appointed. In the winding up the British firm claimed damages for breach of contract in the non-fulfilment of deliveries. The controller resisted the claim on the grounds: (a) that the contract was dissolved at the outbreak of war, because B. Co. was an enemy or of enemy character, because the parties contracted on the footing that the goods should come from Germany, & because continued existence or performance of the contract would involve intercourse with, or tend to assist the enemy; (b) that owing to the suspension clause no right to damages had yet arisen; (c) that the object of the contract had been frustrated, because the period of suspension was indefinite & beyond the contemplation of the parties, because performance of the contract was prevented by Govt. action or embargo, & because the basis of the contract was that the importation of the goods to be supplied should continue to be possible & by reason of war it was rendered impossible. On application to the Ct. by the controller for directions whether the claim should be admitted as a debt due from B. Co. — Held: (1) at the date of the outbreak of war B. Co. assumed enemy character, & accordingly, the contract became dissolved by the outbreak of war as being a current contract entered into with a co. which eo instanti assumed enemy character; (2) the abrogation of the contract by outbreak of war being founded on public policy, the presence of a suspension clause in the event of war did not assist the claimant, & if "war" in the clause included war between England & Germany the clause was void as against public policy, & the claim must be rejected; (3) assuming that B. Co. had not assumed enemy character at the outbreak of war, the claim must fail on the following grounds: that, the contract being for the supply of goods to be obtained from Germany, further performance on the outbreak of war involved intercourse with the enemy & became illegal accordingly; that, the contracts having been made on the basis that the existing commercial conditions would continue & that the basis having ceased to exist by outbreak of war between England & Germany, the commercial object of the contract had been frustrated, & the contract was dissolved at the outbreak of war; (4) the suspension clause was not intended by the parties to apply to war between England & Germany; (5) the doctrine of frustration applied to contracts for the sale of unascertained goods. — Re BADISCHE CO., LTD., Re BAYER CO., LTD., Re GRIESHEIM ELECTRON, LTD., Re KALLE & CO., LTD., Re BERLIN ANILINE CO., LTD., Re MEISTER LUCIUS & BRUNING, LTD., [1921] 2 Ch. 331; 91 L. subject of His Majesty the King, & entitled to the protection of His Majesty the King in all parts of His Majesty's Kingdom & Dominions:—Held: neither the taking of the oath of allegiance alone, nor the taking of the oath coupled with the grant of the certificate in Australia, made pltf. a British subject in the United Kingdom, & he was, therefore, an alien when in the United Kingdom, & the declaration must be refused. Pltf. was at least to this extent to be regarded as an alien, that he was a person so described in British Nationality & Status of Aliens Act, 1914 (c. 17), & for the purposes of that Act. SECT. 4.—ACQUISITION IN MANDATED TERRITORY.

525a. Palestine.]—Applt. was convicted for that being an alien he had failed to report his change of address, & had also failed to comply with a deportation order, & the question which arose on appeal was whether he was an alien within British Nationality & Status of Aliens Act, 1914. He was born in Jerusalem of Jewish parents, & was, at the time of the passing of the Palestinian Citizenship Order, 1925, a Turkish subject habitually resident in Palestine. In 1937, he came to England with a passport granted to him by the High Commissioner for Palestine & indorsed "British passport, Palestine." It was contended (i) that the passport was a British passport, (ii) that Palestine had been transferred to Great Britain, & that, therefore, under Art. 30 of the Lausanne Treaty, applt. ipso facto became a British subject, (iii) that the Palestinian Citizenship Order, 1925, had no effect, as it was made by the mandatory, & not by the administration of Palestine, as provided by the mandate:—Held: (1) the passport was not a British passport; (2) there was no provision in Art. 30 for transfer of territory to Great Britain, which merely exercised the mandate on behalf of the League of Nations. Applt. did not, therefore, become a British subject under this article; (3) even assuming that the Order of 1925 was void (which proposition the ct. was far from accepting), applt. would not have become a Palestinian subject, but would have remained a Turkish subject; (4) nothing had been done in law to make applt. a British subject.—*R. v. The Controller of Chinese Immigration, acting in pursuance of the powers set out in the Chinese Immigration Act, examined applt. as to her right to enter Canada & on Sept. 23, 1936, found that applt. was not in fact the person she was represented to be & that she had not been born in Victoria; & therefore he ordered her deportation. An application was then brought for a writ of habeas corpus; & on the hearing, new evidence was adduced by & on behalf of applt. The trial judge found that applt. was in fact a Canadian citizen born in Victoria & issued an order discharging applt. from the custody of the Controller. These findings were not disputed before the appellate ct., the only question there raised was as to whether or not the trial judge had the right under the Chinese Immigration Act to review the decision of the Controller & to receive additional evidence, the appellate ct. holding that the trial judge had no such jurisdiction.—Held: the order of the trial judge, discharging applt. from the custody of the Controller, should be restored.—*SHIN SHIM v. ex. — Deportation "forthwith" — Effect of delay in obtaining passport. — Where in proceedings under sects. 40 & 49 of Immigration Act, R. S. C., 1927, an inquiry has been held & the deportation of the immigrant has been duly ordered, the fact that there is a long delay before a passport, promptly applied for, can be obtained from the immigrant's country does not render the order ineffective on the ground that sects. 42 (3) & 19 (2) of the Act require such person to be deported "forthwith". — Re JANOWSKA, [1922] 3 W. sy. — Meaning of. — "Forthwith" in the provision in Immigration Act, R. S. C., 1927, s. 42 (3), that when a man is ordered to be deported "he shall be deported forthwith" means within a reasonable time having regard to all the circumstances. — Re POLI, [1927] 3 W. W. R. 186; 7 F. L. J. (Can.) 85. — CAN.

ss. — Sufficiency of procedure. — Following a complaint under sect. 40 of Immigration Act, R. S. C., 1927, an investigation by a Board of Inquiry was held on which it was shown that the immigrant had been a public charge on the city of Winnipeg & the decision of the Board was that he be deported on the ground that he was not a Canadian citizen or a person having Canadian domicile & had become "in Canada a public charge". — Held: although the decision of the Board on such an inquiry must be accompanied by full reasons yet in the present case there had been ample particularity because to be a public charge on the city of Winnipeg is to be "in Canada, a public charge," & since the deportee admitted the truth of the complaint there was no defence which could be offered which would be effective. — MUNETAKA SAMEJIMA v. R., [1923] S. C. R. 640, does not call for greater particularity than was furnished in the present case. The fact that no papers were served upon the deportee before or during the inquiry is not objectionable where ample notice is given orally, especially in the case of a deportee unable to read English. — Re NAUMICO, [1923] 3 W. Prior to leaving for India he applied to the authorities for a certificate of domicile, but that certificate was illegally refused. Applt.'s visit to India was extended to a period of four years, & he returned to Natal in Apr. 1915:—Held: applt.'s visit to India was for a special or temporary purpose; the home in Natal continued to be his place of permanent abode, & he was domiciled in Natal within s. 30 of the above Act.—*KAJES v. In 1902 immigrant went back to India. Recently he returned to Natal but was refused admission as being a prohibited immigrant under the above Act:—Held: the certificate conferred upon him rights, which were not restricted by the above Act, & there was no intention on the part of immigrant to abandon his domicile in Natal.—RE RUNGASAMY CHETTY (1917), 38 N. sg. ————]—Parent resident in India.—Applt. was born in India. In 1913, of a woman who was recognised as the wife of an Indian, S., but who had never been in the Union. S. had entered the Transvaal in 1907 & had, thereafter, acquired a domicile of choice in the Transvaal, but in 1919 had returned to India, & had since not been in the Union. Save that there was evidence that S. was undergoing medical treatment in India, there was no explanation of his long stay there. He had shares to the value of £4,000 in a business in the Transvaal but had apparently never taken any active part in the business. Applt., aged 12, arrived in the Union & claimed a right to enter the Union under Act 22 of 1913, s. 5 (g). On appeal from a judgment of a Provincial Div. in a case stated by the Immigrants' Appeal Board:—Held: assuming the onus rested upon the immigration officer, the Board was entitled to find that S. had abandoned his Transvaal domicile, & therefore, applt. was a prohibited immigrant.—*MAHOMED v. Applt. was convicted on both charges, & on appeal it was conceded by the Crown that the document ought not to have been admitted in evidence, inasmuch as the mode of authenticating the document did not fulfil the requirements of Evidence Act, 1851 (c. 99), s. 7:—Held: though the prosecution might have proceeded at the trial on the basis that under Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (c. 12), s. 1 (4), the burden of proving that he was not an alien lay on applt., they had not taken this course, but had themselves accepted the burden of proof & endeavoured to discharge it by putting in evidence an inadmissible document, & accordingly the conviction must be quashed.—*R. v. - 561a. — Restrictions as to change of name—Validity.—Appl., a foreigner by birth, became a naturalised British subject in 1912, & changed his name by deed poll in 1915 from Ernst to Ernest. In 1919 he was convicted under reg. 14h of the above regulations, for that, not being a natural-born British subject, he used a name other than that by which he was ordinarily known at the beginning of the war. He contended that reg. 14h was ultra vires, on the ground that it was not competent by Order in Council, issued under Defence of the Realm Act, 1914 (c. 8), to deprive him of any rights, powers, or privileges which were not at the same time taken away from all British subjects; & that the regulations purported to override an Act of Parliament, although there was no power under the Act of 1914 to do so:—Held: reg. 14h was not ultra vires because it discriminated between naturalised & natural-born British subjects. Regulations made by the King in Council under Defence of the Realm Act, 1914 (c. 8), have all the force of a statute & may take away a statutory privilege or impose a statutory duty.—*ERNEST v. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—E.

ss. Claim against custodian of animal—Onus of proof as to absence of negligence.—The onus is upon the custodian to show that the injury did not occur through his act or negligence only where it is shown that the injury occurred when the animal was or should have been in his custody or control, or that he was under an obligation to account for it to the owner.—FICOWICH v. MALESCHIAS, [1924] 4 D. L. R. 585; 3 W. W. R. 308.—CAN.

128 v. —.—Pltf.'s cow died from choking over an onion from a dump of culled onions which defd. had dumped in the space occupied by an "A" fence between the adjoining fields of pltf. & defd. It was found that the onions were closer to defd.'s side of the fence than to pltf.'s, & there was a break in the rail on pltf.'s side through which the cow got access to them & that if it had not been broken the accident would not have happened:—Held: as it was the duty of pltf. to keep his side of the fence in repair the cow was a trespasser, & therefore, defd. was not liable for its loss.—SCHNEIDER v. HEE FONG, [1935] 1 W. W. R. 366; 2 D. L. R. 812.—CAN.

132 ii. a. —.—Animal falling in well—Animal lawfully at large.—Pltf.'s horse while lawfully running at large was killed by falling into an open well on defd.'s land. Defd., who knew of the open well, was residing outside the province, the land being occupied by a tenant:—Held: defd.'s breach of Open Wells Act gave pltf. a right of action "on a tort committed within the jurisdiction," justifying allowance of the issue of a writ for service on defd. ex juris.—BROTHERSON v. KENNEDY, [1919] 2 W. W. R. 803; 47 D. L. R. 131; 12 Sask. L. R. 304.—CAN.

132 ii. b. —.—What is an "open well."—Whether a well is an "open well" or not is a question of fact to be proved at the trial. While it might be an "open well" if insecurely covered, the fact that an animal falls into it without any evidence of how it occurred does not prove it such, nor does the fact that the material of the covering was seven years old.—DRYDALE v. REID, [1920] 3 W. W. R. 832.—CAN.

132 ii. c. —.—Animal unlawfully at large.—Owners of such animals have no right of action where they are killed or injured by falling into an open well.—DILLS v. GREAT WEST LIFE ASSURANCE CO., [1926] 3 D. L. R. 339; [1926] 2 W. W. R. 342; 20 Sask. L. R. 545.—CAN.

132 ii. d. —.—Where pltf. proves that his stock strayed on to defd.'s premises & there fell into a well & was killed, he has established a prima facie violation of the Act, &

where defd.'s only explanation is that he erected a protection reasonably sufficient to keep animals away from the well, but that the animal in question somehow or other got into the well, he has not rebutted the prima facie case, especially where the circumstances justify the inference that the animal got through the protection by doing that which animals are wont to do.—PITMAN v. BROWN, [1925] 3 D. L. R. 61; [1925] 2 W. W. R. 36; 19 Sask. L. R. 362.—CAN.

132 ii. e. —.—Ignorance of owner as to existence of well.—An owner of land on which there is an open well contrary to statute cannot rid himself of liability for damages caused thereby by pleading that he did not know it was there.—HUPSON v. SUTZER (Sask.), [1919] 3 W. W. R. 575; 49 D. L. R. 125.—CAN.

132 iii. a. —.—The digging by a municipality of a ditch dangerous to animals alongside the travelled portion of a highway & the leaving of it unprotected, was held to be a nuisance which rendered the municipality liable for the loss of a horse which plunged into the ditch & was killed.—HOWELL v. WILTON RURAL MUNICIPALITY NO. 473 (1922), 66 D. L. R. 321; 15 Sask. L. R. 427; [1922] 2 W. W. R. 568.—CAN.

132 iv. —.—Animal falling in excavation.—Defd. & pltf. were neighbours. Pltf.'s cow while running at large fell into an excavation on defd.'s land:—Held: pltf. could not recover damages.—PITZEN v. SHOKLUX, [1921] 2 W. W. R. 686; 46 Alta. L. R. 482.—CAN.

132 v. —.—The owner or occupier of land will be liable in damages for any loss of stock resulting from failure to guard against access to an excavation.—KELLOGG v. DAPPEN (1922), 69 D. L. R. 528; [1922] 3 W. W. R. 573.—CAN.

132 vi. —.—Cellar of unused house.—Defd. owned unfenced land on which was an unused open house with a cellar beneath. Pltf.'s horse, running at large, got into the house, & while there, one of its feet broke through the floor above the cellar & being unable to withdraw it, it died:—Held: the animals must take the land as they find it, & Open Wells Act did not apply.—WRUBLESKI v. LOFF, [1923] 2 W. W. R. 764.—CAN.

132 vii. —.—Where there is a bye-law permitting cattle to run at large & such cattle are injured by the barbed wire of a fence which has fallen down through the rottenness of its posts, the owner of the fence is liable for the injury to cattle lawfully on the highway, & injured thereon.—CHASE v. COLLEBRIDGE, [1917] 3 W. W. R. 736.—CAN.

132 viii. —.—On racecourse—Injury to racehorse.—Appl't. racehorse was injured on resp.'s racecourse by a splinter from a stake used to flag off a portion of the regular course, which had become dangerous owing to heavy rain:—Held: resp. having taken proper steps to ensure that the course was as safe as reasonable care & skill could make it, & the risk not being in the nature of a "trap," no liability attached for the injury.—WACKROW v. TAKAPUNA JOCKEY CLUB, [1928] N. Z. L. R. 249.—N.Z.

137 xiii. —.—The mere fact that a government railway line passing through pastoral country is unfenced cannot be taken as an implied permission by the Transport Comrs. for stock of adjoining landowners to be upon, or to cross, such line. An animal straying on such a railway line is a trespasser, & the only duty owed by the Transport Comrs. to the owner of the animal is not recklessly to disregard its presence, or intentionally to inflict injury upon it.—NEW SOUTH WALES TRANSPORT COMRS. v. BARTON, [1933] Argus L. R. 258; 6 A. L. J. 459; 49 C. L. R. 114; 38 S. R. N. S. W. 507; 50 N. S. W. W. N. 230.—AUS.

k i. Grain left accessible to stock—Injury from eating—Grain escaping from granary.—Where animals straying upon the premises were injured by consuming grain which had escaped from a granary through no fault of the grower:—Held: defd. was not liable under Open Wells Act, R. S. S. (c 124), s. 3.—HILL v. MALLACH, [1918] 1 W. W. R. 10; 10 Sask. L. R. 419; 37 D. L. R. 709.—CAN.

k ii. —.—Animal lawfully at large.—Where the non-observance by a proprietor of land of Open Wells Act, R. S. S., 1909 (c 124), s. 3, results in injury to animals lawfully at large which have strayed upon his land, he is liable in damages to their owner.—WATSON v. GUILLAUME, [1918] 2 W. W. R. 1047; 11 Sask. L. R. 348; 42 D. L. R. 380.—CAN.

k iii. —.—Granary reasonably fit for grain.—Held: defd. were not liable for damages for injury to pltf.'s horses, while lawfully running at large, caused by eating wheat which had run from a granary on defd.'s premises, in view of the jury's finding

- 145a. Animal killed—Meaning of "external & visible injury."—A policy of insurance provided that an insurance co. should indemnify the insured against death solely attributable to accidental external & visible injury to any horse the property of the insured, duly certified by a veterinary surgeon, & further provided that the due observance & fulfilment of the conditions of the policy should be a condition precedent to any liability of the co. under the policy. The insured's horse, drawing a loaded van, got out of the driver's control, bolted, & fell into a ditch with the van on top of it, & died in consequence of the pressure of a shaft upon its windpipe. There was no mark visible on the skin of the horse, & no certificate of a veterinary surgeon was obtained:—Held: (1) it was not necessary that there should have been any mark visible on the skin of the horse, & the injury was external & visible; & (2) it was a condition precedent to the insured's right to recover that the death of the horse should be duly certified by a veterinary surgeon, but, on the facts of the case, the co. had waived compliance with such condition.—BURRIDGE & SON v. HAINES (F. H.) & SONS, LTD. (1918), 87 L. J. K. B. 641; 118 L. T. 681; 62 Sol. Jo. 521, D. C.

k iv. — Animal trespassing.—If grain be left in such an unguarded condition as to permit of horses being attracted by it & eating it to their injury, the owner of the grain will be liable for the resulting damage, even though the horses are trespassers.—FULTON v. RANDALL, GIBB & MITCHELL, LTD., [1918] 3 W. W. R. 331.—CAN.

k v. — Animal trespassing.—A person who allows threshed grain to be accessible to stock, is liable in damages for the death of an animal resulting therefrom, even though the animal was unlawfully at large, unless the owner of the animal when turning it at large knew that such grain was accessible to stock.—*HAWORTH v. k vi. — Animal trespassing.—Pitf. alleged that deft. while engaged in seeding left out in his unfenced ploughed field an unprotected wagon box which contained wheat & that pitf.'s horse while lawfully running at large gorged itself with the wheat & died:—Held: deft. was not liable.—MUSSELMAN v. ZIMMERMAN (1922), 66 D. L. R. 350; [1922] 2 W. W. R. 640.—CAN.

k vii. — Animal trespassing.—The result of an action under Open Wells Act, R. S. S., 1930 (c. 168), does not depend upon whether or not the animals injured were unlawfully at large under Stray Animals Act, R. S. S., 1930 (c. 124).—WENTWELL v. PERES, [1924] 3 W. W. R. 876.—CAN.

k viii. — Grain mixed with poisonous substance.—No liability attaches to a railway co. for damages for the loss of cattle which die from eating grain which has become mixed with lead ore, where the grain was dropped upon the ground among the particles of lead ore by a customer of the railway co. while unloading grain from the company's cars.—DAYTON v. PARADISE MINE & CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. CO., [1919] 1 W. W. R. 499.—CAN.

k ix. — Grain mixed with poisonous substance.—The obligation imposed by Open Wells Act, R. S. S., 1930 (c. 168), is an absolute one, & where another's animals have been injured as the result of threshed grain being accessible to them, the fact that the granary in question was reasonably fit for the storage of grain as against animals running at large is no defence.—*SCHOFFIELD v. w i. — Liability of boatowner for act of repairer.—A boatowner employed a joiner to repair his boats. The paint scrapings were left lying on the ground, & poisoned a cow that was grazing on the pasture:—Held: it was the boatowner's duty to see that the paint scrapings were removed, & he was liable in damages for the cow's death.—STEWART v. ADAMS, [1920] S. C. 129; 57 So. L. R. 83.—SCOT.

w ii. — Animals lawfully at large—Whether poison hidden trap.—Poison which deft. had put in bags on his unfenced land & carefully covered with manure, & which, without his knowledge, became exposed & caused the death of pitf.'s cattle lawfully at large, which entered on the land:—Held: not to constitute a hidden trap.—WINMILL & THOMAS v. COLLINS (Sask.), [1927] 3 W. W. R. 326; reversed, [1928] 2 D. L. R. 353; 1 W. W. R. 705; 22 S. L. R. 429.—CAN.

w iii. — Animals lawfully at large.—Pitf. & deft. were farmers & occupied adjoining lands separated by a three-strand wire line fence, secured by posts. Deft.'s servant in the course of spreading grasshopper poison on deft.'s land, left an open bag of the composition on the ground at five feet distance from the fence. A horse & a number of cattle, property of pitf., pasturing on his land, were attracted by the smell of the poison, which consists in part of bran & salt, & having broken down one of the strands, were able from pitf.'s land to reach the bag, & eating the poison, they died. Pitf. sought to hold deft. liable for negligence. Deft. & his servant knew that the mixture was poisonous to horses & cattle, & that pitf.'s horses & cattle were loose on pitf.'s land. Whether they knew that the poison was an allurement to cattle was not gone into. Judgment for pitf. Deft. appealed:—Held: the appeal should be allowed & the action dismissed.—*PENNOCK v. 163a. Cat killing pigeons.]—The owner of a cat is not bound to keep it from straying into a neighbour's land.

A cat belongs to the class of animals mansuetæ naturæ. For mischief done by it in following the common instincts of its kind, its owner is not liable. To make him liable he must have knowledge of some vicious propensity beyond those common instincts. sk. Stray Animals Act, 1920 (c. 124)—Meaning of animal—Turkey.—Since turkeys are not included under the words "animal" or "animals" in above Act an owner of a turkey, who enters upon another's land to get the turkey after it has strayed thereon commits a trespass.—SORLIE v. sm. Authorised round-up—Liability for trespass.—A person who is authorised by the Minister to conduct a round-up in pursuance of a petition therefor under sect. 125 (3) of Domestic Animals (Unorganised Territory) Act, 1924, is personally liable for a trespass committed in the course of the conduct of the round-up. The liability imposed by said sub-sect. (3) is both joint & several on each one of the signers of the petition. The fact that some of the required number of the signatures to the petition are forgeries & the consent of the Minister was therefore obtained by deception does not relieve the actual signers of it from responsibility for the wrongful conduct of the round-up.—JONES v. He is entitled to strengthen & repair it by adding strands of wire to prevent his cattle getting upon the land of his neighbour, & the latter has no right to remove the strands. If he does so, & the cattle get upon his land by his act, he cannot claim against the adjoining owner for resulting damages.—ARMSTRONG v. THOMPSON, [1923] 3 D. L. R. 74; 2 W. W. R. 609.—CAN.

1 ii. ——— *A municipality passed a bye-law providing that all animals should be allowed to run at large in the municipality with certain exceptions & except between certain dates. Another bye-law prescribed what should constitute a lawful fence. Nothing was said as to what should be the effect of a lawful fence, & no bye-law was passed for the purposes of Municipal Act, Man., s. 603 (d).—Held : the effect of the first-mentioned bye-law was to permit cattle, other than those excepted in it, to run at large between certain dates, & in this it ousted the common law liability of the owner of the cattle for damages caused by them when so running at large, & such damages were not recoverable even if the land where the damage was done was surrounded by a lawful fence.*

(2) The bye-law also provided that nothing therein contained should prevent the owner of any lands trespassed upon or of any property destroyed from waiving rights created by that bye-law & bringing his action in any competent ct. in consequence of any trespass.—Held : that provision gave no right of action taken away by the other bye-law provision.—JONES v.

195 iii. ——— The owner of a bull at large contrary to law must be held to have known that he would naturally seek to cover any heifer or cow which he can reach, & his covering the heifer of another owner on that owner's property & against his will is a trespass for which the owner of the bull is liable.—McLEAN v. Plff.'s son on horseback was chasing the cattle out when plff. proceeded on foot to drive a steer through a gateway & was charged by the steer & injured. Deft. had no knowledge that the steer was of a vicious nature or liable to attack persons.—Held : plff. could not recover damages, as the injury was not an ordinary consequence of the trespass; the damages claimed were too remote, & the proximate cause of the injury was plff.'s action in approaching the animal on foot which he should not have done.—*HATTON v. There was no direct evidence as to the precise extent of resp.'s dog's depredations as distinguished from those of the other 4 dogs.—Held : allowing the appeal, & awarding as against resp. the total damages assessed, if 2 or more dogs belonging to different owners go together & jointly partake in a raid on sheep, then such raid is a joint affair, & on proof of this it lies on the owner of each dog to establish affirmatively the particular part of the damage his dog did, & to establish also that his dog acted independently of the others, & not in concert with them.—*LAWRENCE v. An action of damages brought under this Act by the owners of the sheep against the respective owners of the dogs, craving for a joint & several decree against the defenders, was defended by one defender only, who claimed that he was liable for one-half only of the damage:—Held: when once liability under the Act was established, the ordinary measure of damages had to be applied; in law each of the dogs occasioned the whole of the damage as the result of the two dogs acting together, & consequently each owner was responsible for the whole.—*ARNELL v. 205a. — — Attempt to stop horse—Volenti non fit injuria.]—A horse belonging to defendants, & attached to one of their vans was seen by plaintiff running past his house without the driver. It entered a field immediately adjoining, & separated by a hedge from, plaintiff's garden, & the driver, who had followed it, was trying to pacify it, but as it continued very restive, the driver, who was excited, shouted "Help, help!" whereupon plaintiff went over the hedge & attempted to hold the horse, but it suddenly reared & threw him to the ground causing him serious injuries, in respect of which he sued defendants. There was evidence that the horse had bolted once, if not twice, before. The jury found (a) that plaintiff did not freely & voluntarily, with full knowledge of the nature of the risk he ran, impliedly agree to incur it; (b) that defendants were guilty of negligence in employing the horse to draw the van ; & (c) that negligence was the cause of the accident :—Held : the negligence (if any) of defts. in employing the horse could not be said to be the cause of the accident, inasmuch as there was a novus actus interveniens—namely, pltf.'s attempt to hold the horse, which he must have known was attended with risk, & therefore that the principle of volenti non fit injuria applied & precluded the pltf. from recovering.

Per SCRUTTON, L.J.: If a horse bolts in a highway & a bystander tries to stop it & is injured, the owner of the horse is under no legal liability to the injured person.

Per SLESSER, L.J.: If a man sees his child in great peril in the street from a runaway horse, & moved by paternal affection, dashes out & is injured in attempting to stop the horse, it may in those circumstances well be said that there is in law no novus actus interveniens. — *CUTLER v. Seeing defts.' runaway horses with a van attached coming down the street he rushed out & eventually stopped them, sustaining injuries in consequence, in respect of which he claimed damages:—Held: (1) on the evidence defts.' servant was guilty of negligence in leaving the horses unattended in a busy street; (2) as defts. must or ought to have contemplated that some one might attempt to stop the horses in an endeavour to prevent injury to life & limb, & as the police were under a general duty to intervene to protect life & property, the act of, & injuries to, pltf. were the natural & probable consequences of defts.' negligence; (3) the maxim "volenti non fit injuria" did not apply to prevent pltf. recovering.—*HAYNES v. at. ———.] A two-horse light trolley used for delivering ice was left unattended by the driver in a public road while he delivered ice. The wheel was chained & the reins tied to a swing-bar. While the driver was in a shop on the roadside the horses were startled by a boy on a bicycle riding over a piece of paper. The driver saw the horses move off, ran out the shop, & a few seconds later caught the reins. The horses were then trotting, but on one of the horses striking the driver on the leg, he released his hold on the reins. The horses then bolted & collided with a stationary vehicle: Held; the driver had not been guilty of negligence. —OTTENWILL v. ALASKA ICE CREAM CO., LTD., [1928] 8. A. S. R. 107. —AUS.

Evidence was given on behalf of defts. that the horse was docile & quiet. The jury negatived scienter on the part of defts., but found them guilty of negligence in leaving the horse unattended, & awarded pltf. damages:—Held: (1) the question of negligence was one of fact for the jury, & on the facts of this particular case, it was impossible to say that there was no evidence upon which the jury could find negligence; (2) the injury caused to pltf. was not an ordinary & natural consequence of defts.' negligence, & pltf. could not recover.*—*ALDHAM v. - 219a. Dog left inside motor car.—Deft. parked his saloon car in a street with its back against the pavement. The car was left shut with a dog inside it. There was no evidence that the dog had a vicious propensity. When pltf., who had parked his car near deft.'s car, was walking past deft.'s car the dog, which had been barking & jumping about the car, jumped up against the window in the rear of deft.'s car, smashing a panel, whereby a glass splinter flew out & entered pltf.'s eye, with the result that pltf. lost his eye. In an action for damages for personal injuries:—Held: the danger of a piece of glass being knocked by a dog out of a small window at the back of the car, & of a splinter of glass hitting a passer-by on the pavement, was such an unlooked-for event that no reasonable man could say that a person ought to be convicted of negligence for not taking any precautions against it. A person must guard against a reasonable probability of danger; he was not bound to guard against a fantastic possibility.—FARDON v. HARCOURT-RIVINGTON (1932), 146 L. T. 391; 48 T. L. 219b. — Where a pltf., aged five, when leaning over a motor car, stationary upon the highway, which she had been warned by her father not to approach, after a general warning by deft., the owner of the car, to the children accustomed to play nearby, was bitten by a dog owned by deft., confined to the car by a leash so that it could project its nose only 3 inches over the rim of the door, & where the evidence that the dog was of a ferocious disposition towards mankind, & that deft. knew of it, was so slight that no reasonable jury could act upon it:—Held: judgment must be entered for deft.

Per SCRUTTON & LAWRENCE, L.JJ.—The doctrine of scienter, applicable to the liability of the owner of a dog let run in the street, was applicable also to the liability of the owner of a dog confined in a motor car.

Per GREER, L.J.—The owner of a dog might be liable to a person bitten, apart from any scienter, if he placed it in such a position & under such circumstances as rendered it likely that the dog would get excited, would lose its temper, & would cause damage to persons lawfully passing along the highway. But here deft. had tied up the dog in the way proved, had warned the children of the neighbourhood, & this warning had been expressly conveyed to pltf. Had pltf. not been so expressly warned, his Lordship stated that he did not know what his view would have been.—SYCAMORE v. LEY (1932), 147 L. T. 342, C. A.

226a. — Duty of owner.—No duty is cast upon the owner of an animal mansuetus naturæ, which is being depastured on land adjoining the highway, to prevent it from straying on the highway, unless it is known to be of vicious habit. But a person who brings an animal on the highway must take reasonable care to prevent it from doing damage to other persons thereon. What constitutes reasonable care is a question of fact in each case, & the standard of reasonable care may not be the same in the country as in a town. In this respect the duty to the public is the same in the case of one who leaves an animal in the street, & of one who places it in a stable or yard adjoining the street without taking proper steps to prevent it from straying into the street, where it would naturally go. In either case the owner is liable for the conduct of the animal if he puts it in a position in which it is likely to cause damage to persons lawfully using the highway.—DEEN v. DAVIES, [1935] 2 K. 230a. Bullock escaping from lorry.—A bullock, having been transported in the lorry of the first defts., was being delivered at the premises of H., a butcher. The intention was to drive the bullock out of the lorry into a dark passageway leading to a yard at the back of the premises. The lorry could not be brought right up to the entrance of the passageway, & to prevent the bullock from escaping into the street there were two wing gates on the lorry. These, however, did not nearly reach the mouth of the passage, & in the gap on one side H. placed himself & in the gap on the other side an employee of H. was placed in order to prevent the escape of the bullock into the street. The animal, however, broke past the employee & dashed down the street & ran straight at pltf., knocking him off the bicycle which he was riding & injuring him. There was no proof of scienter.—Held : the facts did not establish such negligence on the part of defts. as would render them liable in damages, apart from proof of scienter.—*LATHALL v. 221 II. ———. —In Saskatchewan the principles of the common law govern liability for damage done by a bull when at large, with the exception that there is no difference, as there apparently is in England, between the case of damage on a highway & damage on private property. Therefore, although there is a statutory prohibition against allowing bulls to run at large, yet, in the absence of evidence that the bull in question was vicious or possessed characteristics different from those of bulls generally, there is no liability in damages for damage done by it when at large unless the damage was such as might reasonably have been anticipated as the result of its being at large.—*RICHARDSON v. There was no negligence in the driving or management of the car.—Held : deft. was not liable to pltf.—HALL v. WIGHTMAN, [1936] N. 92.—IR.

225 IV. ———. —Held : permitting one's cattle to run at large on a provincial highway being forbidden by Highway Improvement Act, 1937, s. 73, the presence of the calves on the road was unlawful, quite as much so as if forbidden by a municipal bye-law; & where an animal is unlawfully upon 225 V. ———. —The owner of a cattle farm in Southern Rhodesia, a cattle country with large open spaces, is not negligent if he allows his cattle to roam over his farm though such cattle may stray on a public road running across the farm, & if a bull in his possession & accompanying such cattle injures a person lawfully using the road, the owner of the farm is not liable unless he knew or ought to have known that the bull was vicious.—*MOURRAY v. Pursuer averred that defender was negligent in knowingly failing to keep his fences in such repair as would prevent his sheep from straying on to the road, & in any event, in allowing his sheep to graze upon the road.—Held : the accident was not the natural & probable result of the negligence alleged.—*FRASER v. The school-keeper was aware that the dog had formerly attacked a boy, & the county ct. judge found as a fact that he knew the dog to be accustomed to attack mankind. Defts. did not know that the school-keeper had a dog. In an action by pltf. for keeping a dog which was known to be of a fierce & mischievous nature & accustomed to attack & bite mankind:—Held: the knowledge of the school-keeper that the dog was accustomed to attack mankind was not acquired by him as the servant of defts., & pltf. showed no cause of action against them.

Per LORD WRIGHT: "I think both the common law & the Legislature in Dogs Act, 1906 (c. 32), have recognised that a dog, which has been described as 'a familiar animal,' is naturally so associated with a particular master that responsibility for its acts should depend on ownership or possession & control."—*KNOTT v. 258a. Mare attacking horse—Strange mare turned into field with horse.]—Trespass to person or goods by an animal in which there is at common law a valuable property, such as horses & cattle, does not generally render its owner liable.

Deft. put a mare into a field in which there was a horse belonging to pltf. without notifying pltf. The mare kicked the horse, which had to be destroyed. No scienter was proved in deft., but it was found by the deputy county ct. judge that the propensity of horses running loose to injure one another in sport or quarrel was common knowledge:—Held: (1) the mare was not within the class of dangerous animals which the owner must keep at his peril according to the rule in Fletcher v. Rylands (see No. 195); (2) deft. was entitled to assume that the mare, being mansuetæ naturæ, was an innocent animal, & having no notice of any fact indicating the contrary, was not under any duty towards pltf. to give notice of his intention to place the mare in the field, or to have a person on the watch or in charge of her, & on the whole deft. was not liable either for breach of an absolute duty or for negligence.—*MANTON v. sv. Dog Registration Act, 1908, s. 27.1—C., a blind man, went to visit a friend & chained his dog upon the veranda with a very short chain. H., also as a visitor, walked up the flight of concrete steps to the veranda in felt slippers. As she reached the top step the dog suddenly becoming aware of her approach sprang towards her & attempted to bite her, but was unable to do so as the chain was too short. H., thinking the dog could reach her, moved back, lost her balance, fell down the steps, and sustained injuries. In an action by H. :—Held : sect. 27 does not place upon dog-owners in New Zealand an absolute liability for all damages, direct or indirect done by their dogs; the fact that the Legislature has dispensed with the necessity of proof of scienter, & proof of negligence on the owner's part to impose liability on a dog-owner for injury done by his dog, does not mean that all dogs are to be deemed dangerous animals & in the same class as wild beasts; sect. 27 takes away from a dog-owner the benefit of the common law exemption from liability for trespass injuries caused by his dog; it is still open to the dog-owner, if he can, to establish one or other of the defences open to persons who harbour animals of evil disposition—e.g., want of negligence on his part; the injury to pltf. was due to accident & not to any negligence on the part of deft.

The judge drew attention to the fact that, as in England proof of scienter brings a domestic animal into category of wild animals, the English cases dealing with injuries inflicted by wild animals are applicable to cases of injuries by dogs in New Zealand by reason of the abolition in the Dominion of the necessity of proof of scienter in cases of injuries inflicted by dogs.—CHITTENDEN v. HALE, [1933] N. Z. L. R. 836.—N.Z.

sw. Destruction of unlicensed dogs—Validity of bye-law.]—Resp. municipality was empowered by statute to pass bye-laws "for restraining, prohibiting & regulating the running at large of dogs, for imposing a tax on the owners, possessors or harbourers of dogs, & for impounding, selling or killing dogs running at large in contravention of the bye-laws." A bye-law imposed a licence of $20 on dogs wholly or in part of the breed known as police dogs, of $4 on male dogs of any other breed & of $10 on female dogs of any other breed; & provided that an unlicensed dog shall be liable to be destroyed, & that an owner or harbourer of an unlicensed dog should be liable on summary conviction to a fine &, in default of payment, to imprisonment :—Held : the bye-law was valid & must stand except in so far as it provide (1) for the killing of unlicensed dogs for any other reason than that they are found running at large; & (2) for the imprisonment of any convicted offender under the bye-law for default of payment of fine imposed on such conviction; & those two provisions must be quashed.—Re SHOAL LAKE VILLAGE BY-LAW, 192, [1933] 3 W. sv. Discrimination between breeds of licensed dogs—Validity of bye-law.]—Under a statute authorising municipal bye-laws imposing a tax on the owners, etc., of dogs :—Held : a dog-licensing bye-law was not invalid because it imposed a higher licence fee for dogs of the breed known as police dogs than for other breeds of dogs or because it imposed a higher fee for female dogs than for male dogs.—Re SKEATON & SHOAL LAKE VILLAGE BY-LAW, 192, [1934] 1 W. - 346a. — Animal stolen—Duty of agister.]—An agister of cattle does not discharge himself of his duty as a bailee for reward by proving that they were stolen without his default, if by using reasonable diligence he could have recovered them.

- If, having failed to use such diligence, he is sued for loss of the cattle, he must prove, in order to discharge himself, that such diligence would have been unavailing; it is not for the bailor to prove that it would have retrieved the loss.
- A farmer accepted certain cattle for agistment. Some of them were stolen without his default. After learning that they were missing he made no effort, whether by informing the owner or the police, or otherwise, to recover them. It was doubtful whether any reasonable attempt on his part would have led to their recovery:—Held: he was liable for their loss.—COLDMAN v. HILL, [1919] 1 K. B. 443; 88 L. J. K. B. 491; 120 L. PART IV.

b l. — Construction.]—By a contract for agistment pltf. agreed to make available certain properties for the agistment of def't.'s sheep. The terms of payment were 1*d.* per head per week, £500 to be paid when the sheep arrived, £500 in six months, & the balance when the sheep were removed:—Held: the payment contemplated by the contract was 1*d.* per head per week, according to the number of sheep on the properties from time to time; the contract was one for making available the area of land agreed on for the sheep, & included the taking care of the sheep agisted at the above remuneration while they were in pltf.'s custody.—SPRING v. YOUNG, [1923] S. A. S. R. 116.—AUS.

c l. — Whether agister liable to supply water.]—Pltf. having bought horses from def't., the latter agreed at pltf.'s request to winter them. The terms of the agreement were set out in a letter from def't. to pltf. in which def't. said: "I will winter them as usual, that is, bring them in straw 3 times a week." The horses were given no water by def't. & pltf. sued for damages, the horses being in poorer condition when he took delivery of them than they would have been had they been watered:—Held: in view of the terms of said letter & all the facts of the case, def't. was under no obligation to supply water.—RODGER v. STRAUSSER, [1929] 1 W. W. R. 46; 28 Alta. L. R. 628.—CAN.

344 xii. — Loss of animals.]—Pltf. was the owner of a mare which he delivered to def't. for agistment in his paddock of 6,000 acres, which paddock was heavily timbered & covered with blackberry. After the mare had remained in the paddock for some time, pltf. requested the delivery of the mare in two months' time. Def't. made endeavours to find the mare, but only saw it on one occasion, & thereafter made many attempts to locate the mare, but without success:—Held: def't. was not liable to pltf.

for the value of the mare, there being no evidence of negligence.—ROBINSON v. WATERS (1920), 22 W. A. L. R. 66.—AUS.

344 xiii. — Failure to detect loss within reasonable time.]—A large number of sheep were lost, & there was evidence rendering it probable that these had been driven off the run:—Held: an agister of sheep must show that he took reasonable care to see the sheep were on the agistment area, & failure to detect this loss within a reasonable time was clear evidence of negligence.—SPRING v. YOUNG, [1923] S. A. S. R. 116.—AUS.

344 xiv. — Onus of agister is bound to take reasonable care of the animal entrusted to him, & when the owner comes for it, if he cannot produce it he must show that he took all reasonable precautions against its disappearance.—COMSTOCK v. ASHCROFT ESTATES, LTD., [1917] 1 W. W. R. 1412; 23 B. C. R. 4761.—CAN.

344 xv. — Onus of negativing negligence.]—In case of loss of animals while in the care of an agister, the onus is on him to show circumstances negativing negligence on his part.—MCCAULEY v. HUBER, [1920] 3 W. W. R. 133; 54 D. L. R. 150.—CAN.

344 xvi. — A contract of agistment is one in the nature of a contract of bailment for the benefit of both bailor & bailee. The agister is not an insurer of the animals but, in the absence of a special contract limiting his common-law liability, is liable for their loss or injury caused by his neglect to take such reasonable care of them as a careful man would exercise in dealing with his own property; & if they are lost or injured while in his custody, the onus is on him to show that the loss or injury did not result from such neglect.—*RATHEWELL v. SMALL (Alta.), [1928] 1 D. L. R. 208; [1927] 3 W. W. R. 619.—CAN.

344 xviii. — In an action against an agister because some of the horses which he had agreed to take care of during the winter had died, others were missing & the condition of the remainder had deteriorated:—Held: there being nothing in the contract to limit def't.'s common law liability, he had not discharged the onus upon him of showing that the loss and damage did not result from his neglect to take reasonable and proper care of the animals.—COOPER v. CONRAD, [1938] 1 W. W. R. 469; 2 D. L. R. 788.—CAN.

344 xix. — Failure to provide food & water.]—Where horses have been delivered into the custody of an owner of pasture lands to be kept & pastured by him in return for a money payment, it is his duty to see that the horses are provided with sufficient food & water, & if he neglects these duties & a loss through death or a loss through depreciation is thereby incurred he is liable in damages.—METZ v. MARSHALL (1922), 70 D. L. R. 14; [1922] 3 W. W. R. 660.—CAN.

346 iv. — Or statute.]—An agister has a lien on the pastured animals under Possessory Liens Act, R.S.A., 1922 (c. 104), but not under Livery Stable-keepers Act, R.S.A., 1922 (c. 107).—SPARKLING v. WARD, [1925] 2 D. L. R. 922; [1925] 2 W. W. R. 181.—CAN.

346 v. — For malicious injury.]—Appot. had cattle on his land under grazing contracts with the owners. These cattle were maliciously driven off the lands & injured:—Held: appot. as bailee in possession could claim compensation for the cattle entrusted to his care.—*WORTHINGTON v. 390a. — Resale of horse at loss—Form of action.—A vendor gave a warranty of sound workable condition on the sale of a horse. The warranty was fulfilled, but the purchaser wrongfully refused delivery, & returned the horse. The vendor then put it up at auction as “in dispute,” & without a warranty, when it was sold for about £40 less than the contract price. In an action for the difference between the price realised at the auction & the contract price:—Held: (1) this was not the proper form of action; (2) the action must be for damages; (3) the conditions of the auction sale were not a test of the value of the horse, the auction being of a horse “in dispute,” & without warranty, & quite

PART V.

389 xv. — — — — —.]—If a hired horse is in a sound condition when taken out, & it is brought back injured, the onus of proof in a claim for damages for negligence is on deft. The hirer is bound to treat the horse with the degree of care which a person of ordinary discretion would use towards his own, but if the horse is so treated & nevertheless receives an injury the hirer is not liable in damages for such injury.—REINSETH v. CAMPBELL (1920), 52 D. L. R. 357.—CAN.

389 xvi. — — — — —.]—Where a person hires an animal & it dies while in his custody, the onus is upon him to establish that he took care of it. That care is the care which a prudent man would take of his own animal under the circumstances.—MURRAY v. COLLINS, [1920] 2 W. W. R. 845; 53 D. L. R. 120.—CAN.

389 xvii. — — — — —.]—Deft. hired a horse from plff. to drive from T. to L. & return. At a distance of between six & eight miles from S., the horse fell lame in the right hind leg. Deft. drove it to S., put it in a livery stable & gave instructions to have the hoof of the right hind leg re-shod. Deft. hired another horse & continued his journey to L., a distance of over eight miles. He returned next day, took the horse out, & finding that it was not then lame, started with it on the return journey. After travelling about three miles, the horse again fell lame & kept getting a little lamier all the way to T. The journey from S. to T., a distance of twenty-two miles, took seven & one-half hours. There was no evidence as to what caused the horse's lameness. There was no evidence that there was, between the place where the horse fell lame & T. any suitable place in which the horse could have been placed & cared for, or where deft. could have hired another horse to continue the return journey:—Held: as the lameness when it first developed on the return journey was not shown to have been of a more serious nature than often happens to a horse which may nevertheless walk, or even trot slowly, fifteen to twenty miles without serious distress, deft. could not be held guilty of negligence until he had travelled a sufficient distance to satisfy himself that the lameness was increasing so as to make it dangerous to the welfare of the horse to continue the journey.—GAGNON v. LANGIS (1920), 48 N. B. R. 76.—CAN.

374 ii. — Bill of sale granted by bailee—Rights of grantee.—A., the owner of twenty-seven cows depasturing on his farm, agreed to lease his farm & cows to G. for a term of years, & it was agreed that G. should have the right to purchase the farm & stock at any time during the term. G. was given possession of the stock & farm. G. gave to applt. a bill of sale over the cows. A. recovered possession of his farm & cows from G., & shortly thereafter applt. seized & sold the cows under his bill of sale. Thirty-four cows were seized & sold, only nine of which were of the original herd, the balance having been bought by G. during the time he had possession of the farm. A. claimed damages for the seizure.—Held: it had not been shown that the cattle substituted by G. for those originally bailed to him had become the property of A., who was entitled to damages only in respect of the cows originally bailed.—NORFOLK CO-OPERATIVE DAIRY CO., LTD. v. ALLEN, [1924] N. Z. L. R. 136.—N.Z.

374 ii. — Loss by bailee—Negligence.—In an action for the value of a horse which was lost after it had been hired to deft. under an agreement whereby the latter undertook to take “good care in every way” thereof, it appeared that the horse, which was unbroken, was received by deft. & put into a pasture belonging to a neighbour of deft., & deft. went to see it every other day. The pasture was surrounded by a fence of two strands of wire, & the horse got out twice during the winter but was put back. It disappeared about the end of the following April. The fence was down in one place, & the evidence showed a custom among the farmers in the neighbourhood to allow horses not in use to run at large during the winter. While deft. was given the right to work the horse, it was shown that it was not customary in that locality to break horses until the spring:—Held: deft. had taken sufficiently good care of the horse & was not liable for its loss.—ZIMMERMAN v. ARONER (1922), 63 D. L. R. 399; [1922] 2 W. W. R. 524.—CAN.

damages may be estimated with reasonable certainty.—SINCLAIR v. WALKER, [1917] 2 W. W. R. 321.—CAN.

ii. — Sale of bull—Bull sterile.—At an auction sale advertised “as pedigree stock sale” resp. purchased from applt. a bull described in the sale catalogue under the heading “Jersey Bulls” as “Lot 78, Bull Harbour Light.” The conditions of sale expressly negatived the existence of any warranties on the vendor's part. At the time of the sale the bull had not been used, but subsequently was found to be sterile. This condition was shown to be a latent defect not discoverable upon examination. In an action by resp., claiming damages:—Held: as the capacity for procreation was not, by implication, a part of the description, & as the bull complied in all other respects with the description, resp. was without remedy.—*DELL v. iv. — Default by purchaser—Resale by vendor.—Held: (1) money paid, not as a deposit, but on account of the purchase-price, must be returned to the purchaser; (2) having elected to treat the contract as at an end, instead of suing for damages for breach, the vendor was not entitled to recover anything for the care of the animals from the time fixed by the contract for delivery until he resold.—*BALDWIN v. The cow calved at her proper time, but, owing to disease which appeared in her teats, her milk supply was defective:—Held: (1) the warranty applied to the period of calving, & guaranteed, against the ordinary risks of that period, that the cow's teats would then be capable of performing their function of giving milk; (2) as the disease from which the cow suffered had not been proved to be due either to negligence on pursuer's part or to external accident, the guarantee applied.—*KYLE v. re. Rescission—Affirmance of contract after notice of misrepresentation.—A purchaser of a mare was not allowed rescission on the ground of what the ct. found was an innocent misrepresentation as to her being in foal to a celebrated stallion, because after discovery that the mare was not in foal he repeatedly attempted to get her in foal by breeding her to another stallion, this being held to amount to an affirmance of the contract.—*MONTICELLO STATE BANK v. 486 ix. — — —.]—A written contract entered into in Mar. 1928, for the sale of a stallion provided that the only "guarantee" by which the seller bound himself was that the horse was serviceably sound as a serving stallion, and it also provided that if the horse "after a fair trial on sure breeding mares" should prove not to be so sound the buyer would return it to the seller & receive another horse of equal value in exchange, but that the seller should not be bound by "the conditions of this guarantee" unless the buyer submitted a monthly report in writing showing the condition of the horse, etc., & that the contract should expire & the seller be released from any further obligation to the buyer after Apr. 1, 1929, except in the event of the death of the horse within three years. In an action, begun after Apr. 1, 1929, for the balance of the purchase-price the buyer claimed a set-off for damages for loss of service fees which he would have earned with the horse had it been as guaranteed & counter claimed for the excess of said damages over the amount of plff.'s claim:—Held: deft.'s only remedy for the difference between the purchase-price & the actual value of the horse was that expressly agreed to in the contract, viz. the return of the horse and the taking of another in its place, said provision, however, did not affect his right to sue for other damages, such as loss of service fees, which he had suffered up to Apr. 1, 1929, through

A race horse, exceeding £50 in value, was delivered to the co. for transit by the sender's groom, who informed the booking clerk that he had got "a very valuable 'chaser, worth about $1,000," a figure arrived at by the groom himself from casual gossip. The clerk gave the groom the co.'s form of "consignment note & waybill" for live stock, & the groom filled it in for carriage at the ordinary rate, & signed it, with full knowledge of its contents. The horse having been injured in transit:—Held: (1) the above conditions were not unreasonable; (2) the contract of carriage, which was signed by the groom under a direction by his employer that the horse was to be carried at the ordinary rate, exempted the co. from liability for any greater amount than £50; (3) in order to make the co. liable for the full value of the horse, the declaration of value must have been made with the intention of paying the higher rate, & the statement of value made by the groom to the booking clerk was insufficient.—*FOX v. 563a. ——— Birds lawfully taken elsewhere.]—Applt. was charged under Wild Birds Protection Act, 1880 (c. 85), s. 3, as extended under s. 8 in the county of London by the Wild Birds Protection (Administrative County of London) Order, 1909, par. 4, with having in his possession some goldfinches recently taken. The magistrate found that the charge was proved & dismissed it under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907 (c. 17), ordering applt. to pay the costs. The birds were lawfully caught in Ireland on or immediately before Dec. 3, 1918, & after being kept there for upwards of a month to enable them to recover their condition, & travel safely, were sent to applt. in London by post. They were found in applt.'s possession in a wild & terrified state on Jan. 15, 1919:—

Held: the magistrate was justified in taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case, including the condition of the birds when exposed for sale & the fact that they had to be kept in Ireland for some time in order to endure the journey & arrive alive, & also the length of the journey, in order to arrive at the conclusion that the birds were recently taken.—HARRIS v. The dog was not doing damage & deft. made no effort to drive it away before he shot it, & the justices found that shooting was not necessary :—Held: he was guilty of "cruelly ill-treating" the dog within Protection of Animals Act, 1911 (c. 27), s. 1.—BARNARD v. 587a. ——— Liberation in exhausted condition.]—On a prosecution of A. & G. for cruelly ill-treating a live wild rabbit contrary to Protection of Animals Act, 1911 (c. 27), s. 1, it appeared that A. had dangled the rabbit by its hind legs three or four yards away from two greyhounds, held in leash by G., & that the greyhounds having been taken thirty or forty yards away, the rabbit had been thrown on the ground, where it had remained, only hopping a couple of yards when flicked by a hat. The magistrate held that there was no cruel ill-treatment within the sect.; that what had been done by resps. was ordinary coursing & so protected by sect. 1 (3) (b), & that there was no evidence of the rabbit having been liberated in an injured, mutilated, or exhausted condition. On appeal :—Held: all the evidence showed that there had been cruel ill-treatment of the rabbit & that the rabbit had been liberated in an exhausted condition. On this ground & also on the ground that the cruel ill-treatment occurred before the rabbit was liberated for the purpose of being coursed or hunted, resps. had not brought themselves within the

The Animal Contagious Diseases Act, R. S. C. 1906 (c. 75), does not give a

Compensation—On commercial basis of valuation—Failure to object—Valuation binding.—By Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), s. 15 (2), "The Board shall for animals slaughtered under this section pay compensation as follows: (i) Where the animal slaughtered was affected with foot-&-mouth disease the compensation shall be the value of the animal immediately before it became so affected. (ii) In every other case the compensation shall be the value of the animal immediately before it was slaughtered."

Ptff. was the owner of a herd of pedigree Friesian cattle which became infected with foot-&-mouth disease, & the Minister of Agriculture & Fisheries provisionally decided that it was not a case for slaughter, but was a case for isolation which would have caused expense to ptff. together with possible risk of losing his stock. Subsequently, however, after certain conversations between the Govt. inspector & ptff. the Minister decided to have the cattle valued & slaughtered. The cattle were valued on behalf of the Minister on a commercial & not a pedigree basis at £993, & notice of this valuation was given to ptff. & he signed the valuation form. The cattle were accordingly slaughtered on the following day & ptff. was paid the sum of £993. Ptff. did not give within 14 days, as required by clause 39 of Animals (Transit & General) Order, 1912, a counter-notice that he disputed the valuation. Afterwards ptff. claimed from the Minister the difference between the £993 & the pedigree value. The latter was agreed at the trial to be £2,162. The claim was based (inter alia) on the provision in s. 15 (2) that "the value" of the slaughtered animals should be paid as compensation:—Held: as ptff. & the Minister had agreed that the valuation should be on a commercial basis, the agreement was binding & the claim of ptff. failed.—BLIGH v. MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & FISHERIES (1931), 47 T. L. R. 492.

705a. — Burden of proof—Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), ss. 4 (1), 57 (1).—A farmer who was summoned under Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (c. 57), s. 4, for not giving notice with all practicable speed to a constable of the fact that two of his cows were suffering from foot & mouth disease, contended before the justices that as there was no evidence that he knew before the day on which he gave notice that the animals were affected, he had discharged the onus which lay upon him under sect. 4 by giving notice on that date. The justices accepted this contention, & dismissed the summons:—Held: this contention was in direct conflict with sect. 57 of the Act, which cast on the accused the onus of proving absence of knowledge, & that the justices ought to have convicted.—WILSON v. YATES (1927), 91 J. P. 188; 44 T. L. R. 25; 25 L. G. R. 514, D. C.

No evidence was led to prove the authenticity of the certificate, which was not attested, or to prove that the grantor held the office of veterinary inspector under the Act. The justices sustained an objection to the admission of the certificate as evidence:—Held: the certificate was admissible as evidence, in terms of Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, s. 44 (5), without proof of its authenticity or of the grantor's qualifications, at all events in the absence of specific challenge on these points by the accused at the trial.—*ENDERSON v. - 36b. Reference under National Health Insurance Regulations of Insurance Commissioners.]—By an agreement between a medical practitioner on the panel & the insurance committee of a county, the practitioner agreed to give medical treatment to insured persons & by clause 1 the National Health Insurance (Medical Benefit) Regulations (England), 1913, were incorporated. By clause 14, "any dispute or question arising between the committee & the practitioner . . . relating to the construction of this agreement or the rights & liabilities of the committee or the practitioner . . . hereunder shall be referred to the Comrs." By reg. 51 of the regulations, "Where under the provision of these regulations or of any agreement made between the committee & a practitioner . . . is referred, or any appeal from a decision of the committee is made to the Comrs. the Comrs. shall determine such questions or appeal in such manner as they think fit, & if in the opinion of the Comrs. a hearing is required they may authorise any two or more of the Comrs. to hear & determine such question or appeal, & any decision of the Comrs. or any of them made under this article shall be final & conclusive." A dispute having arisen under the agreement, the practitioner brought an action against the committee in respect thereof, & the committee applied under the Act of 1889, s. 4, to stay the action:—Held: the action must be stayed.

d. i. ——— Informal extension of written submission amounting to new parol submission.—An award was not made within the time fixed by the written submission to arbn. nor was the time extended. The arbitrators proceeded after the expiry of the time, both parties appearing before them & taking part in the proceedings, & the award was made & not appealed from or moved against, & had ever since been acted upon:—Held: a parol submission must be taken to have been made & to include the terms contained in the written one, & the award to have been made pursuant to the parol submission.—HARRISON v. HARRISON (1918), 41 O. L. R. 296; 13 O. W. N. 246.—CAN.

10 v. ----- Signature of one of series of documents.—Forming part of agreement.)—A submission or written agreement to submit differences to arbn. may be collected from a series of documents, even though connected by parol evidence, & signature of any document forming part of the agree-

91. — Must not be contrary to public policy. — If it is an implied term of a reference to arbitr., & of an arbitration pursuant to the award, that a complaint that a non-compoundable offence under the Penal Code has been committed shall not be proceeded with, the consideration is unlawful on the ground of public policy; & the award & arbitration are therefore unenforceable; that is indicative of whether in law a prosecution has been commenced. — KAMINI KUMAR BASU v. BIRENDRANATH BASU (1939), 57 L. R. Ind. App. 117, P. C. — IND.

44b. ——— Enforcement.]—Pltf. issued a writ in the Ch. Div. claiming an account & payment of all sums due to her under a contract entered into by pltf. with deft. An order was accordingly made for an account. At the request of both parties, the master gave a decision on a matter which was not covered by the judge's order for an account, & he issued a certificate to the effect that a certain sum was due from deft. to pltf. Deft. sought to have the certificate discharged or varied by a judge of the Ch. Div., but the judge treated the certificate as a nullity, on the ground that the master had no power to consider matters not within the scope of the original order for an account. Pltf. then sought unsuccessfully to enforce the master's certificate, asking for the payment of the sum alleged to be due to her. Pltf. then brought an action in the K. B. Div., claiming payment of the amount awarded by the master, on the ground that the master had acted as an arbitrator, & that his decision was therefore in the nature of an award:—Held: the intention of the parties was that the master should deal with the dispute according to the ordinary process of the ct., under which his determination would not be final, but subject to a further order by the judge. His decision therefore, could not be treated as an award, & the present action could not succeed.—WYNDHAM v. JACKSON, [1938] 2 All E. R. 109; 107 L. J. K. B. 295; 158 L. T. 296; 54 T. L. A dispute having arisen between the parties, defts. appointed M. as their arbitrator. Pltf. having failed to appoint an arbitrator after due notice given, M. made an award in favour of defts., & defts. thereupon counter-claimed to enforce the award:—Held: (1) the words "to be settled by arbn. in London in the usual way" meant the way in which disputes arising as to the particular commodity were settled in London, & there was ample evidence that the dispute had been settled "in the usual way"; (2) any objection to the award upon the ground of irregularity or misconduct on the part of the arbitrator could only be taken by motion to set aside or remit the award, & pltf. having failed to move within the limited time, his remedy in that respect had lapsed.—*SCRIMAGLIO v. entered into in London by an English registered co. as agents for defts., & the London branch of a Paris firm as agents for the charterers, an Argentine co., the N. was chartered to load the grain in the River Plate for delivery at Scandinavian ports. The charterers were the shippers. The charterparty was in English on the Chamber of Shipping River Plate ("Centrocon") form. The bills of lading, in an English form & in the English language, incorporated "all the terms, conditions & exceptions" of the charterparty "including the negligence clause." The charterparty contained the usual English arbn. clause. The cargo was damaged by fire on board the N. due, as pitfs. alleged, to the ship being unseaworthy. Defts., who counterclaimed for a general average contribution, in an amended defence pleaded that the law governing the bills of lading contract was Yugo-Slavian law, the law of the flag, under which it was alleged that, if they had exercised due diligence to keep the ship seaworthy, the exceptions in the charterparty would apply without the implied warranty of seaworthiness. It was admitted that the proper law of the charterparty was English law. The question of the law applicable to the bills of lading was tried as a preliminary issue:—Held: (1) the arbn. clause, which would have been decisive as to the application of English law, was not incorporated into the bills of lading; but (2) those clauses, which were incorporated, & particularly the exceptions clause, could not be isolated from their context & incorporated without any indication of the proper law of the contract from which they were taken; (3) the inference was that sensible business men must have intended that the bills of lading should be read with the English interpretation attaching to the charterparty; & (4) both on what should be presumed to be the intention of the parties & on the ground of business efficacy the proper law of the contract was English & not Yugo-Slavian law.—THE NJEGOS, [1936] P. 90; 105 L. Condition 8 provided that the policy might be renewed from year to year but only upon condition that nothing had happened to increase the risk, & if the risk was increased by (inter alia) the assured engaging in some other occupation, then "unless notice in writing of such increased risk is given to the co. . . & any extra premium that may be required paid . . . the policy is void & no claim can be made." By condition 11, "If any question shall arise touching this policy or the liability of the co. thereunder or the extent or nature of such liability or otherwise howsoever in connection herewith then the assured & all persons claiming through the assured may refer & shall be bound, if the co. shall so require, to refer the same to arbn. by one arbitrator to be agreed on or in default of agreement by two arbitrators & their umpire under the Act of 1889 . . . & no person shall be entitled to bring or to maintain any action or proceeding on this policy except for the sum awarded under such arbn." During the currency of the policy the assured was killed by an accident. The co. denied liability on the policy on the ground that the assured either had misstated his occupation in the proposal, or, if not, had changed his occupation for one involving increased risk of which notice as required by condition 8 had not been given to the co., & contended that the policy was therefore void, & they required the dispute to be referred to arbn. under condition 11. In an action on the policy:—Held: (1) upon the co. requiring arbn. condition 11 made the obtaining of an award a condition precedent to a right of action; (2) the co. by relying on the terms of the policy which rendered it void in certain events did not thereby repudiate the policy as a binding contract between the parties, & were entitled to rely upon the arbn. clause as a defence to the action.—WOODALL v. PEARL ASSURANCE CO., [1919] 1 K. B. 593;

therefore a dispute had arisen which, under clause 19 of the policy, should be referred to arbn.:—Held: the question of misrepresentation was within the arbn. clause in the policy.—RICHARDSON v. ARMY, NAVY, & GENERAL ASSURANCE ASSCN., LTD., [1924] 2 I. R. 96.—IR.

The co. repudiated a claim by F. on the ground that non-disclosure by him of material facts had rendered it null & void, but in an action by F. the co. moved to stay the proceedings & to refer to arbn.:—Held: the contract having been repudiated the dispute was not one as to the extent & meaning of the policy, & not being otherwise within the arbn. clause could not be referred to arbn.:—*FORNEY v. e iii. ———.]—Where a contract contains an arbn. clause, & one of the parties seeks to avoid the contract, the dispute is referable to arbn. if the avoidance of the contract arises out of the terms of the contract itself. Where, however, a party seeks to avoid the contract for reasons dehors it, the arbn. clause cannot be resorted to as it, together with the other terms of the contract, is set aside. In other words, a party cannot rely on a term of the contract to repudiate it, & still say the arbn. clause should not apply. The contracts contained provisions exempting the sellers from liability for late & short shipment attributable (inter alia) to Govt. commandeering of ships, war, or any other unforeseen circumstances & included provisions for the shipment of delayed cargoes as soon as possible, subject to a right of refusal on the part of the purchasers. Each contract contained an arbn. clause in these terms: "Any dispute that may arise under this contract to be settled by arbn." Before all the bales had been shipped, the further export of jute from India to the Argentine was prohibited. A controversy having arisen between the parties as to whether, in the circumstances, the contracts had been rendered void & unenforceable quoad the shipment of the remainder of the bales:—Held: on a construction of the contracts, the controversy was a dispute arising under the contracts, & accordingly fell to be determined by arbn.—*SCOTT & SONS v. 164a. ———.]—By two contracts made in 1919, applt. bought from resps. a large quantity of "American Fresh Eggs." The contracts provided that in case of any dispute as to the quality or condition of the goods, the question should be referred to arbn., provided that, "such reference shall be claimed in writing within three days after the goods have been landed." It was also provided that the award in writing of any two arbitrators should be conclusive & binding on all parties, subject to the right of appeal. The goods arrived in England, & were not examined at the port of landing, but were sold by applt. to sub-purchasers. More than three days after the goods had been landed applt. wrote to resps. complaining that the goods were of inferior quality, & some time later he wrote a letter claiming a reference to arbn. Resps. did not then take the objection that the claim was out of time, but signed a submission to arbn. in respect of each contract. At the reference resps. took the points that applt.'s claim was out of time, & that the goods should have been examined at the port of landing. The arbitrators awarded "that the buyer was out of time in examining & making claim on the goods, & also in claiming arbn., & that therefore his case fails." The buyer took no steps to set aside the awards, but nearly two years later brought an action claiming damages for breach of contract:—Held: the awards were a bar to the action.—*AYCOUGH v. 165a. Arbitrator to be appointed within limited time.—A ship was chartered for a voyage from R. to H. with a full cargo of linseed. The charterparty provided for the reference of all disputes to the final arbitrament of two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties, with power to appoint an umpire, & the clause continued: "Any claim must be made in writing & claimants' arbitrator appointed within three months of final discharge, & where this provision is not complied with the claim shall be deemed to be waived & absolutely barred." After the arrival of the ship at H. the charterers brought an action against the shipowners in respect of damage alleged to have been occasioned to a part of the linseed during the voyage by reason of the unseaworthiness of the ship at the commencement of the voyage. The shipowners pleaded that the charterers failed to appoint their arbitrator within three months of the discharge of the ship & that by reason thereof the action was not maintainable, & by order of the ct., the question whether the claim in the action was barred by the arbn. clause was tried as a preliminary question of law:—Held: (1) the arbn. clause was not open to objection on the ground that it ousted the jurisdiction of the ct.; (2) inasmuch as the claim in the action was founded upon a breach of the implied condition of seaworthiness, there being in the charterparty no express provision relating to unseaworthiness, the shipowners were not entitled to the benefit of the term in the clause restricting the time within which the action could be brought, & consequently the claim was not barred by the arbn. clause.—*ATLANTIC SHIPPING & TRADING CO. v. contract should be referred to arbn., the claimants' arbitrator to be appointed within a time therein limited, & if he was not so appointed the claim was to be deemed to be waived & absolutely barred. Loss to cargo was suffered owing to the ship's unseaworthiness. The cargo owners claimed damages & went to arbn., but did not appoint their arbitrator within the time limited. An award was made in their favour, the ship-owners not appearing.—Held: although the loss was caused by unseaworthiness, & consequently, the above clause could not have been set up by the shipowners, the cargo owners were entitled in virtue of the clause to go to arbn., but only in accordance with its terms, & as they had not complied with those terms the arbitrator had no jurisdiction to make the award.—*FORD (H.) & Co. v. Pltfs. resold the copra cake to B. & Co., who resold it to dealers, & they in turn resold it to farmers, who used it for feeding cattle. The cattle fed on the cake became ill, & it was then found on analysis that the cake contained an admixture of castor beans in so large a proportion as to make it poisonous. Claims were then made by the various buyers against their sellers & by pltfs. against defts. as soon as the mischief was discovered, but this was after the expiration of fourteen days from the final discharge of the vessel. Pltfs. claimed arbn., but the arbitrator before whom the matter came held that he had no jurisdiction, as notice of arbn. was not given nor the arbitrator nominated in time. In an action by pltfs. claiming damages, it was found that it was within the contemplation of the parties that the copra cake would be used for cattle food & nothing else.—Held: the presence of the arbn. clause was not in itself a bar to the action, nor was the award, which dealt merely with the arbitrator's jurisdiction & not with the claim.—*PINNOCK BROTHERS v. Before completion of discharge defts. made various payments to pltfs. on account of freight, & on final discharge pltfs. claimed that £568 was still owing for freight. Defts. admitted that £416 was still owing for freight, but they set up a counterclaim for £581 for short delivery & refused to pay the £416 until their counterclaim was met. Neither party referred the matter to arbn., & more than three months after final discharge pltfs. brought an action for £568 balance of freight & defts. counterclaimed £581 for short delivery.—Held: though pltfs. could not recover the £568, as the claim for it ought to have been taken to arbn., yet they could recover the £416 about which there had never been any dispute, but the counterclaim, as it was always in dispute, was barred by the arbn. clause.—*BEDE STEAM SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. The judgment provided further that the sums to be debited & credited were to be determined by two appraisers, & that any matter upon which they differed was to be referred to a named umpire whose decision thereon was to be final; & that the Manitoba Arbn. Act should not apply. Defts. moved to set aside or vary an award made:—Held: (1) under the words "all loss" there was jurisdiction to award to pltf. not only sums actually expended at the date of the award, but also a sum estimated as being necessary to make good the defects; (2) the award being within the jurisdiction conferred by the submission, & there being no error apparent on its face, it could not be questioned either on the facts or on the law.—*A.-G. 294a. — Effect of Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act, 1930 (c. 25).—Pltf. was injured in a motor accident & recovered judgment against C. & H. for £300 damages for negligence. H. subsequently became bkpt. At the time of the accident H. was insured with deft. co. against third party risks. The policy of insurance contained the usual arbn. clause making an award a condition precedent to bringing an action on the policy. Pltf. issued a writ against deft. co. contending that under Third Parties (Rights against Insurers) Act, 1930 (c. 25), s. 1, & Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 36 (4), they were accountable to him for the amount of the judgment. Deft. co. thereupon took out a summons to stay the action on the ground that under the arbn. clause the obtaining of an award was a condition precedent to bringing the action. SWIFT, J., dismissed the summons & directed that the summons should be put into the New Procedure List. On appeal by deft. co. — Held: the rights of deft. co. under the policy were not affected by either of the Acts of 1930, & deft. co. was therefore entitled to rely on the arbn. clause, which made it a condition precedent to bringing an action that an award should first be obtained.—*FRESHWATER v. 294b. — — — ]—The infant pltf. was employed by B. & Co., & while in their employ sustained serious injuries as the result of an accident. He brought an action against B. & Co. & obtained a judgment which he was unable to enforce as B. & Co. went into liquidation. B. & Co. had started arbn. proceedings against defts., who were their underwriters in a policy of insurance which contained a Scott v. Avery clause. Pltf. brought the present action, relying upon the Third Parties

(Rights against Insurers) Act, 1930 (c. 25). On an application to stay the action on the ground that there was in existence no arbn. award, which alone could give pltf. a right of action against defts., the judge ordered the action to be stayed. Pltf. appealed:—Held: (1) this was not a matter of practice or procedure, but a question of liability to pay such sum as should be found due upon the arbn., in accordance with the clause in the insurance policy. The Ct. of Appeal would therefore not interfere with the judge's order unless it could be shown that he had gone wrong in principle, or that his order was one which would produce an injustice; (2) the judge was right in refusing to eliminate the condition precedent in accordance with the power given him by Arbn. Avery*, "& the obtaining of an award shall be a condition precedent to the liability of the co. under this policy." B.'s car was involved in a collision with a motor omnibus, & pltf. who was a passenger on the omnibus, brought an action for personal injuries against B. & the omnibus proprietors. B. referred the claim to the insurance co. & they repudiated liability, & B. thereupon instituted third-party proceedings against them. On a motion by the insurance co. that the third-party proceedings should be stayed on the ground of the inclusion of the above clause in the policy, B. contended that by reason of Road Traffic Act, 1930 (c. 43), s. 38, the clause had no effect. The judge ordered a stay. On appeal:—Held: the arbn. clause, even with the addition in Scott v. Avery, was unaffected by sect. 38, & even if the addition was avoided for certain purposes by sect. 38, the addition was severable & the first part of the clause was unaffected by the sect., & the judge had rightly exercised his discretion to order a stay.—*JONES v. Resp. covenanted not to transfer the demised premises without the written consent of applt.; but, in breach of that covenant, he sub-leased for the entire term, there being similar covenants in the sub-lease. At the end of the term applt. having resumed possession, resp. sued him to recover the value of buildings erected by the sub-lessee. There had been no agreement as to the amount of the valuation, & no arbn.:—Held: the action failed, since upon the true construction of applt.'s covenant resp. could not recover in the absence of an agreement, or an award, as to the amount of the valuation.—*HALLEN v. The premium in respect of the insurance was not paid, & the policy was not issued, but cover notes were issued from time to time. On Oct. 2, 1935, after the expiration of the last cover note, the motorist was involved in an accident & incurred certain liabilities. The premium in respect of the insurance was paid on Oct. 29, 1935, & a policy dated as from

The insurance co. applied for a stay of the action on the ground that the issue fell within the arbn. clause in the policy:—Held: since, if the issue were referred to arbn., a finding by the arbitrator that there was no contract in existence as at the date of the accident, would be a finding that the arbn. clause never existed & that the arbitrator never had jurisdiction to deal with the matter, the issue was a proper one to be tried in the cts.—TOLLER v. 402a. Summons for discovery.]—A party to a written contract containing an agreement to refer disputes to arbn. was sued for breach of the contract. He was unaware that the contract contained an agreement to refer. P^lts. in the action took out a summons for discovery. Deft. asked for discovery also, & an order for mutual discovery was made.

373 I. Questions of law inter alia.]—An agreement for the supply of electric energy by p^lt. co. to deft. co. provided that the adjustment of all disputes should be submitted to three arbitrators. Disputes having arisen, there was an arbitration & an award. Further disputes subsequently arising, this action was brought to recover a sum of money alleged to be due under the agreement; & deft. co. moved under Arbn. Act, 1927 (c. 97), s. 7, to stay proceedings:—Held: as to the questions which had to be determined were mixed questions of law & fact, the cts.'s discretion should be exercised by refusing the motion & allowing the action to proceed.—M. J. O'BRIEN, LTD. v. SEAMAN KENI CO., [1938] 3 D. L. R. 43; 63 O. L. R. 160.—CAN.

373 II. —.]—Arbitrators are competent to determine points of law as well as questions of the construction of an agreement. It is erroneous to apply English decisions subsequent to the English Arbn. Act of 1889, without qualification, to cases of stay under the Indian Arbn. Act, 1899. The principles of decisions in England which, since the English Arbn. Act of 1889, make the cts. there reluctant to stay the suit where the main point in dispute is a question of law, because such a question must ultimately return by way of a case stated to the cts. for decision, should not be applied for refusing a stay under Indian Arbn. Act, 1899, s. 19.—EASNER GUNCO COAL ASSOC., LTD. v. TATA IRON & STEEL CO., LTD. (1938), 1 L. L. R. 53 Bom. 271.—IND.

374 V. Fundamental questions of law.]—On motion by defts. to stay the proceedings, & to refer the matters in dispute to defts.' surveyor:—Held: fundamental questions of law were involved which should be tried in an action. Motion refused.—HOGG v. BELFAST CORPN., [1919] 2 I. R. 305.—IR.

PART I. SECT. 10, SUB-SECT. 6.—E.

376 VI. —.]—In an action for specific performance of a contract, deft. applied for stay of proceedings under an arbn. clause:—Held: the dispute going to the making of the contract was not within the arbn. clause, & stay refused.—MCINTOSH v. LAYFIELD, [1919] 1 W. W. R. 590.—CAN.

376 VII. —.]—On a motion by defts. to stay proceedings & to refer the matters in dispute to arbn.:—Held: the matters in dispute were outside the arbn. clause, & motion refused.—HOGG v. BELFAST CORPN., [1919] 2 I. R. 305.—IR.

383 I. a. —.]—The cts. should be reluctant to permit an appeal to them by one of the parties to an agreement to refer questions that may arise between them to a domestic forum rather than the ordinary cts., when the agreement is couched in wide terms.—STOKES-STEPHENS OIL CO. v. MCNAUGHT, [1918] 3 W. W. R. 124.—CAN.

the proceedings.—HARRISON, ETC. v. CRESPIN, [1931] V. L. R. 643.—AUS.

383 I. b. —.]—The application for a stay is too late if made after delivery of the defence.—BRAND v. NATIONAL LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA, [1918] 3 W. W. R. 858.—CAN.

383 I. c. —.]—An application for stay of proceedings before defts. has filed his written statement or taken any other step in the suit does not constitute taking a step in the proceedings within Arbn. Act, s. 19, so as to operate as a bar.—JOYLL & CO. v. GOPRAM BHOTIA (1930), 1 L. R. 47 Cal. 611.—IND.

396 I. Security for costs.]—Defts. were held to be precluded from moving for an order staying proceedings in an action, by having previously issued & served an order for security for costs.—HEISTEN & SONS v. POLSON IRON WORKS, LTD., [1930] 46 O. L. R. 335.—CAN.

398 I. Summons for directions.]—If a party on a summons for directions takes objection, this is a "step in the action" & prevents him applying for a stay of the action, although he may say at the time he intends to apply for a stay.—BUCKLEY v. QUEEN INSURANCE CO., [1933] 3 D. L. R. 165.—CAN.

398 I. Application for adjournment.]—Held: the mere application for an adjournment of the summons was not a "step in the proceedings" sufficient in itself to disentitle the lessors to apply to have the matters in dispute referred to arbn.—O'SHAUGHNESSY v. QUICK SERVICE STATIONS, LTD., [1938] V. L. R. 486; 49 A. L. T. 378.—AUS.

TURPIN*, [1918] 1 K. B. 358; 87 L. J. K. B. 357; 118 L. T. 346; 62 Sol. Jo. 331, D. C.

- 408b. Transfer of summons to counsel's list.]—An action was brought upon a contract which contained a provision that all disputes should be submitted to arbn. Pltf. issued a summons for judgment under R. S. C., Order XIV. Deft. thereupon took out a summons asking that the action be stayed, & had both summonses transferred to counsel's list. Pltf. contended that the act of transferring a summons to counsel's list constituted a step in the proceedings within Arbn. Act, 1889, s. 4:—Held: the mere act of transferring a summons from one list to another is not a step in the proceedings, & deft. was, therefore, not debarred from having the action stayed & the dispute referred to arbn.—LANE v. HERMAN, [1939] 3 All E. R. 353; 161 L. T. 106; 55 T. L. R. 884; 83 Sol. Jo. 584, C. A.

- 427a. Restraint pending result of proceedings out of jurisdiction.]—The steamship I. grounded in the Dardanelles, but only so lightly that by the removal of part of her cargo she could have been refloated by her own power. The exclusive control of salvage work in those waters was, under the law of Turkey, in the hands of a salvage co. The master of the ship was consequently unable to hire lighters otherwise than from that co., & for that purpose the co. required him to enter into a salvage agreement in the ordinary Lloyd's form. That form provides for an arbn. in England, & an arbr. had been duly appointed. The owners brought proceedings in Turkey to set aside the salvage agreement, on the ground that it was obtained by duress. Thereupon they applied to the Admiralty Ct. in England to stay all proceedings in the arbn. pending the decision of the action in Turkey. The ct. refused the appn., whereupon this appeal was brought:—Held: the prosecution of the action in Turkey, in the circumstances, did not justify the staying
- of the arbn. proceedings. The owners of the ship were bound by the salvage agreement.—TURK GEMI KURTAMA v. ITHAKA (OWNERS), THE ITHAKA, [1939] 3 All E. R. 630; 83 Sol. Jo. 639, C. A.

The charterparty contained a clause by which all disputes arising out of the contract were submitted to arbn. The ship was requisitioned by the Govt. before Mar. 1, 1917, & was not released until Feb. 1919. Appts. then refused to take delivery of her. 949a. —.—.]—An arbitrator appointed under Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908 (c. 28), for the purpose of determining claims & compensation payable in respect of (inter alia) certain fixtures, hay & straw left by the tenant on his farms, & hay & straw removed by him after the determination of the tenancy, held two sittings & then gave notice that he had been waiting to be supplied with information as to the hay & straw sold off & warned the parties that if it was not supplied promptly he would have to hold another sitting. After an interval of less than a fortnight he gave further notice that he would go to the farms on a specified date "to value the hay & straw & to receive an account of the hay & straw removed." The tenant not having such an account ready & thinking that the only question to be dealt with was a valuation of the stacks of hay & straw remaining on the farm did not attend by himself or his representative, but his foreman was present to point out & give information about the stacks on the farms. While there the arbitrator, besides valuing the stacks, questioned the foreman as to the hay & straw removed. Immediately afterwards he closed the hearing & made an award in which he dealt with the claim for hay & straw removed on the basis of the foreman's evidence, which had not been tendered by either party, & was taken in the presence only of the landlord's representative. He did not deal with the question of the fixtures, but purported to reserve power to deal with them, if required :—Held : the award must be set aside as the arbitrator had been guilty of legal misconduct in taking evidence in the absence of, & without previous notice to, the tenant.—Re O'CONNOR & WHITLAW'S ARBITRATION (1919), 88 L. It makes no difference that the arbitrators could not properly have made any other award than that which they did make, & it is quite immaterial whether the evidence wrongly admitted helped the arbitrators to a right conclusion or a wrong conclusion, & the ct. cannot inquire to what extent their minds were affected by such evidence.—ROYAL COMMISSION ON SUGAR SUPPLY v. KWIK-HOO-TONG TRADING SOCIETY (1922), 38 T. The rules required that all members of the assocn. making contracts subject to those rules should refer any disputes arising out of such contracts, including any questions of law, to the arbn. of the council of the assocn.; & by r. 19: "Neither buyer, seller, trustee in bkpcy., nor any other person as aforesaid shall require, nor shall they apply to the ct. to require, any arbitrators to state in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct. any question of law arising in the reference, but such question of law shall be determined in the arbn. in manner herein directed." A dispute between the buyers & sellers was referred to the arbn. of the council. The buyers requested the arbitrators either to state their award in the form of a special case under the Act of 1889, s. 7, or alternatively to state a case for the opinion of the ct. under sect. 19 upon certain points of law arising in the reference, or to give them an opportunity of applying to the ct. for an order directing them to state a case. The arbitrators, thinking themselves precluded by r. 19, refused to comply with that request, & made their award without giving the buyers an opportunity of applying to the ct. for an order. The buyers move to set aside the award on the ground of misconduct of the arbitrators in so refusing:—Held: r. 19 & the agreement embodying it were contrary to public policy & invalid, as involving an ouster of the statutory jurisdiction of the cts. under the Arbn.  Until security for costs given.]—The Govt. of an independent State made with a co. a contract containing an arbn. clause. An arbn. took place & was divided into two parts, the first being as to whether the Govt. had committed a breach of contract. The result of this part of the arbn. was that an award was given in favour of the co. & the Govt. was ordered to pay costs. The second part of the arbn. as to the amount of damage then began, & when the evidence had been closed the Govt. asked the arbitrator to state an advisory case for the opinion of the ct., but the arbitrator refused to do so. The Govt. then issued a summons asking that the arbitrator might be ordered to state a case, & thereupon the co., applied that all further proceedings might be stayed until the Govt. (1) had paid the costs which it had been ordered to pay, & (2) had given security to answer the costs of the matter & of the arbn.:—Held: so far as concerned the summons for a case to be stated the Govt. was in the position of a plff., & it could not rely on its foreign sovereignty, & being out of the jurisdiction must give security for the costs of the summons, but the rest of the co.'s application must stand over to be dealt with on the hearing of the summons.—*DUFF DEVELOPMENT CO., LTD. v. 1058a. — — — — —]—A special case stated by an arbitrator for the opinion of the ct. is stated under the Act of 1889, s. 19, or s. 7, according as the arbitrator does or does not retain jurisdiction in the reference. If he retains jurisdiction the case is stated under sect. 19, & no appeal lies to the Ct. of Appeal from the decision of the High Ct. upon the special case; but if he makes his award finally, & retains no further jurisdiction in the reference, the case is stated under sect. 7 & an appeal lies from the decision of the ct.

By a submission contained in a charterparty disputes were referred to two arbitrators &, if they could not agree, to an umpire. The umpire stated for the opinion of the High Ct. a special case in which he set out the facts, decided that there had been a breach of the charterparty, & assessed damages for the breach. The award concluded with these words: "The question for the opinion of the ct. is whether upon the true construction of the charterparty & the facts stated by me the decisions at which I have arrived are correct in law. If they be correct my award is to stand, but if incorrect in any particulars I desire that the award may be referred back to me for reassessment of the damages due in accordance with the decision of the ct."—Held: this was not a final award; the case was, therefore, stated under sect. 19 & no appeal lay to the Ct. of Appeal.—*COGSTAD (C. The case proceeded as follows: "The question for the opinion of the ct. is whether upon the facts as stated by me my award is right in law. If my award be correct then it shall stand; but should the ct. find that it be wrong in law then I request that the ct. shall vary my award as in their discretion they may think fit, both as to the damages & as to the costs . . . except that if the ct. shall only vary my award on the subject of the amount of the damages, my discretion as to the costs of the reference & the costs of my award shall stand."—Held: the award was a complete & final award under sect. 7 of the Act of 1889.—*LARRINAGA & Co. v. While the plant for the working of the process was being erected, a dispute arose, resps. wanting appcts. to attend every day at the site of the plant & appcts. considering this to be no part of their duty. Resps. thereupon terminated the agreement & the matter was referred to arbn. Appcts. pleaded that the termination of the agreement was unjustified; resps. pleaded that appcts. should have attended every day & that they had been guilty of negligence in respect of certain matters set out in the counterclaim. The arbitrator found the termination of the agreement to be unjustified & also negligence on the part of appcts. in respect of the matters set out in the counterclaim, & he awarded appcts. damages after setting off an unspecified amount for damages for negligence. Resps. moved to set aside the award on the ground of error of law apparent on the face of it. At the hearing resps. contended that the whole of the pleadings in the arbitration were admissible. Resps. contended that for the purpose of deciding whether there was an error of law apparent on the face of the award, the ct. could not look at any document except the award itself. Resps. further contended that the arbitrator had committed an error in law in deciding that the negligence found did not afford sufficient ground for the termination of the agreement, & further that on the true consideration of the agreement, the refusal to attend daily was as a matter of law a sufficient ground for the termination of the agreement:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the arbitrator in his award referred to certain paragraphs in the counterclaim, such paragraphs ought, in considering whether there was an error on the face of the award, to be regarded as forming part of the award; (2) whether misconduct justifies dismissal is a question of fact, & the arbitrator's decision was final; (3) the right to terminate the agreement because appcts. refused to attend daily was a question specifically submitted to the arbitrator & the ct. could not interfere with his decision, even if the question was a question of law.—*HITCHINS v. if there had come into operation, a compulsory purchase order under sect. 35 of the Act of 1934, & as if a notice to treat had been served by the local authority for the compulsory purchase of the said lands on Feb. 1, 1936. The claimants claimed compensation, with interest thereon at 4 per cent., from Feb. 1, 1936, & as the parties could not agree, the assessment of such compensation was referred to an Official Arbitrator. It was now conceded by the claimants that the decision in Collins v. Feltham Urban District Council, [1937] 3 All E. To save their vessels from destruction by enemy submarine, the owners cut away the trawls, which were not insured, & claimed a general average contribution against the co., of which the owners were members. The rules provided that all disputes should be settled in the first instance by a general meeting of the co., or, on appeal, by two arbitrators & an umpire, none of whom should be lawyers. The general meeting having refused the claim, the owners proceeded to arbn. under a submission which provided that "all matters in difference in reference to the said claim for a general average contribution are referred," etc. The umpire by his award ignored the claim for general average. On a motion to set aside the award:—Held: it was bad as disclosing an error in law on the face of it; & having regard to the general terms of the submission, it was not open to resps. to say that a definite point of law had been submitted to arbn., as to which the decision of the arbitrator was final, & the award must be set aside.—*PARSONS v. 1603c. ———.]—Two firms amalgamated, & by clause 15 of the Articles of Partnership: "The shares of profits payable to the said partners as hereinbefore provided shall be reviewed & if necessary revised as on Sept. 30, 1928, & again as on Sept. 30, 1926, in such manner as may be mutually agreed upon, & in case of disagreement as shall be settled by the special arbitrator hereinafter referred to." By clause 41 the special arbitrator was appointed, & by clause 42 the Articles were to be deemed a submission to arbn. under the Arbn. Act, 1889. The partners did not agree upon whether there should be a review & revision on Sept. 30, 1926, & the dispute continued till the partnership terminated by effluxion of time on Sept. 30, 1929. Provision was made in the deed of dissolution for the exchange of a statement & counter-statement of the contentions of the parties with facts & figures & full particulars, on which the contentions were based, & if the parties failed to agree within two weeks of the delivery of the counter-statement, the dispute was to be referred to the special arbitrator under clauses 15, 41 & 42 of the Articles. The statement & counter-statement raised questions of law & of fact & of mixed law & fact. The dispute was referred to the special arbitrator, before whom the parties appeared in July, 1930, when he gave directions for discovery & adjourned. The parties in Dec. 1930, agreed that certain questions of law raised by certain of the partners in their counter-statement should be decided, with the assistance of a Chancery King's Counsel sitting as assessor, at a preliminary hearing. They also agreed that "either party shall have the same right of appeal in relation to any decision of the arbitrator at the preliminary hearing as such party would have had if there had been no preliminary hearing at all, & the points of law had been argued & determined upon the same occasion as the merits of the dispute." The special arbitrator having heard the parties, stated under the order of the ct. a special case on the questions of law under sect. 19 of Arbn. Act, 1889, which came before FARWELL, J., & the arbitrator stated the conclusions of FARWELL, J., upon the face of the award:—Held: by SCRUTTON, L.J., & ROOPE, J.—LAWRENCE, L.J., dissenting—this was a case where a dispute was referred to an arbitrator in the decision of which questions of law became material & accordingly the ct. could interfere if error in law appeared on the face of the award; per LAWRENCE, L.J., dissenting: In this case specific questions of law were referred to the special arbitrator for decision, as distinct from questions of law which became material in deciding disputes which were referred to him under clause 15. They were also questions of law which could not have been decided in arbitration proceedings under clause 15 in the absence of an express agreement between the parties to that effect, & therefore they could not be termed properly questions of law incidental to the determination of a dispute which had arisen under clause 15. Accordingly, though error in law might appear on the face of the award, the ct. could not interfere; also by SCRUTTON, L.J., & ROOPE, J. (a) clause 15 of the articles was not too vague or uncertain to be enforceable in law, or to be capable of judicial meaning or construction; & (b) the question whether or not a revision was necessary was a matter within the scope of the arbn. & accordingly the special arbitrator had jurisdiction. Accordingly the special arbitrator having held the contrary under the direction of FARWELL, J., & these errors appearing on the face of the award, it must be set aside, & the case remitted to him to consider on the merits.—*BARTON v. 1644a. —. —.]—Though an award may be set aside for an error of law appearing on the face of it, & though a question of construction is, generally speaking, a question of law, yet, where a question of construction is the very thing referred for arbn., then the decision of the arbitrator upon that point cannot be set aside by the ct. only because the ct. would itself have come to a different conclusion. If it appears by the award that the arbitrator has proceeded illegally, for instance, that he decided on evidence which in law is not admissible or on principles of construction which the law does not countenance, then there is error in law which may be ground for setting aside the award; but the mere dissent of the ct. from the arbitrator's conclusion on construction is not enough for that purpose.—*KELANTAN GOVERNMENT v. 1722a. — Reference to umpire by arbitrators.—Custom of the tallow trade.]—Pitfs. sold to defts. a quantity of paraffin wax under a contract providing, "any dispute arising under this contract to be settled by arbitrators in London in the usual way." A claim was made by defts. against pitfs., & the arbitrators, being unable to agree, appointed an umpire by a document headed, "the use of this form constitutes a submission to the rules of the assocn.," i.e., the London Oil & Tallow Trades Assocn. The umpire awarded that defts.' claim failed & that they were to pay the costs of the arbn. The rules of the assocn. provided for an appeal to an appeal committee, & defts. claimed a right of appeal. Pitfs. thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover the costs of the arbn., & the evidence was that in the trade in paraffin wax the usual way of settling a dispute by arbn. was to appoint arbitrators who could appoint an umpire whose decision would be final:—Held: the heading did not apply & the umpire was really appointed in pursuance of the original agreement as to arbn. & not under the rules of the assocn., & pitfs. were entitled to recover.—*PALMER & Co., LTD. v. Appcts. repudiated any contract being made. The matter was referred to arbn. by resps. in accordance with conditions of sale endorsed upon the alleged contract of the Liverpool United General Produce Assocn., Ltd. The award, dated Apr. 21, 1933, adjudged the appcts. to pay £800 to resps. as damages for breach of the alleged contract. Appcts. disputed the validity of the award, alleging that the real issue in dispute was whether there was a contract between them & resps. containing the alleged submission to arbn. Appcts. now sought to set aside the award on the ground that the arbitrators had purported to find the existence of a contract containing the alleged submission to arbn., but they had no jurisdiction as no submission had been signed by appcts.:—Held: the application to set aside the award was based upon the fact that there was one, & there could only be an award if there was a submission to arbn. Appcts.' case was that there was no submission & therefore there was no jurisdiction for the ct. to set aside an award which it was denied existed. The ct. would, however, stand over this appeal & direct appcts. to bring an action for a declaration that the award was null & void & on the decision of that action this appeal would be heard.—*OIL PRODUCTS TRADING CO., LTD. v. 1822b. —j—When questions of law arise in an arbn. it is of the greatest importance that the right of the parties to obtain the assistance of the ct. at any period of the proceedings should be fully enforced, though the arbn. tribunal has not passed through all the stages of its own procedure providing for an appeal from the award. If the umpire by refusing to make his award in the form of a special case deprives the parties of the right to have questions of law, which are neither frivolous nor vexatious but are substantial, decided by the ct., he is guilty of misconduct & his award will be set aside.—Re FISCHER & CO. & MANN & COOK, [1919] 2 K. The contract was signed by pitfs. in Norway & by defts. in London & was stamped with an English six-penny stamp, but not in accordance with the English law as to contracts of marine insurance, but it was valid by the law of Norway. An arbn. under the contract was held in Norway & an award was issued in favour of pitfs. In an action on the award defts. submitted that the law applicable to the whole contract must be the law of England, & that, since the contract neither was a policy as required by English law nor was properly stamped as such a policy, pitfs. could not recover on the award :—Held : as the action was brought on the award, & as the proper inference from the provision as to the arbn. being held in Norway was that the parties intended the law of Norway to govern the contract, pitfs. were entitled to recover the sum awarded.—*NORSKE ATLAS INSURANCE CO., LTD. v. notice of the writ on deft. in France. On Jan. 5, 1933, deft. applied to have that order set aside, but the application was dismissed. On appeal:—Held: (1) the order for service out of the jurisdiction was properly made under R. S. O., Ord. 11, r. 1 (e), as the action based on the award was for the enforcement of a contract made within the jurisdiction, namely, the submission to arbn. contained in the charterparty; but (2) the order could not be supported on the ground that the breach of contract was committed within the jurisdiction, as the award had not required payment in England, & the ordinary rule therefore applied that the debtor must seek out his creditors, the German firm, at their place of business & pay them there.

15a. Use of initials “A.A.I.”—Pltf. Bowler & his co-pltf. Blake carried on in partnership the business of auctioneers & estate agents at P. & G., & in May, 1920, deft. entered their employment as an outside canvassing & negotiating clerk under a written agreement of service which provided (inter alia) that either party could terminate the employment on giving seven days' notice in writing & (clause 5) “after the termination from any cause of the employment aforesaid the clerk shall not for the term of one year carry on or be interested in carrying on the business of auctioneers & estate agents after such termination directly or indirectly assist as clerk manager or in any other capacity in the carrying on of such business within the Lovegrove, A.A.I., Estate Agent,” the initials A.A.I. meaning Associate of the Auctioneers' Institute, but he did not take out an auctioneer's licence nor do any business as an auctioneer :—Held : deft. had not by the use of the initials A.A.I. held himself out to be an auctioneer.—BOWLER v. 63a. ————]—A freehold house was knocked down to deft. as the highest bidder, but he afterwards refused to sign the contract because one of the conditions of sale required the purchaser to pay certain road-making charges. On the same day the auctioneer, as soon as he was informed of deft.'s refusal, signed the contract as deft.'s agent. In an action by the vendor for specific performance, the judge held in the circumstances the auctioneer's signature could fairly be said to be part of the transaction of sale, & there was a memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 40 :—Held : an auctioneer had authority to sign a memorandum sufficient to satisfy the Act, provided he signed it at such a time & in such circumstances that the signature could fairly be said to be part of the transaction of sale, & as the question whether this condition was satisfied was a question of fact, the judge's decision that there was a valid memorandum must be affirmed.—CHANNEY v. - 76a. —Entry of purchaser's name—Auctioneer's name printed on catalogue.]—Pltf. bought for £60 at an auction one of the lots, which was the property of deft., who was the auctioneer. The lot was included in the printed catalogue, the whole of which was pasted into the auctioneer's book, & after the lot in question was knocked down to pltf. deft. wrote against its description in the book the price & pltf.'s trade name. Delt.'s name was nowhere written by him in the book, but his printed name appeared on the front page of the catalogue pasted in the book. Delt. refused to hand over the goods on the ground that the lot in question had been the subject of a "knock-out" to which pltf. had been a party. In an action for breach of contract delt. pleaded that there was no memorandum signed by him within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 4 (1):—Held: (1) the existence of a "knock-out" did not afford any defence to the action; (2) delt.'s printed name, having been authenticated by his writing down the price & the purchaser's name, was a sufficient signature, & there was a sufficient note or memorandum of the contract, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—*COHEN v. Part IV.—Conduct of the Sale.

- 81a. —[In a sale of certain property by auction, deft. was declared to be the highest bidder, & he subsequently signed a written contract stating that he was in fact the purchaser of the property. The sale was subject to certain special conditions, clause 1 of which stated that the property was also sold subject to the National Conditions of Sale, & by clause 2 it was stipulated that in the event of the property remaining unsold or being bought in by the vendors, the vendors should be entitled to withdraw another lot from the sale. Clause 1 of the National Conditions of Sale provided that subject (inter alia) to the vendors bidding up to a reserve price, the highest bidder should be the purchaser. In an action by pltf. for specific performance of the agreement by deft. to purchase the property, deft. pleaded (a) that he had agreed to bid at the sale merely as a puffer or dummy bidder on behalf of the vendors, & (b) that the vendors had employed other puffers to bid on their behalf & that this employment was contrary to Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 6, & also to the conditions of sale. Delt. at the trial contended that the sale was in fact one without reserve & therefore the vendors were precluded from bidding either by themselves or an agent by reason of the provisions of sect. 5 of the Act:—Held: (1) deft. in bidding for the property was bidding for himself & not as a dummy bidder for pltf.; (2) the sale was subject to a reserve price; & (3) there was no contravention of Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48),

s. 6; (4) Sale of Land by Auction Act, 1867 (c. 48), s. 5, does not require that the words "with reserve" or "without reserve" & no others should be used in the particulars or conditions of sale. The requirements of the section are satisfied so long as it is made plain, in whatever words may be chosen, that the sale is subject to a reserve.—*HILLS & GRANT, LTD. v. 155a. ———.]—A purchaser alleged by his answer to a suit for specific performance, that he acted as a puffer in bidding for one lot, & also as puffer in bidding for another lot, which was knocked down to him; & that he therefore purchased the lot, & signed the agreement for the purchase, as the agent of the vendor; but the statement in his depositions of the circumstances attending the signature was somewhat different from that in his answer, & he had signed an order on his attorney for payment of the deposit money:—Held: there was not sufficient evidence of agency, & deft. was held to have purchased on his own account.

Taking into consideration the signature by deft. of the memorandum of agreement, the contradiction between his answer & his examination, & his having given an order for the deposit in his own name, & on his own agent, it is impossible to contend that he purchased as the agent of pltf. (TURNER, V.-C.).—BENNETT v. SMITH (1852), 20 L. T. O. S. 28; 16 Jur. 421.

Part V.—Deposit.

171a. Failure to require deposit—Whether breach of contract with vendor.—Pltfs. entrusted to defts., who were auctioneers, a suit of armour for sale by auction. One of the conditions of sale was that the buyer should pay down 10s. in the £ or more if required in part payment of the purchase-money, in default of which the lot might be put up again & resold. By another condition, on the failure of a buyer to comply with any of the conditions, the money deposited in part payment was to be forfeited. One B., who had previously bought for an American millionaire, bid at the auction & the armour was knocked down to him. The auctioneers did not ask B. for a deposit, as they assumed that he was acting for the millionaire for whom he had acted before. The millionaire afterwards repudiated B.'s authority, & B., when asked to take the armour, could not pay for it. Consequently the sale was not carried out. In an action by the sellers against the auctioneers for breach of contract to procure the buyer to pay the deposit:—Held: there was no negligence or breach of duty on the part of the auctioneers in exercising their judgment, in the circumstances, by not enforcing the conditions of sale as to a deposit, & since on the evidence the armour would not have been sold if it had been put up again, there were no damages, & the action failed.—CYRIL ANRADE, LTD. v. SOTHEBY & Co. (1931); 47 T. L. R. 244; 75 Sol. Jo. 120.

the sixth, it was stipulated that the leases or copies thereof might be examined at the office of the vendors' solicitors before the sale & that the purchaser, whether or not he inspected the same, should be deemed to have bought with notice of the contents thereof. Deft. only became aware of the sale on the day when it was held & having on that day been supplied by the auctioneers with the particulars & special conditions, but not with the National Conditions, & relying upon the truth of the description in the particulars, he bid at the sale and was declared to be the highest bidder thereat. He then signed the usual form of memorandum to the effect above stated & paid a deposit to the auctioneers. In the course of investigating the title it came to deft.'s knowledge for the first time that the leases under which the properties were held were subject to covenants which prohibited any other trade or business than that of a ladies' outfitter, fancy draper & manufacturer of ladies' clothing from being carried on upon the properties. In consequence of the existence of those restrictive covenants & the failure of pltf. to procure their removal or the licence of the lessors to use the properties for the purposes of any business, deft. refused to complete the purchase. In an action by the vendors for specific performance in which deft. counter-claimed rescission of the contract & to recover his deposit:—Held: (1) a shop which could be used for one purpose only was not fairly described as "valuable business premises"; & (2) such a misleading representation by pltf. in their particulars of sale disentitled them, notwithstanding the sixth condition, to the assistance of the ct. to compel deft., who purchased in reliance upon the truth of such representation, to Non-delivery—Goods included in a lot by mistake.]—In the catalogue of a sale by auction a lot marked 108 to 109* was included, being various bundles of paper. Item 109* was a bundle which the auctioneer did not intend to be in the catalogue, & he purposed to sell it separately. It was, however, knocked down to ptf., & he paid for it, but the auctioneer refused to deliver it to him. The catalogue announced the sale as being "By order of J. S. & others." The buyer brought an action for damages against the auctioneer :—Held : the various owners of the lots not being disclosed as the principals, & there being no disclaimer by the auctioneer of personal liability, the auctioneer was personally liable for non-delivery ; & the fact that the buyer accidentally learned of the ownership of lot 109* was not material.—PAGE v. SULLY (1918), 63 Sol. Jo. 55, D. C.

192a. — Loss of luggage left outside cloak-room.]—A condition in a railway cloak-room ticket purporting to exempt the railway co. from responsibility for articles above a specified value deposited in the cloak-room except on certain terms, & assented to by the person taking the ticket, is not prevented from being part of the contract & from protecting the co. merely because it is unreasonable, provided that it be not so extravagant as to imply, & there is no other evidence to show, that that person's assent to it has been obtained by fraud, or so irrelevant as to be foreign to the contract.

Pltf. took his bicycle to the cloak-room at a station of deft. co. for the purpose of depositing it there, paid to the official the charge demanded, & received a ticket purporting to be a cloak-room ticket upon the face of which was legibly printed the following condition: "The co. will not be in any way responsible in respect of any article deposited the value whereof exceeds £5, unless at the time of deposit the true value & nature of the article shall have been declared, & 1d. per £1 sterling of the declared value be paid for each day or part of a day in addition to the ordinary cloak-room charges." The value of the bicycle exceeded £5, but pltf. made no declaration of value or additional payment. The bicycle was standing at the open door of the cloak-room, but the official told pltf. to leave it there as he would put it away. When pltf. returned to claim the bicycle it could not be found. In an action by pltf. against defts. for the value of the bicycle defts. relied upon the above condition. It was found in effect that pltf. knew that there was printing on the ticket, that he believed it contained a condition, & that defts. had done sufficient to give pltf. notice of the condition; & it "for the contents of any piece or package is limited to the sum of $50, unless the value thereof is made known at the time of storage & receipted for in the schedule; an additional charge will be made for higher valuation." The goods, which were in several packages, were stored without a declaration of value & without any additional charge for a higher valuation. Through the negligence of defts.' servants, the goods were included in a shipment of other goods & sent to England. Some of pltf.'s goods were lost, & others damaged:—Held: the amount which pltf. was entitled to recover was limited by the clause of the warehouse contract.—MAUNSELL v. The first condition on the back was, "The co. will use every endeavour in taking care of all goods consigned to its charge, but will not be held responsible for loss or damage to goods stored through maintaining too high or too low a temperature in the stores, failure of machinery, buildings or plant fire, or any other cause whatsoever other than theft":—Held: the contract meant that defenders promised to do their utmost to take care of the hops, but that, if their efforts were unsuccessful for any cause other than theft, they were not to be liable in damages.—BALLINGALL & SON v. DUNDRELL ICE & COLD STORAGE CO. [1924] S. C. 338.—SCOT.

st. No liability for damage by accidental fire.—In an action against the operators of a terminal dock warehouse for damages caused by fire to goods received therein for shipment:—Held: in respect to the origin of the fire, the maxim res ipsa loquitur did not apply, & as no evidence of negligence had been adduced & no facts proved warranting an inference of negligence and the cause of the fire was incapable of being traced, the fire was one which had "accidentally" begun within sect. 86 of 14 Geo. III, 1774, c. 78 (Imp.) & defts. were not liable in respect of the commencement of the fire.—DES BRISAY v. CANADIAN GOVERNMENT MERCHANT MARINE, LTD., [1978] 3 W. W. R. 209; 4 D. L. R. 798; 53 B. C. was not found & there was no evidence to show that pltf.'s assent to the condition had been obtained by fraud. It was further found that owing to the negligence of the official in leaving the bicycle at the door of the cloak-room it had been stolen:—Held: (1) assuming that the condition was unreasonable which, semble, it was not, defts. were not, merely on that ground, prevented from relying upon it, inasmuch as it was not so extravagant as to imply that pltf.'s assent to it had been obtained by fraud, or so irrelevant as to be foreign to the contract; (2) defts. were protected by the condition, although the bicycle had not been deposited within the cloak-room; (3) on the above facts & findings judgment should be entered for defts.—*GIBAUD v. Pltf's. took out a policy covering, as they thought, all risks. The crane, when proceeding to lift a load, broke away from its bedplate & fell over & was damaged. It was then found that the accident was not covered by the policy, & defts. refused to pay for the damage. In an action for breach of contract:—Held: though defts. had failed to discharge the onus which was upon them, of proving that what happened was not the result of negligence by their servants, yet, as the agreement in regard to insurance was intended to be an arrangement for the benefit of both parties, & as the accident came within the description "all risks" & defts. had stipulated that they were not to bear those risks, the action failed.—BRICE & SONS v. A letter from defts., which contained an estimate, stated that the estimate was subject to conditions printed thereon. One of the conditions provided that: "In lieu of any warranty or condition implied by law, we guarantee that the materials . . . are of the best quality," & that defts. would replace any part broken or unduly worn within 12 months. After further negotiations defts. sent to pltf. a hire-purchase agreement expressed in a covering letter to be drawn up in accordance with the terms stated in the letter above mentioned. The hire-purchase agreement provided that: "This agreement embodies the entire agreement as to the hiring of the machinery." There was in the agreement no exclusion of any warranty or condition. The hire-purchase agreement was duly entered into. The machine proved unsatisfactory & pltfs. brought an action for breach of warranty. The judge held that the correspondence formed no part of the contract between the parties & he gave judgment for pltfs.:—Held: (1) upon the evidence the correspondence formed part of the contract between the parties; (2) defts.' liability for warranty & condition was excluded by the correspondence & pltfs. could not succeed in their action; (3) since the hire-purchase agreement was an irrevocable agreement to sell on the part of the owner, it was a contract for the sale of goods within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 1, & the statutory warranties & conditions would be implied.—*FELSTON TILE CO., LTD. v. - 247a. What amounts to hire purchase agreement.]—The purchaser of a motor car entered into an agreement with the vendors, motor traders, under which she signed a promissory note covering 24 monthly instalments payable under the agreement. That promissory note, which was stated in the agreement to be given & received not as payment of the monthly instalments but as collateral security for the due payment thereof, was made payable to the vendors, indorsed by them, &

so. What amounts to hire-purchase agreement.]—In order that an agreement may be classed as a hire-purchase agreement, the hirer's right to exercise his option to purchase need not be unfettered, unqualified, & absolute.—BROADLEY v. CHECKER CAB CO. (AUSTRALIA), LTD. (1931), 43 N. S. W. W. N. 44.—AUS.

241 vi. —.]—*Pltf. handed over nine motor lorries to deft., receiving from him Rs.5,000 upon the terms of a written agreement, the material parts of which were as follows:—"I have to-day agreed to sell to you on the hire-purchase system for Rs.25,000 my nine lorries . . . in consideration of payment as under. In case of failure to pay any of the instalments on due date, previous payments will be considered null & void, & the lorries are not considered as sold until the final payment has been received. The purchaser has no right to mortgage or dispose of any lorry until the full amount has been paid & [plt.] or his nominee has the right to seize the lorry wherever they may be. The consideration money is to be paid as under. As against the payment of Rs.5,000 I have to-day given to you delivery of all the nine lorries, & also a letter addressed to the Commissioner of Police to transfer the lorries to your name".—Held: the agreement was an agreement for sale.—COLL v. NANALAL MORARJI DARE (1924), 1 L. R. 49 Bom. 172.—IND.*

241 vii. —.]—Applt., which was a co. carrying on the business of selling new & secondhand motor cars, accepted an order from resp. for a motor car, which was written upon one of applt.'s order forms, the order describing the same but not stating in the description

whether it was to be a new or a second-hand car. In the order resp. agreed to pay a deposit & the balance of the purchase money by instalments & to execute applt.'s usual form of hire-purchase agreement. On the order form it was stated that all new cars were sold subject to a guarantee which was set out, which did not include a guarantee that the car was new; & that no guarantee was given with second-hand cars. Resp. also signed applt.'s usual form of hire-purchase agreement, by which the co. agreed to let & the hirer to take the car described therein, the description being similar to that in the order form, & repeated the provisions as to guarantee above referred to; & this agreement excluded any implied "warranty undertaking or agreement other than is herein set forth." The car delivered by applt. to resp. was not new.—Held: the contract between the parties was constituted by the order & the hire-purchase agreement; & that, when read together, they constituted an agreement for the sale, & not merely for the hire, of the car.—MARCUS CLARK (AUSTRALIA), LTD. v. BROWN (1933), 40 O. L. R. 540; [1933] V. L. R. 393; [1933] Argus L. R. 189.—AUS.

241 viii. —.]—A hire-purchase agreement relating to a motor truck provided for payment in nine monthly instalments. The hirer could become the owner of the truck on payment in full of the instalments & a rupee extra. On failure on part of the hirer to pay any instalment as it became due, the owner was entitled to seize the truck & credit its value as against the amount due but subject to a condition that the owner in no case would credit the hirer with more than the amount still due on the contract.—Held: the agreement though in form is one of hire, its object is to provide for a contract of sale in which security to the seller is provided for due payment of the purchase price.—MAUNG BA OH v. MOTOR HOUSE CO. (1929), 1 L. R. 7 Ran. 431.—IND.

241 ix. —.]—When it is clear from the agreement that the party taking the chattel, called the hirer or lessee, has to pay the full amount of consideration mentioned in the agreement, even though the payment is by instalments, & that amount is sufficient to cover the purchase price of the chattel, or when it is clear from the agreement that the hirer or lessee cannot at any time during the period mentioned in the agreement return the chattel to the other party called the owner, or lessor, & absolve himself from the obligation to make further payment, the agreement is really an agreement for sale & not for hire.

If the hirer is not bound to pay the full amount of the purchase price, or if he can terminate the hiring at any time by delivering the chattel to the other party, the agreement is in form & in substance an agreement for hire, & all that the hirer has obtained is an option to purchase.—BEHMI v. BOMBAY TRUST CORPN., LTD. (1929), 1 L. R. 54 Bom. 381.—IND.

247 i. — Sale of Goods Act, 1893—Option only.]—A hire-purchase agreement conferring an option to return the goods is not an agreement to sell subsequently discounted with a banking co. The purchaser of the motor car, contrary to the terms of the agreement & during its currency, sold the motor car to a third party, from whom it was bought by deft. On a claim by the original vendors claiming damages from the deft. for conversion of the motor car:—Held: the agreement between pltf.s. & the original purchaser was a hire-purchase agreement; that the promissory note was given by way of collateral security only, & not by way of payment, conditional or other; & pltf.s. were therefore entitled to recover possession of the motor car.—MODERN LIGHT CARS, LTD. v. SEALS, [1934] 1 K. B. 32; 102 L. J. K. B. 680; 149 L. T. 285; 49 T. L. R. 503; 77 Sol. Jo. 420.

252a. — Liability for minimum payment—Termination of agreement by hirer.—H. hired, under the terms & conditions of a hire-purchase agreement, a tandem bicycle for the term of fifty-three weeks at small weekly payments. By cl. 5 of the agreement H. was given an option of terminating the hiring at any time by returning the bicycle but remaining liable for the rent up to the date of the return & for all other sums payable under the agreement & damages (if any) for any breach of any term of the agreement. By cl. 7 it was agreed that in the event of the hiring being determined no allowance or credit, etc., should be allowed to H., but he was to pay by way of compensation for depreciation of the goods in addition to any other sums payable thereunder such sums as with the amount previously paid for rent should make up a sum equivalent to not less than one-half of the total amount including the option purchase price payable under the agreement. H. having returned the bicycle in pursuance of cl. 5 after having paid only one instalment, pltf.s. claimed a sum of £6 16s. 6d., being as to £1 4s. arrears of rent, & as to £5 12s. 6d., the further sum due under cl. 7. The county ct. judge having disallowed the latter amount as being a penalty, but having awarded pltf.s. the sum of £1 15s. as damages in lieu thereof, pltf.s. now appealed:—Held: no question as to pltf.s.' claim under cl. 7 being liquidated damages or in the nature of a penalty arose, & therefore the money for which the hirer had made himself liable had to be paid & the claim could not be impeached on any principle of law.—*ASSOCIATED DISTRIBUTORS, LTD. v. 252b. Delivery—Refusal of hirer to take delivery—Remedy of owner.—Under a hire-purchase agreement deft. agreed to hire from pltf.s. a cash register for ten months certain at an agreed monthly rental payable in advance with an option to purchase on payment of a fixed sum within one month after payment of all the rent for the agreed period of hiring. Deft. in breach of his contract refused to accept delivery of the register. Pltf.s. issued a default summons in the county ct. for rent accrued due up to the date of the summons:—Held: no actual debt had been incurred & the action was not maintainable, pltf.s.' remedy being in damages only.—*NATIONAL CASH REGISTER CO. v. 256a. — After unsatisfied judgment for instalments.—Deft. had entered into a hire-purchase agreement with pltf.s. for the acquisition of a cold-room. Several instalments being in arrear, pltf.s. brought an action, & obtained judgment for the amount of the instalments due. As the judgment remained unsatisfied, pltf.s. retook possession of most of the cold-room, but were prevented from retaking all of it. They therefore brought the present action to recover the rest of the goods. It was contended by deft. that the result of the judgment in the first action, being an action to recover the value of the chattel, had the effect of terminating the contract & transferring the ownership of the chattel to deft.:—Held: the first action was merely one for instalments due, & did not operate to transfer the ownership in the chattel. As there was still a breach of contract, pltf.s. were entitled to recover possession.—SOUTH BEDFORDSHIRE ELECTRICAL FINANCE, LTD. v. BRYANT, [1938] 3 All E. R. 580; 82 Sol. Jo. 681, C. A.

258a. — Recovery of unpaid instalments.—On a claim by the owner of furniture for unpaid instalments:—Held: as the agreement with the hirer was for the sale of the furniture, the property not to pass to him until all the instalments had been paid, & the owner had resumed possession of it & dealt with it in such a way as to put it out of his power to within Sale of Goods Act, 1895, s. 14. Such a contract is one of bailment of a chattel, & the warranty of fitness is of the nature implied in that form of contract. Notwithstanding that the option to return a chattel cannot be exercised until after payment of the penultimate instalment of hire, a contract of hire-purchase so expressed is not an agreement to sell.—KLOSE v. DUNCAN & FRASER, LTD., [1938] S. A. S. R. 139.—AUS.

248 vi. — What is payment.—Under a hire-purchase agreement the hirers made an initial payment & gave to the owners bills of exchange for the total amount of the monthly payments as collateral security. These bills were subsequently discounted by the owners:—Held: no conditional payment, & the property in the goods remained in the owners.—Re RANKIN & SHILLADAY, [1927] N. 162.—IR.

st. Subject-matter—Radio sets.—“Electric equipment, apparatus, & appliances required in connection with the use of electric energy” which by Order in Council have been added to the chattels or class of chattels that under the Chattels Transfer Act, 1908, may be disposed of by way of customary hire-purchase agreements, has reference to outfits, devices and things necessary to bring or convey electric energy to the point where it can be used, & does not include equipment, etc., requiring electric energy in connection with their use. From this it follows that radio receiving sets cannot be the subject of customary hire-purchase agreements.—BLANCHARD v. RANDALL & KING, LTD. (1937), 32 M. O. R. 95.—AUS.

car & entitled to give deft. an option to purchase it; that condition was broken, & the judgment on the claim was therefore right. As to the counterclaim the deposit was expressly stated to be "in consideration of the option of purchase," which plffs. were never in a position to give. The consideration had therefore wholly failed, & the defendant had also rightly succeeded on the counterclaim.

Qu.: whether, if the defective title of plffs. had not been discovered until a number of instalments of rent had been paid & deft. had had the use of the motor car for a substantial part of the contemplated period, he could have recovered the whole of the instalments paid without deduction for use & occupation.

Per GODDARD, J. Apart from the express condition in this agreement, it is an implied condition (& not merely a warranty) of any hire-purchase agreement, that the persons letting the chattel are the owners of it at the date when the agreement is entered into, & not merely that they will become the owners before the option to purchase is exercised. Moreover, the doctrine that a bailee is estopped from denying his bailor's title unless evicted by title paramount does not apply to hire-purchase, where the bailment of hire is coupled with an element of sale.—KARFLEX, LTD. v. POOLE, [1933] 2 K. B. 251; 102 L. J. K. B. 475; 149 L. T. 140; 49 T. L. R. 418, D. C.

268b. ———.]—Under a hire-purchase agreement dated Feb. 7, 1936, plffs. agreed to let a motor-lorry to deft. on usual hire-purchase terms. The lorry was bought & paid for by plffs. on Feb. 11, 1936, & was delivered to deft. on Mar. 8. On Sept. 16, 1936, plffs. retook possession of the lorry, deft. having got into arrears with his instalments, & sued deft. for the balance of depreciation money & instalments due. Deft. sought to repudiate the contract on the ground that plffs. had broken the condition, express or implied, that they were the owners of the lorry, & had a good title to sell or hire it, at the date of the signing of the agreement:—Held: the material date at which the implied condition as to title arose was not the date of the signing of the agreement but the date of the delivery of the lorry to the would-be hire purchaser, & by the material date plffs. were the owners of the lorry.—*MERCANTILE UNION GUARANTEE CORPN., LTD. v. 268c. Purchaser absconding with goods—Effect on financing agreement.—Plffs. were financing a hire-purchase agreement of defts., who were the makers of ranges. The hire-purchase agreement was entered into between plffs. & the purchaser, & concerned the hire purchase of two ranges. Defts. agreed that, should plffs. for any reason whatsoever have to resume possession of the ranges, they would, upon being called upon to do so, collect them, & further agreed to purchase them at a price not exceeding the amount then outstanding under the hire-purchase agreement. The purchaser, after paying one instalment, absconded & was adjudicated bkpt. He took one of the ranges with him, & it was contended that defts. were under an obligation to purchase this missing range, & to pay the purchase price thereof, although it could not be found:—Held: the agreement by defts. to purchase the range involved the capacity of plffs. to give delivery of it, & as plffs. could not state where the missing range was, defts. were under no obligation to pay the amount agreed as the purchase price thereof.—*WATLING TRUST, LTD. v. 269ia. ———.]—Held: a firm of upholsterers who had contracted to remove, beat, & relay a carpet, were not liable for its accidental destruction while in the premises of a firm of carpet-beaters with whom they had sub-contracted to beat it, there being no delectus personæ in such a contract as to bar them from employing a sub-contractor, & no negligence in the selection of the sub-contractor.—*STEVENSON & SONS v. Pltf. did not call for his car as soon as it was repaired & deft. put it in storage, but failed to remove the water from the radiator with the consequence that it froze & damaged the car:—Held: the above special clause in the work order exonerated deft. from liability whether pltf. had read it or not.—WALDEN v. HANLEY GARAGE, LTD., [1928] 1 D. L. R. 888; [1928] 1 W. W. R. 371; 39 B. C. R. 413.—CAN.

269v. ———.]—Pltf. left his motor car at the garage of deft., a garage proprietor & motor mechanic, & instructed him to adjust the headlights of the car. In the garage was exhibited a notice, seen by pltf., "Cars garaged & driven at owner's risk—Every care but no responsibility." Deft. drove the car on the road to test the headlights, when a collision caused by deft.'s negligence damaged the car:—Held: the notice applied to the driving of the car during which the damage occurred, but did not amount to an unequivocal & unambiguous notification to pltf. that the car was being accepted by deft. on terms that deft. was not to be liable for the consequences of his own negligence in driving, & therefore deft. was responsible.—*MORAN v. The conduct of the servant is then the conduct of the master, & the master is liable to the bailor.

Pltf., a customer of deft., left his motor car at deft.'s service station to be supplied with gas & oil & washed. There were no facilities at the station for washing the car, & deft.'s servant, as was his duty, took out the car to drive it to a garage to be washed. On the way to the garage the servant changed his mind & drove the car in another direction "upon a frolic of his own." In doing so he ran the car into a telephone pole & damaged the car:—Held: deft. as master was liable in damages for the wrongful act of his servant.—VAN GREL v. WARRINGTON, [1929] 1 D. L. 274a. Materials supplied by bailee—Implied warranty of fitness for purpose.]—Pltfs. entrusted a motor-car for repair to defts., who were garage proprietors & repairers of motor-cars. In the course of repairing the car defts. obtained from the makers of the car, & fitted, six new connecting rods. One of these rods had a latent defect, which defts. could not by reasonable care or skill have discovered, & it broke, causing extensive damage to the engine. Pltfs. brought an action in the county ct. claiming damages from defts., but the county ct. judge gave judgment for defts. on the ground that he was not prepared to hold, in the absence of direct authority, that in a contract for work done & materials supplied there was an absolute warranty that the materials supplied were fit for the purpose. Pltfs. appealed:—Held: the warranty implied in a contract for work done & materials supplied as to the fitness of the materials was not less than that implied in a contract for sale of goods—namely, an absolute warranty of fitness. But that warranty might be excluded if it appeared that the person giving the order did so in such a form as to show that he did not rely on the contractor's skill & judgment. The case must therefore go back to the county ct. judge for him to determine on the evidence whether the implied warranty was in fact excluded or not.—MYERS (G. H.) & Co. v. The owners of the R. contended that interest was only payable from the date when the Admty. paid the value of the trawler to her owners.—Held: under the Admty. rule a bailee in possession was entitled to recover from a wrongdoer a complete equivalent of the chattel deteriorated or lost, namely, its value at the time of the deterioration or loss, with interest from that date; but inasmuch as there was an agreement between the parties that defts. should pay what the Admty. had to pay to the owners of the trawler, interest on the payment only ran from the date of payment.—THE ROSALIND (1920), 90 L. sg. Qualification—Bank of Canada.

—Bank of Canada Act, 1934 (Dom.), provides, by sect. 10 (2), that the permanent directors of the bank shall be selected from diversified occupations. By sect. 43, the Governor in Council is directed to make bye-laws with respect to, inter alia, "the nomination of directors . . . & what constitutes such nomination"; & a bye-law made pursuant thereto provided that the persons to be declared elected should be (a) the two persons receiving the two greatest number of votes
among the candidates whose "chief occupation is in primary industry,"
(b) the two persons receiving the two greatest number of votes among the candidates whose "chief occupation is in commerce or manufacturing," (c) the three persons receiving the greatest & two next greatest number of votes
among the candidates whose "chief occupation is other than in primary industry, commerce or manufacturing."
Def. W., who was nominated for election as a director, was described on the list of nominees as an "accountant," but on the list of shareholders his description was "merchant." Pltf., a shareholder, who alleged that W. was in fact a merchant & not an accountant, & therefore, that he could be nominated under category (b) only, & who sued for a declaration that he was ineligible under (c), obtained a mandatory order requiring W. to withdraw his acceptance of his nomination:—
Held: the question of W.'s proper category was one of fact which could be tried properly only at the trial of the action & since the evidence supporting the order did not establish that pltf. was clearly right he could not be said to be entitled to an injunction, & on "the balance of convenience" it should be dissolved.—BAIN v. BANK OF purposes. Pltf. sought to recover the 282a. Account opened in assumed name—Payment in of cheque obtained by duress—Payment out on forged cheques—Action by party whose name assumed.]—Pltf. brought an action against deft. bank for £125,000, money had & received by defts. to his use. Pltf.'s case was that an account was opened in his name at a branch of deft. bank by some one other than himself, that a cheque for £150,000 payable to his order was paid into the account, & that on the following day a forged cheque, purporting to be drawn by pltf., for £130,000 was cashed by one H., the balance being afterwards withdrawn by H., by means of other forged cheques. Defts. alleged that the cheque for £150,000 was obtained by a blackmailing conspiracy from one A., who was discovered by one N. with pltf.'s wife in compromising circumstances, & that the proceeds were shared between the conspirators, whom defts. alleged to include, among others, pltf., pltf.'s wife, & H. & N. Pltf. & his wife denied that they took part in any conspiracy, & pltf. said that, when he heard of the relations between his wife & A., he instructed H., who represented himself to be a solr., to take divorce proceedings, & that, when the sum of £25,000 was handed to him by H., he, pltf., passed the amount on to his wife & said that he would have nothing more to do with her, & that he learned later that A. had paid £150,000. It was to recover the difference between these two amounts that the action was brought. The jury found that there was a conspiracy to get money from A. by catching him with pltf.'s wife, but that pltf. & his wife were not parties to the conspiracy, that A. was induced to part with the money through fear, & that his parting with it was not free & voluntary:—Held: pltf. never got the property in the cheque for £150,000 & could not sue in conversion, & he had no right to sue in contract because the dealings with deft. bank were not on his behalf, & therefore he had no title to the cheque, & the action failed.—*ROBINSON v. 2931. Drawing cheque—Customer's duty to bank.—A customer of a bank owes a duty to the bank in drawing cheques to take reasonable & ordinary precautions against the amount of the cheque being raised by forgery, & if as the natural & probable result of the neglect of those precautions the amount is so increased the customer must bear the loss as between himself & the bank. The duty of a customer to draw up his cheque without negligence is the same with respect to a cheque on a savings account as in the case of a cheque on a current account.—*WILL v. ss. Forwarding to another branch documents for collection—Negligence.—Where a branch office of a bank, in the usual course of banking business for reward, sends to another office of the bank for collection on behalf of a customer negotiable documents of debts, such as participation certificates issued by the Canadian Wheat Board, which, having been indorsed by the producer, are, in effect, made payable to bearer on surrender thereof, & whose terms deny responsibility in the Wheat Board with respect to indorsements, & failing to receive a return letter of acknowledgment, the sending office makes no inquiry of the receiving office as to the safety of the documents until after the lapse of six weeks, it is guilty of negligence. The bank is still more guilty of negligence, when, having made the belated inquiry & learned that the documents have not been received at the other office it fails to take immediate steps in the quickest manner available to warn the debtor liable under the documents of the loss thereof, & thus stop payment to any unauthorised person.—*NELSON v. Money received from a client, to be applied in payment of rent & costs payable by the client to a third party, was paid into that account, & a cheque was duly drawn by pltf. on that account, & sent to the solr. acting for the third party. Before that cheque was presented a garnishee order nisi was served on the bank in respect of debts owing or accruing due from the bank to pltf. When the cheque was presented the bank marked it "Refer to drawer," & returned it unpaid:—Held: (1) money standing to the credit of the client account was a debt owing from the bank to pltf., in whose name the account was opened, & the garnishee order nisi bound that debt in the hands of the bank. The bank was, therefore, justified in returning the cheque unpaid; (2) in the circumstances, the words "Refer to drawer" marked on the cheque were not libellous.—*PLUNKETT v. - 321c. — Joint account—Debt of one party.—A husband & wife opened a joint account with the B. bank in Feb. 1935, upon the terms that the signature of either would be a sufficient discharge for the repayment of any moneys deposited with the bank. The wife had received a legacy of £1,000 in 1930 which she handed to her husband to be used in his business. In Jan. 1936, H., who had supplied building material to the husband for use in his business, recovered judgment against him. On Jan. 15, 1938, a garnishee summons was served upon the B. bank attaching so much of the debts due from the bank to the judgment debtor as would satisfy the debt of £15 7s. due to H. under the judgment. On Jan. 15, 1938, the B. bank had no account in their books in the name of the husband, but they had the joint account standing in the names of the husband & the wife. That account was on that date in credit in the sum of £114. The bank, considering that the garnishee summons did not attach any part of their debt on the joint account, honoured cheques drawn on the joint account with the result that by Feb. 22 the joint account was overdrawn and there was no balance left in that account. On the hearing of the garnishee summons on Feb. 22 the county ct. judge held that the money in the joint account was the sole property of the husband, & that it was a debt due by the bank to the husband. He accordingly gave judgment for pltf. against the garnishees. On appeal:—Held: by the Ct. of Appeal, there was no evidence upon which the county ct. judge could find that the money in the joint account belonged solely to the husband; further, by SLESSER & MACKINNON, L.JJ. (GREER, L.J. dissenting), inasmuch as the debt which the bank owed was not a debt due to the husband alone but to him jointly with his wife, it could not be attached to answer the judgment against the husband.—*HIRSCHORN v. At the date of the order a customer of the bank had moneys standing to his credit in its books. In the course of the liquidation the liquidator gave notice of his intention to pay a dividend of 5s. in the £:—Held: even assuming that the notice given by the liquidator amounted to the declaration of a dividend, the declaration did not create a "debt owing or accruing" to the customer by or from the banking co. so as to be attachable by a judgment creditor of the customer in garnishee proceedings, under the Justices Act, 1933, s. 126, against the banking co.—*NATIONAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA, LTD. v. In 1926 G. changed his place of residence & thereafter collected his pension by post through deft. bank by means of receipt forms sent direct to him by plffs. The receipt form included a certificate that the pensioner was still alive. G. died in 1929 & from then up to 1935, when his widow died, the pension was collected by means of forged receipt forms, the certificates being duly filled up by an alleged medical practitioner. The certificate might be signed by the bank or by a person of certain named categories including medical practitioners. Plffs., the Crown Agents for the Colonies, then sued to recover from deft. bank the amount so paid since 1929:—Held: (1) the certificate not being signed by the bank, it did not amount to a warranty by the bank that G. was still alive, & the bank was, in the circumstances, entitled to rely upon the certificate as being true; (2) the money could not be recovered as money paid under a mistake of fact, as the bank had paid it away to a person whom they believed to be their principal, & the fact that they were mistaken in that belief was irrelevant.—*GOWERS v. Annotation:—Reid. Imperial Bank of Canada v. Begley, [1936] 2 All E. R. 367.

387a. — — — — —.]—For some years before 1919 one U., a merchant, had a banking account at defts.' bank. In that year he converted himself into a limited co., all the shares being allotted to himself except one, which was held by his wife. A debenture in the form of a floating charge over the assets of the co. was issued to a creditor of U. as a security for his debt. The arts. of assocn. of the co. incorporated Table A. by par. 71 of which the business of the co. is to be managed by the directors. By the arts. U. was appointed sole director. After the formation of the co. U. kept on his private banking account with defts. as before, they having notice that his business had been transferred to the co. The co. had a separate account, which was kept at another bank, but defts. had no knowledge of that fact. U., as sole director, became possessed of a number of cheques, some crossed & others uncrossed, drawn in favour of the co. He indorsed them "A.L.U., Ltd.—A.L.U. sole director," & paid them into his own account with defts. instead of paying them in to the co.'s account with the other bank. Defts., without inquiring whether the co. had a separate banking account, collected the cheques & credited U. with the proceeds, which he misappropriated. When doing so they treated him as being identical with the co., as he owned all the shares, & overlooked the materiality of the cheques being drawn in the co.'s favour & not in his. In an action brought by the co. on behalf of the debenture-holder for conversion of the cheques:—Held: (1) defts. were precluded from setting up that U., when paying the cheques in to his own account, was acting within the scope of his apparent authority as agent of the co., upon two grounds: first, that the act of an agent paying his principal's cheques into his own account was so unusual as to put them on inquiry, that they ought to have inquired whether the co. had a separate banking account, & if it had, why the cheques were not paid in to that account, & that their failure to make that inquiry amounted to negligence; & secondly, that U. when paying in the cheques did not purport to act as the co.'s agent, but as being himself the co., & that defts. so treated him; (2) with respect to the cheques which were crossed the omission to inquire about the co.'s banking account disentitled defts. as collecting bankers to the protection afforded by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82.

A customer of a bank paid into his account some cheques to which he had no title. Immediately on his so paying them in the bank credited him with the amounts of the cheques in their ledger, but there was no agreement between the bank & the customer that he should be allowed to draw against the cheques before they were cleared, nor did he in fact draw against them until after the bank had received the proceeds:—Held: (3) apart from any question whether the bank had notice of any defect in the customer's title, they were not holders in due course, there being no evidence that they took the cheques for value. The mere fact that bankers credit a customer with the amounts of cheques before they are cleared does not make them holders for value; in order to entitle them to that character there must have been an agreement, express or implied, that the customer should be allowed to draw against the cheques before clearance, & that agreement must have been acted upon.—*UNDERWOOD (A. application, some breach of trust intended by the exor., & there must in the second place be proof that the bankers are privy to the intent to make their misapplication of the trust funds. He did not inform his wife of the joint account, & always drew cheques on the account himself. He died in Nov. 1919. The wife never drew any cheque on the account until shortly before his death, when he was in failing health & unable to attend to business. The bank manager then informed her of the joint account, & advised her to draw a cheque, which she did. The husband had also from time to time made deposits in the joint names of himself & his wife, & in Aug. 1919, consolidated them into one deposit in the joint names. The wife never knew of this deposit until after her husband's death. There was then found among his papers an envelope indorsed with the wife's initials & containing the deposit receipt & a document in which he said: "I would like this paying away at once if possible as under," with a list of names with amounts against them:—Held: the money standing to the credit of both the current account & the deposit account belonged to the wife as survivor, & the document did not raise any presumption that the husband regarded the deposit as his own property.—Re HARRISON, DAY v. HARRISON (1920), 90 L. J. Ch. 186.

- 403a. Loss of right to repayment—Laches.]—In May, 1866, one F. deposited £6,000 with a Birmingham branch of deft. bank, upon the terms that he could withdraw the money at any time on giving fourteen days' notice, & that interest should be paid on it at the rate of 6 per cent. for the first three months, & thereafter at the current bank rate for the time being. In Aug. 1866, the bank repaid £2,500 of the £6,000 with interest due to that date, & a note of the payment was indorsed on the deposit receipt. In Nov. 1866, a further indorsement was made showing that all interest then due had been paid, but after that date there was no record of any further payment by the bank of either principal or interest & no record of any demand by F. for payment. F. died in 1893. In 1927 a relative of F. discovered the deposit receipt amongst some old papers, & sent it to the surviving exor. & trustee of F.'s will. He gave deft. bank formal notice to pay the £3,500, balance of the principal £6,000, together with interest, in fourteen days. The bank refused to pay, on the ground that it must be presumed that the deposit must have been repaid long ago. The exor. then brought this action to enforce payment, & the bank pleaded presumption of payment; & although they refused to plead Stat. Limitations, they claimed relief on the ground that F. & his representatives had been guilty of laches:—Held: although defts. could not produce evidence of repayment, the proper inference from all the circumstances was that that money must have been repaid, & the action therefore failed. Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879 (c. 11), s. 3, makes an entry in bankers' books prima facie evidence of an account.

Held: the bank was not liable for misappropriation by the agent on the ground of negligence or connivance in the breach of his instructions in permitting him to open & draw cheques upon another account which he opened in his own name entitled "Trust Account No. 2," & in which to the knowledge of the bank he deposited a part of the proceeds of said business.—CANADIAN CREDIT MEN'S TRUST ASSN., LTD. v. She was about to open it, when he took it from her hand & said he would keep it for her & locked it up in his despatch box. After testator's death there was found in his despatch box an envelope containing: (1) A deposit receipt for £500 deposited with his bank in 1914; (2) an order in writing signed by testator directing the bank to pay to G. the sum of £500 then on deposit; & (3) a letter addressed to G.: "You have been very kind to me & I desire to make some return by giving you the amount £500 now on deposit at the . . . bank as per receipt enclosed." The deposit receipt was not indorsed by testator & no notice was given to the bank of any assignment till after his death, the interest on the sum on deposit having been carried by the bank to his current account:—Held: there was a valid & complete gift to G. of the sum on deposit by way of assignment under Jud. By means of an elaborate fraud defts. were induced by an unauthorised person to print from the plates a large quantity of notes & to deliver the notes to him, & the result was that these notes were put into circulation. In consequence of the fraud pltfs. honoured a large number of the spurious notes, & on learning the facts they found it necessary to withdraw all the genuine notes of the same issue from circulation as they had, at that time, no means of distinguishing the genuine from the spurious notes. In an action for breach of contract, negligence, or conversion:—Held: it was an implied term of the contract that there was to be no use of the plates for any purpose not authorised by pltfs., & there was an absolute duty on defts. not to print or deliver notes of pltf. bank without the authority of the bank, & even if defts. were bound only to take reasonable care to avoid such acts, defts. had, on the facts, fallen short of the standard of care required by the special nature of the business, & pltfs. were entitled to recover.—*BANCO DE PORTUGAL v. 456b. — Measure of damages.—A firm of printers employed by the Bank of Portugal to print a series of bank notes known as Vasco da Gama 500 escudo notes delivered to the Bank 600,000 notes which were put into circulation in Portugal. Subsequently, in breach of their contract of employment, the printers delivered to one M., the head of a band of criminals, 580,000 notes of the same type, printed from the original plates or from plates made from the same die, in the belief that he had the authority of the bank. M. & his associates introduced these false notes into Portugal & put a large number of them into circulation. The bank on discovering that unauthorised notes were in circulation issued notices withdrawing the whole of this issue of Vasco da Gama notes & undertaking, within a limited time, to exchange all notes of this type presented to the bank for other notes. The bank had an exclusive license to issue bank notes as legal tender in Portugal, but the amount of the notes to be issued was controlled by law. At all material times the currency was inconvertible. In an action by the bank against the printers for breach of contract defts. maintained (a) that the loss suffered by the bank was due to their own voluntary action in paying the unauthorised notes; (b) that the loss to the bank was limited to the cost of printing & paper in regard to the new issue:—Held: (1) the loss arose naturally from the breach of contract; (2) the proper measure of damages was the exchange value expressed in sterling of the genuine currency given in exchange for the spurious notes together with the cost of printing the genuine notes withdrawn.—BANCO DE PORTUGAL v. WATERLOW & SONS, LTD., WATERLOW & SONS, LTD. v. BANCO DE PORTUGAL, [1932]

479a. Cheque credited before clearance—Whether bank holders for value—Bank stopping payment before final clearance.—(1) Where a customer pays a crossed cheque into his bank, the question whether the bank receive it as holders for value or as agents for collection is a pure question of fact. The fact that the cheque is immediately credited in the ledger does not necessarily make the bank holders for value. That inference may be rebutted by notices in the pass-book & paying-in slip or other evidence showing that the customer could not draw before clearance.

(2) If the bank receive the cheque as agents for collection & stop payment before it is finally cleared at the clearing house, they can only receive & hold the proceeds as collecting agents for their customer, & not on the ordinary bank relationship of debtor & creditor. Consequently, in a winding up following on the stoppage the liquidator must pay the full proceeds of a cheque cleared after the stoppage to the customer, although it was cleared shortly before the actual winding up.—Re FARROW'S BANK, LTD., [1923] 1 Ch. 41; 92 L. Pltfs. afterwards brought the present action against the B. bank for conversion of the proceeds of the cheque, their claim in that action thus being for tort :—Held : pltf. by bringing the first action for breaches of contract only, had elected to waive their right to bring the second action for tort, notwithstanding that the first action had not proceeded to judgment, & that debt. in the second action had not been made a debt. in the first action.—*UNITED AUSTRALIA, LTD. v. A series of cheques payable to one of the directors were fraudulently signed by the director jointly with the secretary-treasurer, & after indorsement were placed by resp. bank to the credit of an account which the director had with them. Resps. collected the cheques from applts.' bank in the usual course of business. In order that there should be to the credit of applts.' account sufficient to meet each of the cheques, the director in each case fraudulently drew a cheque upon one of various other accounts upon which he had authority to draw, & paid it into applts.' account. Applts. sued resps. to recover the aggregate amount of the cheques collected by them:—Held: the action failed, because (1) resps. had not knowledge, either by the form of the cheques collected or otherwise, that they were improperly drawn on applts.' account, & could not recover the money as having been held by their bankers in trust for them, & (2) applts. had suffered no loss, & the ct. could not investigate applts.' liability to persons not parties to the action in respect of the cheques placed to applts.' credit.—*CORPORATION AGENCIES v. - 545a. Transfer to own account by agent—In breach of power of attorney—Liability of bank.]—Resp., a widow, who had a deposit account with applt. bank, desired that A., a close friend of resp. & her husband, should attend to the investment of her money, & with the sole object of making arrangement for such investment at a higher rate of interest than the ordinary bank rate on deposits, she executed a power of attorney in A.'s favour on June 24, 1929, using a printed form in very wide terms supplied by applt. bank. At that time resp. had $13,081 credited to her account. A. also had had for a considerable time an account in the same branch of the bank which had generally showed a debit balance; & at the date of the execution of the power of attorney his debit balance exceeded $8,000. On June 29, 1929, A., purporting to act under the power of attorney, transferred from resp.'s account to his own account $3,500, which, together with a small sum of his own, was sufficient to discharge the whole of his debt to applt. bank. The assistant manager of the bank took from A. a promissory note payable to resp. on demand with interest at 7 per cent. per annum, but did not ask on her behalf for security, although applts. had had a mtge. as security for their debt, nor did they communicate in any way with resp. or her solr. In 1931 resp. took a promissory note from A. for the sum transferred & interest, & in 1932 having changed her solrs. she demanded payment from applt. bank of the amount of $8,500, & on applts.' refusal resp. commenced an action for the recovery of that sum:—Held: (1) the transfer of the money by A. to his own account made him a constructive trustee for resp. of the amount transferred; (2) the bank having concurred in the transfer for their own benefit became subject to a similar fiduciary obligation; (3) any delay or silence on resp.'s part had not prejudiced the bank & there was no defence of estoppel; (4) there was no question of ratification since A. had not in transferring the money acted or purported to act as agent of resp.; (5) the liability of A. & the bank was not joint, & resp. was at liberty to sue either or both subject only to the limitation that she could not recover more than the total sum due to her.—*IMPERIAL BANK OF CANADA v. authority to draw cheques & sign orders for payments on its behalf. The co. from time to time required drafts payable in New York to remit to creditors there. The course of business was that the accountant attended at the bank with a cheque, duly signed by two of the named persons, payable to the bankers' order for the sum for which the draft was required, but without any further document or written instructions; having filled up a requisition note giving particulars of the draft required, including the name of the payee, he was handed a draft in accordance with those particulars. In Jan. 1922, it was first discovered that on 41 out of 106 occasions upon which drafts had been so purchased since Nov. 1918, the accountant, having entered his own name in the requisition note, had obtained drafts payable to himself, & had misappropriated the proceeds, covering his fraud by false entries in the company's books. The resps. having paid the co. under a policy guaranteeing the fidelity of the accountant, sued the bankers (appls.) in respect of the loss after the date of the policy:—Held: the bankers had acted negligently in issuing the drafts without authority in accordance with the company's instructions, & were liable in damages in respect thereof; the frequent repetition of the same irregular procedure afforded no defence either by way of estoppel, ratification or otherwise.—*BANK OF MONTREAL v. 570a. Customer not trader—Measure of damages.—A bank wrongfully dishonoured a cheque of pltf., who was not a trader. Pltf. did not, in the statement of claim, plead any matters showing a loss of credit, but proved that, after the cheque was dishonoured, her landlords had asked her to pay her rent in cash, & not by cheque:—Held: (1) pltf., not being a trader, was entitled to only nominal damages in respect of the wrongful dishonour of a cheque by her bank; (2) in the circumstances, pltf. was not entitled to leave to amend the statement of claim.—*GIBBONS v. 548 l. Cheque drawn on one branch—Payment at another—Dishonour on presentation.—A bank, which pays a cheque at any branch except that at which the customer keeps his account, must be assumed to have paid it not on the credit of the customer but on the indorsement itself.

A. drew a cheque in favour of B. upon the Bank C., D. branch, & B. indorsed it for collection in favour of L., who received payment from the P. branch of the bank, which sent the cheque on to the D. branch. The latter dishonoured the cheque, whereon the P. branch gave notice of dishonour & instituted a suit against B. & L. for the recovery of the sum paid. The defence was (inter alia) that the cheque having been discharged by payment there was no power left in the P. branch to give notice of dishonour:—Held: the payment by the P. branch did not operate as a discharge of the cheque, the payment having been made not on the credit of A. but on the credit of B. & therefore, pltf. was entitled to recover the sum from defts.—*RAJA JOYTI PRASAD SINGH DES BAHADUR v. sk. Effect of confirmation by telephone.—The accountant of a bank called up defts.' office by telephone, an automatic telephone, which rang number required direct without the necessity of calling a "central" operator. A woman's voice answered & the accountant asking for the manager, a man's voice answered. The accountant then stated that it was the bank speaking & that the bank had a certain amount of money to pay over for the F. Co. "under protest," & the man at the other end of the wire said "All right":—Held: this constituted a notice to defts. that the money was available at the bank, & that it was not necessary the person spoken to should be identified.—*FIDELITY OIL & GAS CO. v. y i. — Dishonour of cheques payable to self.—A demand made personally by a customer upon his banker for payment is a two-party transaction. The refusal of payment cannot give rise to the implication of defamation of the customer to a third party, which necessarily arises when a trader's cheque, drawn or indorsed in favour of a third party, is presented by the holder & dishonoured by the banker. Judgment for pltf. for £250 set aside, & judgment entered for defts., defts. having admitted liability to pay pltf. nominal damages & having paid £10 into ct.—*KINLAN v. 589a. — Mistake in telegram—Duty of bank to make inquiry.—Pltf., who had an account with defts., on July 31, 1924, drew a cheque, No. 117,285, & post-dated it Aug. 2. On Aug. 1 he telegraphed to defts. to stop payment of cheque No. 117,283, mentioning the date, the payee, & the amount. These particulars were correct as to cheque No. 117,283, but the number of the cheque was wrong. Cheque No. 117,285 was presented on Aug. 6, & the bank officials paid it, supposing that it had been drawn in place of the one that had been stopped. If they had searched, they would have seen that a cheque numbered 117,283 had already been presented & honoured. In an action for negligence:—Held: the view of the bank officials, that the cheque presented, being subsequent to the date of the stop instructions, might be a duplicate cheque which they were bound to cash, was correct, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—*WESTMINSTER BANK, LTD. v. 600a. Presentment over counter—Duty of bank to pay.—Pltf., a partnership firm at Liverpool, sold goods to the P. Co. & drew upon the co. a bill for a large amount payable in three months in payment for the goods. The P. Co. accepted the bill payable at deflt. bank at Liverpool, where they kept their account. Shortly before the bill became payable the co., who were then overdrawn at deflt. bank, asked that bank to order payment of the bill & charge to the account of the co. Defts. were willing to act upon this advice, because they had an arrangement for a running overdraft with the co., & the bill was within the limits of that overdraft. When the bill became due it was brought by W., a servant of pltf., to a partner of pltf. firm, who, at W.'s request, indorsed the bill in blank. W., instead of taking the bill to pltf.'s bank for the purpose of collection through the clearing house, presented the bill for payment over the counter to deflt. bank & received the money, which he then fraudulently converted & stole. *Pltf.*s sued defts. to recover the amount of the bill on the grounds of negligence, money had & received, & conversion of the bill. Evidence was given at the trial that there is an almost universal custom at Liverpool that trade bills should be presented through the clearing house for payment to the bank at which they were accepted payable, but evidence was also given that presentation of such bills over the counter, though most unusual, was not irregular:—Held: deflt. bank were not liable to *pltf.*s. (1) on the ground of negligence, because no privity of contract existed between defts. & *pltf.*s, & defts. owed no duty to *pltf.*s; (2) on the ground of money had & received, because the drawing of the bill did not amount to an assignment in favour of the payee of funds of the drawee, as the acceptors had no funds to meet the bill, which was paid out of a loan by defts., & the advice to pay the bill sent by the acceptors to defts. gave no rights to *pltf.*s, as against defts.; (3) defts. were not liable to *pltf.*s for the conversion of the bill, because the bill was a negotiable instrument, & they paid it in good faith without notice of any defect in title & in accordance with the law merchant. A bank was not bound to make inquiries merely because a bill indorsed in blank or an open cheque was presented for payment over the counter. According to the law merchant such presentation, although unusual, was always recognised as due presentation, sufficient to require the bankers to pay, in the absence of very special circumstances of suspicion.—*AUCHTERONI & CO. v. 593 i. Dishonour by country bank—Failure to return cheque by return of post—Clearing-house rules.—When a cheque is passed through the clearing-house in Melbourne & not returned dishonoured within the time allowed by the rules of the clearing-house for the return of dishonoured cheques, its payment to the collecting bank must on the expiration of that time be regarded as complete. Pltf. paid into his account at a country branch of deflt. bank a cheque drawn upon a Melbourne branch of another bank. The cheque was passed through the Melbourne clearing-house, where, on the settlement of balances, its amount was credited to deflt. bank by the bank upon which it was drawn. After the expiration of the time allowed by the rules of the clearing-house for the return of dishonoured cheques had expired, the cheque was returned dishonoured to deflt. bank. Notwithstanding that the rules provided that any stale return might be rejected, deflt. bank credited the bank upon which the cheque was drawn with its amount:—Held: deflt. bank had, as agent for pltf., received payment of the cheque, & was therefore liable to pltf. for its amount as money had & received to his use.—*RIEDELL v. 629a. ——— Space left between name of payee & words "or order."—Pltfs., exors. of a will, kept an exors.' account with defts., & retained a firm of solrs., Messrs. C. & P., who used to assist them in matters connected with their testator's estate. The acting member of the firm was one J. C. Pltfs. in conference with J. C. decided to invest through Messrs. J. P. & Co., stockbrokers, a sum of £5,000, part of the estate lodged on deposit with defts. J. C. accordingly drew out a form of cheque for signature by pltfs. It was in the form "Pay J. P. & Co. or order" & was drawn on pltfs.' deposit account with defts. The cheque was signed by pltfs. & left with J. C. to be posted to J. P. & Co. with instructions to invest the money. J. C., instead of posting the cheque to J. P. & Co., fraudulently inserted the words "per C. & P." in the blank space between the payee's name & the words "or order"; he then indorsed the document with the names C. & P. & paid it so altered & indorsed into the W. Bank to the credit of a co. in which he was interested & which had an account at that bank. The document was accepted without question by the W. Bank & passed through the clearing-house, & the account of pltfs. with defts. was debited, & that of the co. with the W. Bank was credited, with the amount on the face of the document. In an action by pltfs. against defts. for conversion, negligence & breach of duty:—Held: (1) the cheque had been "materially altered" within Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 64, & was avoided as between pltfs. & defts. by that sect., & therefore defts. could not rely upon sect. 60 of the Act as excusing them for paying the cheque; (2) for the same reason defts. could not rely on sect. 80 of the Act; (3) assuming the description of the payee, "J. P. & Co. per C. & P." to be a recognised although unusual description, the indorsement of "C. & P." without any reference to

"J. P. & Co." was irregular & invalid & defts. were negligent in honouring the cheque, & for this reason also were not protected by sect. 80, or semble by sect. 60 of the Act; (4) in leaving a blank space between the names of the payees & the words "or order" pltfs. were not guilty of any breach of duty towards defts.—*SLINGSBY v. - 634a. ——— Customer silent—Estoppel.—Pltf. had an account with deft. bank, & his wife forged his signature on cheques & thereby drew out all the money left in the account, & she lent it to her sister. Pltf., on discovering the facts, did not at once inform the bank, but about nine months later, when his wife told him that she wanted more money for her sister, he stated his intention of going to the bank, & that night his wife committed suicide. Pltf. then went to the bank & told the manager about the forged cheques. In an action by pltf., claiming to be credited by deft. bank with the amount of the forged cheques, the bank pleaded (a) adoption & ratification, & (b) that pltf. was estopped by his silence from alleging that the signatures were forgeries. The tribunal of first instance found that the forged cheques were honoured through the carelessness of the bank officials. There was no evidence that pltf. had ever adopted the forged cheques as his own:—Held: ratification had no applicability to a forged signature but pltf. was estopped from alleging the forgeries because his silence until after his wife's death had caused the bank to lose their right of action against the forger, & therefore the action failed.—*GREENWOOD v. 639a. Payment to third party without valuable consideration—Right of bank to recover.]—Deft. H. having possessed himself of crossed cheques which were drawn on pltf. bank in his favour & which purported to be drawn by his employer's authority defrauded his employer by paying them into a bank, which collected them & credited H. with the amounts. H. drew out these amounts & paid some of the money without valuable consideration to deft. S., who in turn paid into her account with deft. bank a portion of what she so received. S. had no notice of any defect in H.'s title, & she never paid into her account with deft. bank any money except money which was part of the proceeds of H.'s frauds. In an action for a declaration that the money standing to the credit of S. with deft. bank was the property of pltf. bank:—Held: on the assumption that H. obtained a voidable title to the proceeds of the cheques, yet pltf. bank had established their right to the money claimed, as it was capable of being traced.—*BANQUE BELGE POUR L'ETRANGER v. 647a. Alteration of payee.]—Pltfs., exors. of one T., deceased, employed a solr., one C., of a firm C. & P. to act for them in matters relating to deceased's estate. They wished to invest a sum of £5,000 through a firm of stockbrokers, & C. accordingly prepared a cheque for that amount payable to the stockbrokers; pltfs. then signed the cheque & handed it back to C. to deal with as directed. C., however, fraudulently added to the cheque the words "per C. & P.," & then indorsed the cheque with the words "C. & P.," & handed it to a branch of deft. bank to be credited to the account which a co. in which he was interested kept at that branch. The cheque was credited to that co. & was passed through the clearing house, & in due course pltfs. were debited by their own bank with the sum of £5,000. On discovering the fraud pltfs. brought this action to recover the £5,000 from defts.:—Held: the words added by C. to the cheque constituted a material alteration & rendered the cheque void under Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 64 (1). As therefore the cheque when it came into the hands of defts. was merely a piece of worthless paper no action could be brought on it, & pltfs.' claim failed. If, however, the cheque remained a valid one defts. had dealt with it without negligence & were protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, & for that reason also the claim failed.—*SLINGSBY v. 658 iv. — — — — —.]—Pltf., who had a savings account with deft. bank, learned on Apr. 28, 1936, from an examination of his passbook that six cheques, afterwards discovered to have been forged, had been charged up against him. Instead of pointing this out to the bank, or asking to see the cheques, he told its manager not to honour any more cheques on his account; that when he wanted money he would come to the bank. The bank requested him to put these instructions in writing but he refused. Between that date & June 8, 1936, ten more forged cheques were charged against his account. He then notified the bank of the forgeries. The forger was sentenced to prison in June, 1936, & was living at the time of this action. It was not shown that the bank was prejudiced as to the cheques cashed before Apr. 28 by the silence of pltf.:—Held: there was no estoppel against pltf. in respect of the cheques cashed before Apr. 28 & pltf. was entitled to judgment against the bank for the amount thereof.—*KEECH v. to W., & handing them to M. as manager that he might hand them to W. M., instead of doing so, paid the cheques with forged indorsements into his own account with deft. bank which credited him with the amounts & obtained payment from the South African bank. The cheques were signed by two directors, including M., of pltf. co. M. applied the money received from the cheques with the exception of about $272 for W., paying out of the proceeds of five cheques "to order" for $62 10s. each four sums of $60 from his private account to W. One cheque, dated May 27, 1918, for $97 10s., which was payable to "self or order" & signed by M. & a co-director, was refused by the bank, & came back to them after such refusal with M.'s name written in after the word "self," but the alteration was not initialed by both directors, & the addition was in M.'s writing. Pltf. co. repudiated the transactions & sued the bank for damages for conversion of the cheques, or alternatively for money had & received. Deft. bank claimed protection under Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, & also as holders for value:—Held: (1) the onus of proving that there was no negligence had been discharged by the bank, except as to the five cheques for $62 10s. each; (2) the bank's duty with regard to these five cheques was to have made inquiries, & they were negligent in paying them into M.'s account; (3) the bank was negligent in cashing the cheque of May 27, 1918, as it should have seen that the alteration in it was made without the concurrence of both directors; (4) the evidence was not sufficient to show that M. paid anything out of his private account to W. in respect of the fifth cheque for $62 10s.; (5) there must be judgment for pltf. co. for $2 10s. on four of the cheques "to order" for $62 10s., $62 10s. on the fifth cheque for the same amount, & $97 10s. on the cheque of May 27, 1918, making an aggregate amount of $170.—*SOUCETTE, LTD. v. 680b. Payment in ordinary course of business—Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 60—Stamp Act, 1853 (c. 59), s. 19.—Pltfs., as managers of a convalescent home, kept an account with deft. bank. Pltfs. employed a secretary of the committee which managed the home, who kept his personal account with deft. bank. By a series of frauds, the secretary misappropriated cheques amounting to over £4,000, which were the property of pltf. & which he contrived to have placed to his account with deft. bank in the following manner. The cheques, which were crossed, were all properly signed by pltf.' proper officers, & in most cases were drawn to people who had supplied goods to the home, in which cases the secretary forged an indorsement, or procured a forged indorsement of the payee, & paid the cheques into deft. bank, asking the bank to credit his account with the amount of the cheques. In other cases, the secretary procured cheques to be drawn in payment of forged invoices in favour of fictitious persons, & in these cases the indorsements were similarly forged, & the amounts of the cheques credited to the secretary's account. In an action for conversion, deft. bank pleaded: (i.) that the payees were non-existent persons, & that the secretary was the bearer of the cheques; (ii.) that it had paid the cheques in good faith in the ordinary course of business, & was protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), & Stamp Act, 1853 (c. 59); & (iii.) that the cheques were crossed, & that it received payment thereof for a customer in good faith, & without negligence:—Held: (1) (MACKINNON, L.J., dissenting) as a receiving bank deft. bank had been guilty of conversion, & as it had been found by the judge to have acted negligently, it was not protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82. Deft. bank was therefore liable to pltf. for the amount of the cheques converted during the six years prior to the action; (2) each transaction was a separate one, & the bank was not entitled to plead that, as the system had been going on for some time, the cheques received during the six years prior to the action had been received without negligence on the part of the bank; (3) (MAC-KINNON, L.J., making no reference to this point) Stamp Act, 1853 (c. 59), s. 19, is impliedly repealed by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 60; (4) per SLESSER & MACKINNON, L.J.J.: a bank can act negligently, & yet be acting in the ordinary course of business; (5) per GREER, L.J.: Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 60, protects a bank only when that bank is merely a paying bank, & is not a bank which receives the cheque for collection. Per SLESSER, L.J.: deft. bank as paying bank was to be deemed to have paid the cheque in the ordinary course of business, & was protected by sect. 60.—CARPENTERS Co. v. 687a. ————].—L., who was the chief accountant at the Bombay branch of pltf. bank, & was authorised to sign cheques on their behalf, had by a system of fraud procured the signature by another official of the branch of cheques payable to deft. bank. Those cheques were then sent to deft. bank for collection, with instructions written by L. on the bank's letter paper requesting deft. bank to place the proceeds of the cheques to the credit of a joint account which L. had opened at deft. bank in the name of himself & his wife. Those instructions having been carried out, the proceeds of the cheques were then collected by L. promptly after they had been paid in. It appeared from the account itself that it was generally in small credit until the arrival of each fraudulent cheque, & there was a failure on the part of deft. bank to make inquiries of pltf. bank as to the regularity of the transactions:—Held: (1) each cheque taken by itself was "issued," being signed & dealt with by persons having ostensible authority to sign & issue it, but the accompanying instructions, signed by L. alone, gave notice of irregularity which destroyed the "holding in due course"; (2) deft. bank were not entitled to rely on Indian Negotiable Instruments Act, s. 131, as their title as holders was defective through notice, so that they were not "true owners" within the sect.; (3) deft. bank had failed to discharge the burden of showing that they had collected without negligence. Examination of L.'s account should have put them on inquiry as to the source from which these payments were made, & pltf. were entitled to succeed in their claim for conversion; (4) defts. could not set off the amount of the cheques repaid to pltf. against the amount of the converted cheques.—LLOYDS BANK v. 687b. ————].—One T., a solr., had from a client a power of attorney entitling T. to draw cheques on the client's banking account & to apply the moneys for the purposes of his client. T. for his own purposes fraudulently drew 15 cheques on his client's account with the B. bank, signing the cheques by using a rubber stamp which had on the upper line the name of the client & on the lower line "his attorney" & by placing his own signature between the lines. T. then paid the cheques into his own account with the M. bank, defts., with whom he had an overdraft. On discovering the facts the client brought an action against defts. for damages for conversion of the cheques, & defts. relied on Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, alleging that the cheques were crossed cheques & that they had received payment of them in good faith & without negligence. During the proceedings T.'s client died, & the proceedings were continued by the client's exors. as pltf. It was admitted that defts. had acted in good faith:—Held: except in the case of two of the cheques defts. in presenting & receiving payment for the cheques, had converted them, & as defts. had from the form of the cheques notice as to the money not being T.'s money, they were negligent in making no inquiry as to T.'s authority to make these payments into his own account, & therefore the action succeeded.—MIDLAND BANK, LTD. v. 691a. ——— Cheque payable to & indorsed by public official.—A banker to whom a private customer hands, for collection on his account, a cheque payable to & indorsed by a public official is put upon inquiry whether the customer is entitled to the cheque, & acts negligently if he credits the customer with the proceeds of the cheque without having made any such inquiry.

The Overseas Military Forces of Canada engaged in the European war had an estates office in England authorised by the Secretary of State for the Colonies to perform in accordance with statutory conditions the duties of collecting & distributing the estates of members of these forces dying in Europe. A sergeant employed at the office misappropriated during a period of ten months thirty-two cheques of the aggregate value of about £3,900, representing money belonging to the estates of deceased soldiers. Each of the cheques was drawn payable to "The Officer in Charge, Estates Office, Canadian Overseas Military Forces," & was indorsed generally by that officer under the same description with a view to its being sent to the Paymaster-General of these forces for payment of the amount to the beneficiaries, or in some cases directly to the beneficiary, & each cheque was crossed generally. The sergeant paid the first two cheques into a branch of defts.' bank at which he had a small private account of his own & the rest of them into another branch of the bank which passed them on to the former branch. No inquiry was made at either branch whether he was entitled to the cheques, & at the former branch they were credited to his account & payment of them was received for him. In an action by the Paymaster-General against defts. for damages for conversion of the cheques:—Held: the fact that the cheques were drawn payable to & indorsed by a public official should have put the cashiers of defts. upon inquiry whether their private customer was entitled to the cheques; in crediting the cheques to him without any inquiry the cashiers of both the branches had been guilty of negligence; & therefore defts. were not protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, from liability to pltf.—*ROSS v. 691c. ——— ———.]—In 1922 pltf. were building ships for a firm, L. M. & P., & in connection with that business L. M. & P. sent pltf. a crossed cheque for £8,000. That cheque was duly received at pltf.' office & B., a director, signed a receipt form on the back of the cheque as follows: "L. & M. Shipbuilding Co. T. B. director." Another director of pltf., J., then indorsed the cheque to the order of another co. of which B. was a director, B. & Co. Ltd. The cheque was then indorsed by B. "for & on behalf of B. & Co. T. B. director," & was paid into the account of B. & Co. at a branch of defts.; & subsequently by arrangement between defts. & himself B. drew £2,000 out of the £8,000 thus credited to B. & Co. Ltd. for his own private purposes. J. had no right to indorse the cheque to the order of B. & Co., & B. & Co. had no right to the proceeds of the cheque. In 1923 pltf. went into liquidation, & the liquidator on examining the accounts found that the cheque for £8,000 had been misapplied, & also that other sums were owing by B. to pltf. The liquidator thereupon proceeded by a misfeasance summons against J. & B., & upon that summons an order was made for £450 against J. & £10,450 against B. The money was not paid, & pltf. brought an action against defts. for conversion of the £8,000 cheque:—Held:

PART II. SECT. 12, SUB-SECT. 3.

691i. What is negligence—Defective title of customer—Collection for stranger.—A man unknown to a banker was permitted to open an account with the bank by paying in a deposit of £5 in notes & four crossed cheques for collection, such cheques being made payable to a number or bearer & marked "bank," or "not negotiable," or "bank not negotiable." Without making any inquiry as to the man's title to the cheques the bank collected them. On the following day the man, by an open cheque, drew out almost the whole of the amount to the credit of his account, & paid in for collection four other crossed cheques, including one drawn by pltf. payable to a number or bearer to which the man who paid it in had no title. These four cheques were collected by the bank almost without inquiry:—Held: the circumstances in which the account was opened was such as to put the bank upon inquiry; the duty of inquiry extended to the transactions of the next day & in the absence of reasonable inquiry the bank was guilty of negligence.—*LONDON BANK OF AUSTRALIA, LTD. v. 691 iii. ——— ———.]—Pltf.'s manager, S., had general authority to draw cheques on pltf.'s account. S. drew & signed a cheque on pltf.'s account for £250 odd in favour of "A. or bearer"; the amount, date & payee's name was also in the handwriting of S. The cheque was crossed generally "Not negotiable." The cheque was on one of pltf.'s cheque forms. This cheque was paid by S. into his account with deft. bank a few hours after it appeared to S. having been signed. The teller on S. handing in the cheque, asked S. which his title was & received an assurance from S. that "it was all right." S. was well known & of good repute in the district, & had had an account with deft. bank for some time, & during the previous six months several cheques in his favour signed by him, drawn on pltf.'s account, had been paid in & not been queried. Over a year later S. drew & signed a further cheque on one of pltf.'s forms on pltf.'s account for £358 odd in favour of "V. or bearer." The cheque & transaction were similar to the other cheque except that the date, name of payee & payee's amount were not in S.'s handwriting. A similar query was made by the teller, & answered in much the same way. In the interval five directors' cheques signed by S. had been paid in payable to himself or bearer. Other than the inquiry made by the teller of S. no inquiries were made by the deft. The cheques were in fact drawn by S. without authority & the proceeds were misappropriated by him. In an action for damages for conversion:—Held: there was a conversion in each case. Also, as the bank had not acted without negligence, it was not protected by sect. 88 of Bills of Exchange Act, 1908.—BENNETT & FISHER, LTD. v. COMMERCIAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA, LTD., [1930] S. A. S. R. 26.—AUS.

691 iv. ——— ———.]—Where a banker claims the protection of sect. 88 (1) of Bills of Exchange Act, 1909-1912, the test of negligence is whether the transaction of paying in the cheque, coupled with the circumstances antecedent & present, was so out of the ordinary course that it ought to have aroused doubts in the banker's mind & caused him to make inquiry.—ENGLISH, SCOTTISH & AUSTRALIAN BANK, LTD. v. BEATTIE, [1931] S. R. (Q.) 291.—AUS.

there was clear evidence of negligence on the part of defts., & Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, gave no defence to the claim.—LONDON & MONTROSE SHIPBUILDING & REPAIRING CO., LTD. v. BARCLAYS BANK (1926), 31 Com. Cas. 182, C. A.

691d. — Dividend warrant for War Loan.]

—The first pltf., who was an executrix & a beneficiary under a will, received from the Bank of England a warrant for interest on War Loan, the warrant being crossed " & Co. Not negotiable " & being expressed to be " A/c Harry Turner, deceased. " She signed the warrant & sent it to the exor.'s solr. in pursuance of an arrangement that any warrants received by her should be sent to him for attention. The solr. paid the warrant into his own account with deft. bank, representing to the bank that it was a repayment of a loan which he said he had made to the first pltf. In an action against the bank to recover the amount:—Held: (1) although the drawer of the warrant was an official of the Bank of England on which it was drawn, yet, as he was acting as an agent of the Government, the warrant constituted a " cheque "; (2) the word " dividends " in Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 95, included interest on Government stock, & (8) as defts. had not been guilty of any negligence they were, on both grounds, protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, & the action failed.—SLINGSBY v. 691e. — Sufficiency of inquiries—Breach of regulations.]

—T., a motor trader in Bristol, had an account with deft. bank. He induced pltfs., a hire-purchase finance firm, to make out a cheque to W. & Co. for £189 5s., which cheque was crossed & marked not negotiable in print. T., having forged the indorsement of W. & Co. upon it, then added his own indorsement to it & paid it into his own account. The cashier asked T., if he had obtained the cheque from W. & Co., to which question he replied in the affirmative. The cashier then inspected T.'s account & saw there were considerable dealings between him & W. & Co. T. then volunteered the information that he had bought a car from W. & Co., & sold it to a customer of his, & mentioned a cheque for £484 10s. which had passed through his account in favour of W. & Co., & led the cashier to believe that a hire-purchase arrangement had been entered into with pltfs. in respect of a car bought from W. & Co. & sold to one of his customers. Deft. bank's regulations require such a cheque to be dealt with by the branch manager, & not by the cashier. The cheque was not brought to the branch manager's notice, nor did the cashier by inquiry discover, as the fact was, that many cheques drawn by T. on his account had been dishonoured, or honoured only after repeated presentation. The bank made no inquiry of W. & Co. respecting the cheque. Pltfs. sued the bank for the conversion of the cheque:—Held: (1) a breach of the bank's own regulations was not conclusive proof that the cashier made insufficient inquiry, nor is a customer entitled to require literal performance of such regulations; (2) the past banking history of T. was such that the bank should have made further inquiry, possibly by reference to the drawer or the payee of the cheque.—MOTOR TRADERS GUARANTEE CORPN., LTD. v. 692b. — Question of fact.]—The question whether a banker in receiving payment of a cheque for a customer has acted without negligence, so as to be protected by Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, if the customer has no title thereto, is a question of fact. Where there was a missing link in the chain of identification of the customer:—Held: that fact ought to have put the bank upon inquiry, & the bank was not protected by the sect.—HAMPSTEAD GUARDIANS v. 692c. —.]—SLINGSBY v. WESTMINSTER BANK (No. 2), No. 647a, ante.

692d. — Failure to require particulars of cheques paid in.]—It was the practice of bankers having a head office in London & various branch offices in London & elsewhere to accept at their head office cheques for the credit of an account at any one of their branch offices & to accept at any one of their branch offices cheques for the credit of an account at any other branch office. A firm of London stockbrokers were in the habit of signing crossed cheques which were intended to be applied in payment of jobbers' accounts, & which in accordance with a rule of the London Stock Exchange were crossed & made payable to bearer. They had in their employment two clerks, P. & S. P. had an account at one country branch of the bank. The wife of S. had an account at another country branch. The manager of country branch No. 1 knew that P. was a stockbroker's clerk, but did not know & did not ask the name of his employers. The manager of country branch No. 2 knew nothing of S. Both P. & Mrs. S. had, when opening their accounts, given references which appeared satisfactory to the respective branch managers. P. stole many of the cheques signed as above, & handed them in at one or other of the bankers' London branches, making out paying-in slips which represented that the cheques were paid in by the payees & directed payment to be made to the credit of P.'s account at country branch No. 1. S. also stole many of the cheques & handed them in at the bankers' head office, making out paying-in slips directing payment to be made to the account of Mrs. S. at country branch No. 2. The stolen cheques were in each case received by the London office & sent to the Clearing House. The paying-in slips were sent to the country branch, no mention being made of the names of the drawers. The amounts of the cheques were without question credited as directed by the paying-in slips. Written rules formulated by the bankers for the direction of their managers provided, among other things, that no new current account should be opened without knowledge of, or full inquiry into, the circumstances & character of the customer; there was also a rule, not written but generally recognised, that banks do not take payments in, without inquiry, of cheques drawn by a firm in favour of a third party & paid in by a person, other than the payee, who is or ought to be known to be an employee of the drawing firm. The stockbrokers sued the bankers for conversion of the stolen cheques. The bankers pleaded Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (c. 61), s. 82, & alleged that they had in good faith & without negligence received payment of the cheques for their customers P. & Mrs. S.:—Held: (1) the practice of the bankers was defective in that the branch which received the cheques in the first instance never informed the crediting branch of the names of the drawers of the cheques; (2) the managers of the crediting branches had omitted to make sufficient inquiries when accepting P. & Mrs. S. as customers; in these circumstances the bankers had failed to prove that they had acted without negligence, & consequently that they were liable; (3) Semble, by Ct. of Appeal, neither P. nor Mrs. S. was a "customer" within the true meaning of sect. 82, inasmuch as neither had an account at the City offices into which the cheques were paid.—*LLOYDS BANK, LTD. v. Among the conditions, the two following were the most important:—(a) "Please note that this advice does not release you from the liability attaching to the drawer of a bill of exchange"; (b) "Under present conditions we can give no undertaking to negotiate bills drawn under this credit".—Held: the document was not an ordinary banker's letter of credit.—*CHANDANMULL BENGALY v. of credit the bankers agreed to honour the sellers' draft for the amount of the purchase-money, which included freight & insurance to R., provided the draft were accompanied by an approved insurance policy covering the shipment of the goods. The sellers presented their draft accompanied by a certificate of insurance which did not contain & did not offer any means of ascertaining the full terms of the insurance. In an action by the sellers against the bankers for not honouring the draft:—Held: the certificate was not an "approved insurance policy" within the meaning of the letter of credit, & the bankers were justified in refusing to honour the draft. 756b. Irrevocable letter of credit—Payment for goods—Refusal of bank to pay invoices—Liability of bank to seller.—Ptfs. entered into a contract with buyers in C. to manufacture & ship machinery by instalments over several months at agreed prices, but subject to a stipulation that should the cost of labour or wages increase, there should be a corresponding increase in the purchase price. The buyers were also to open a "confirmed irrevocable credit" in favour of ptfs. with a bank in this country, & to pay for each shipment as it took place. In pursuance of this arrangement defts., who were the buyers' bankers in L., wrote to ptfs. stating that they would pay bills drawn on the buyers to the extent of £70,000, the bills to be accompanied by documents & to be received before Apr. 14, 1921, "this to be considered a confirmed irrevocable credit." Ptfs. shipped two instalments under the contract & received payment under the letter of credit. The buyers then found that the invoices included an increase in the purchase price on account of wages & material, & instructed defts. only to pay so much of the next invoices as represented the original prices. Defts. accordingly refused to pay the bill presented on the next shipment & ptfs. then cancelled the contract, claiming damages from defts. as on a repudiation by the buyers:—Held: the credit being irrevocable, the refusal of defts. to take & pay for the particular bills on presentation of the proper documents constituted a repudiation of the contract as a whole, & ptfs. were entitled to damages so reckoned. The basis of this form of banking facility is that the buyer is taken, as between himself & the banker, to accept the seller's invoices as correct. Any adjustment must be made by way of refund by the seller & not by way of retention by the buyer.—URQUHART LINDSAY & CO. v. EASTERN BANK, LTD., [1922] 1 K. B. 318; 91 L. J. K. B. 274; 126 L. T. 534; 27 Com. Cas. 124.

756c. Revocable letter of credit—Duty of bank to give notice of withdrawal.—A firm in W., who wished to buy a quantity of asbestos sheets from ptfs., a firm in L., instructed defts. to open a credit in favour of ptfs. Defts. accordingly wrote a letter dated June 14, 1920, to ptfs. informing them of their instructions & adding that their letter "is merely an advice of the opening of the above-mentioned credit, & is not a confirmation of the same." On July 20, 1920, ptfs. shipped part of the goods to the buyers & were paid the agreed price by defts. on presentation of the stipulated documents which included bills of lading & a draft on defts. On Aug. 4, 1920, defts. were instructed by cable that the credit was withdrawn. On Sept. 30, 1920, ptfs., not having had notice of the withdrawal of the credit, shipped the balance of the goods to the buyers, but defts. refused payment of a draft for the price. Ptfs. brought an action against defts. for recovery of the balance of the credit, alleging (inter alia) that it was the duty of defts. to give to ptfs. reasonable notice that the credit had been withdrawn. There was evidence that it was the practice of defts. at once to inform persons to whom revocable credit was given of the withdrawal of the credit, but that in this instance, owing to pressure of business, they had forgotten to do so. Among the documents tendered to defts. on the application for payment on the second occasion was a bill of lading which defts. alleged was out of order, but which, according to ptfs., was in exactly the same terms as the former bill of lading accepted by defts. without objection:—Held: (1) a letter in the form of that written by defts. on June 14, 1920, intimated to the person in whose favour the credit was opened that he might find that the credit was revoked at any time; (2) there was no legal obligation on defts. to give notice of the revocation of the credit; (3) the giving of notice was an act of courtesy which it was very desirable should be performed, but it was not founded upon any legal obligation.—*CAPE ASBESTOS CO., LTD. v. - 803a. ———.]—Three shareholders in a ship-building co., which was heavily indebted to a bank, agreed to purchase certain shares in a steel co. which belonged to the ship-building co. & were held by the bank as security. The price of the shares was £89,750, & the bank agreed to advance £39,750, "on joint loan" to the three purchasers, the balance being provided by them in equal portions. The shares were thereafter to be held by the bank in security of the sum advanced. The purchasers paid for the shares by granting their individual cheques to the sellers for £10,000 each, & by drawing joint cheques, signed by them all, on the bank for the £39,750 advanced. The bank paid this amount to the sellers, & opened a joint overdraft account in name of the three purchasers. The purchasers were not customers of the bank. The value of the shares having fallen, the bank intimated to one of the three purchasers that it held him liable for the whole amount of the loan. He thereupon brought an action concluding for declarator that he was liable only for one-third of the amount of the loan, & that, on payment thereof, he was entitled to receive a transfer of one-third of the shares held in security by the bank:—Held: (1) the pursuer was liable for one-third only, in respect (a) that the purchasers were not jointly & severally liable, as drawers of the joint cheques, to the bank as a holder in due course, seeing that the cheques had been paid by the bank as drawee & were thus no longer subsisting documents of debt; & (b) that the loan was constituted by the agreement to advance it which imposed only a joint liability, & not by the cheques which were merely part of the machinery for carrying out the transaction; but (2) the pursuer was not entitled to receive a transfer of one-third of the shares, in respect that the bank, under the arrangement for the pledge of the shares, was entitled to treat the whole of the shares deposited as being security for the whole of the amount advanced.—COATS v. UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND, LTD., [1929] S. C. 114 (H. L.).

On Nov. 17, 1926, when the co. had become completely insolvent, resps. satisfied the whole indebtedness to the bank by means of a loan from the bank to resps. personally. Resps. claimed repayment of income tax under Income Tax Act, 1918 (c. 40), s. 36 (1), on the part of the total sum paid amounting to £17,861 16s. 5d., which represented interest debited half-yearly to the co.'s account with the bank:—Held: the interest due each half-year which, upon the failure of the co. to pay it, was, according to the regular practice of bankers, added to the capital sum advanced, was thereby capitalised & could not thereafter be treated as interest paid under the sub-sect.—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. charges have been included in the statements furnished him from month to month, & without making any objection thereto, he has signed & returned such statements as satisfactory, he cannot complain, in an action to recover the loan & interest, that the charges for interest at that rate were illegal.—*ROYAL BANK OF CANADA v. y vii. — Whether charged.—Upon the return of a dishonoured bill, the drawer would again draw for the same amount, & pltf. bank would discount the bill as before, & if the second bill came back dishonoured it would again be charged in full to the drawer's account.—Held: there was no breach of Bank Act, s. 91.—IMPERIAL BANK OF CANADA v. ALLEY, [1926] 3 D. L. R. 85; 59 O. L. R. 1.—CAN.

y viii. — Acquiescence—Whether guarantor bound.—Where a bank has charged a borrower interest at a rate beyond that permitted by the Bank Act the principle that if the borrower voluntarily pays the excess he cannot recover it back extends to the borrower's voluntary assent to anything which is equivalent to payment of interest at that rate; & if at the date of a guarantee given the bank the actual amount guaranteed includes such excess interest & the borrower has so recognised the propriety of the excess charge that it must be considered voluntarily "paid." It is not afterwards open to the guarantor to say that as against him the accounts must be re-opened & such voluntary payments rescinded.—BANQUE CANADIENNE NATIONALE v. SHERAGOE (Man.), [1929] 3 W. y ix. — Giving renewal note.—Where a customer has given a bank a note bearing a rate of interest higher than 7 per cent. & has renewed it with a note for an amount inclusive of the interest accrued at said rate such renewal note has the same effect as payment would have had with respect to the matter of interest, i.e., the customer cannot complain in an action to recover the loan & interest that the rate of interest was illegal.—*CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE v. sa. Raising rate of interest—Whether customer bound.—The mere sending of a notice that the interest charged on overdrafts against security held by the bank has been raised, is not of itself sufficient to render a customer liable to pay the enhanced rate, but where, after receiving such a notice, the customer borrows more money from the bank, the bank is justified in charging him interest at the enhanced rate.—*GADDAN MAL v. sp. Repayment of advances by cheque—On trust account—Knowledge of bank—Liability.—Where a bank which had made loans to a trust co. on which, in pursuance of the arrangement between it & the co., repayments were being made by the application of balances standing from time to time to the credit of the co.'s general account, was found on the evidence to have had express notice that cheques drawn on the account, in another bank, of pltf. estate, of which the co. was then exor., & deposited in the co.'s said general account, represented the moneys of the estate, & knew that payments received from the co. on its debt must represent, in part at least, the proceeds of said cheques, & concurred in the intention of the co. to so apply them.—Held: the bank was liable to the estate for the amount of the cheques, with interest from the dates when they were deposited in the co.'s account.—*ATHEISON v. sq. — Pltf. co., which had been appointed administrator of an estate after the original administrator, a trust co., went into liquidation, sued for restitution of moneys of the estate which had been received by deft. bank from said trust co. through a breach of trust to which, it was alleged, the bank was a party. It was found that moneys of the estate had been deposited in the trust co.'s general account in the bank, & that a cheque drawn on that account had been given the bank in settlement of notes due by the co.—Held: under all the circumstances, the bank must be taken to have known that the co. was using trust funds for its own purposes, including its payments to the bank, & to have been put upon inquiry every time it received or was offered a cheque from the general account to be applied on the debts owing to it by the trust co. The bank was, therefore, liable. The brokers, although they had not carried out pltf.'s order to buy, hypothecated pltf.'s said shares with def. bank. In an action against the bank & the brokers, in bkpy. for conversion:—Held: In the absence of evidence that the bank had notice of a lack of capacity in the brokers to deal with the shares & of evidence pointing to a lack of good faith in the bank in the transaction, pltf. was estopped by his conduct in so endorsing the shares from asserting title to them as against the bank, even though there was fraud on the part of the brokers.—ROBINSON v. debt securities which the bank knew or should have known belonged to the estate, but that, although the officials of the bank, because of the information which they had, were put upon inquiry, they had deliberately closed their eyes. The hypothecation notes with respect to some at least of said securities contained descriptions which were held sufficient to inform the bank:—Held: if the bank were to-day holding these securities for a debt of the co. to them, there would be no doubt that it could not hold them for moneys advanced after such notice. But that was not the situation in question. The securities were disposed of by redemption or sale years ago & the proceeds went to the co. If the moneys were misapplied by the co., there is no principle of law on which the bank could be held to be liable simply because it at one time held the securities as security.—WHITE v. The agreement was not registered under Conditional Sales Act. 865a. Bills of lading pledged—Authorised sale by pledgor—Title of bank to proceeds.—A limited co. pledged bills of lading with a bank to secure an overdraft. When it was time to sell the goods, the co. in accordance with the well-established mercantile practice obtained the bills of lading from the bank for realisation on the terms stated in the usual letter of trust given by the co. to the bank, to wit, that the co. received the bills of lading in trust on the bank's account & undertook to hold the goods when received & the proceeds when sold as the bank's trustees to remit the entire net proceeds as realised:—Held: the bank's previous rights as pledgee remained unaffected by this common & convenient mode of realisation.—Re ALLESTER (D.), [1922] 2 Ch. 211; 91 L. 865b. Pledge of receipts for goods—Fraudulent second pledge by pledgor—Conversion—Estoppel.—A firm of merchants, who purchased ground-nuts from up-country growers & were entitled to obtain delivery of them under railway receipts, obtained a loan from resps., bankers, on the security of the goods covered by the railway receipts, & delivered the relevant receipts to the bank by way of pledge, giving to the bank at the same time a promissory note for the amount advanced & a letter of lien. The bank then passed the receipts on to their own godown keeper to enable him to obtain possession of the goods, & he, in accordance with the usual practice adopted by the bank, & in order to avail himself of the merchants' services, handed the railway receipts back to the merchants for the specific purpose of clearing the goods & storing them in the bank's go-down. The merchants, however, then fraudulently used the same receipts to obtain a second advance from applts., bankers, from whom they had been in the habit of securing loans under arrangements similar to those negotiated with resp. bank, & who were unaware of the loan by resp. bank. On a claim by resps. against applts. for damages for conversion:—Held: resps. owed no duty to applts. in the matter—there was no relationship of contract or agency, & they had no reason to think that the receipts would ever be handed to applts.—& they were not therefore estopped by their conduct in returning the receipts to the merchants for the specific purpose of clearing the goods from denying as against applts. that the merchants had the right of pledging the goods as owners, or from setting up their title as against applts. to the goods. No authority had been given to the merchants to deal with the goods otherwise than by handing them for the limited purpose of transferring them to the bank's godown. Resps. committed no breach of duty owing to applts. or to anyone else; all that they did was to deal with their own property, as pledgees, in the usual course of business which was well known to & had been followed both by applts. & resps. Not only was there an absence of any duty or of anything amounting to a neglect of the usual precautions, but there was no ground for finding any representation by resps. that the merchants had any title to dispose of the goods. The merchants could not transfer a better title than they possessed—a title subject to the pledge to resps.—MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LTD. v. CENTRAL BANK OF INDIA, LTD., [1938] A. 865c. Whether charge or trust created.—Deft. bank advanced money to deft. co., sometimes, by way of overdraft & at other times by way of advance on loan account. These advances were secured by trust receipts, by which the co. agreed that goods purchased with such advances should be held by them as agents for & in trust for the bank, the intention being that the bank should be entitled to such goods as security for the advance. There was, inter alia, an undertaking to deliver the goods to the bank to enable it to sell the st. Wheat tickets—Sale in breach of instructions—Measure of damages.—A borrower from a bank gave it as collateral security an assignment of wheat tickets on the terms that the bank was to sell the wheat on deft.'s instructions & apply the proceeds in reduction of his loan. The borrower later on instructed the bank to sell when wheat should reach $1 per bushel at Fort William; & the bank's manager agreed to carry out these instructions. The market-price at Fort William reached said price some weeks afterwards; but no sale was made, although it was admitted that the wheat could have been sold at that time:—Held: the borrower was entitled to damages & the measure thereof was the market-price at the time when the bank should have sold the wheat; & not, as held on the trial, at the date when the borrower learned that his instructions had not been complied with.—*BANK OF TORONTO v. 921a. ———.]—Defts. acted as bankers for a firm up to Feb. 3, 1914, when the firm being insolvent by deed assigned all their property to pltf. as trustee for their creditors. The deed provided that payments to the creditors should be made upon the basis of a bkpcy. distribution of the property & that secured creditors should have the same rights as under a bkpcy. At the date of the deed the firm had £2,934 to the credit of their current account in deft. bank, & the bank held certain shares as security for an advance to the firm. These shares were subsequently sold by the bank & realised £812 in excess of the amount of the advance to the firm. Before Feb. 3, 1914, the firm had discounted with the bank a number of bills of exchange, which matured after that date, & in respect thereof the firm became the debtors of the bank to the amount of £19,941. In an action by pltf. as trustee under the deed to recover from the bank the two sums of £2,934 & £812, the bank claimed a lien on those sums & also to set off a sufficient portion of £19,941 against those sums:—Held: the bank's claim was right on both points.—*BAKER v. In 1913, the bank, without notice to the guarantors but with the assent of the debtor, increased the rate of interest upon the advances to 8 per cent., though, by

Bank Act (R. S. Can. c. 29), s. 91, it was illegal for a bank to charge more than 7 per cent. Subsequently one of the signatories died, & his exors. gave notice purporting to terminate the liability of the estate of the deceased under the guarantee:—Held: (1) the guarantee remained in force against all the guarantors until each & all of them or their respective exors. or administrators gave notice to determine it; (2) the increase in the rate of interest did not discharge the guarantors, but they were liable for the principal sum advanced & for such interest as the debtor was legally to pay.—*EGBERT v. receiving payment from any one who chose to pay in money to the bank to the firm's credit; & since the bank had not continued to deal with the firm in the way its covenant called for, the guarantor had not received the consideration on which his covenant was based & therefore, was not bound to perform it.—*ROYAL BANK OF CANADA v. Ptlf. was a customer of deft. bank. A cheque was drawn by another customer of defts. in favour of ptlf., who instead of paying it in to his own account indorsed it to a third person who had an account at another bank. On the return of the cheque to defts. their manager inquired of the last-named bank who the person was to whom it had been paid, & was told it was a bookmaker. That information defts. disclosed to third persons:—Held: that disclosure constituted a breach of defts.' duty to ptlf., for though the information was acquired not through ptlf.'s account but through that of the drawer of the cheque, it was acquired by defts. during the currency of ptlf.'s account & in their character as bankers.—*TOURNIER v. In 1918, the bank, without notice to the guarantors but with the assent of the debtor, increased the rate of interest upon the advances to 8 per cent., though, by

Bank Act (R. S. Can. c. 29), s. 91, it was illegal for a bank to charge more than 7 per cent. Subsequently one of the signatories died, & his exors. gave notice purporting to terminate the liability of the estate of the deceased under the guarantee:—Held: (1) the guarantee remained in force against all the guarantors until each & all of them or their respective exors. or administrators gave notice to determine it; (2) the increase in the rate of interest did not discharge the guarantors, but they were liable for the principal sum advanced & for such interest as the debtor was legally to pay.—*EGBERT v. Bros. herein referred to as "the customer" in the way of its business as a bank" debt. undertook that the amount of the guarantee would be paid to the bank at the times & in the manner specified.—Held: the words "continuing to deal . . . in the way of its business as a bank" must involve some bond fide fresh transaction between the bank & the firm, it being impossible to restrict these words to merely keeping the firm's account open, that is, merely receiving payment from any one who chose to pay in money to the bank to the firm's credit; & since the bank had not continued to deal with the firm in the way its covenant called for, the guarantor had not received the consideration on which his covenant was based & therefore, was not bound to perform it.—*ROYAL BANK OF CANADA v. 986a. ——— Without consent of customer.—It is an implied term of the contract between a banker & his customer that the bank will not divulge to third persons, without the consent of the customer express or implied, either the state of the customer's account, or any of his transactions with the bank, or any information relating to the customer acquired through the keeping of his account, unless the banker is compelled to do so by order of a ct., or the circumstances give rise to a public duty of disclosure, or the protection of the banker's own interests requires it.

Ptlf. was a customer of deft. bank. A cheque was drawn by another customer of defts. in favour of ptlf., who instead of paying it in to his own account indorsed it to a third person who had an account at another bank. On the return of the cheque to defts. their manager inquired of the last-named bank who the person was to whom it had been paid, & was told it was a bookmaker. That information defts. disclosed to third persons:—Held: that disclosure constituted a breach of defts. duty to ptlf., for though the information was acquired not through ptlf.'s account but through that of the drawer of the cheque, it was acquired by defts. during the currency of ptlf.'s account & in their character as bankers.—*TOURNIER v. Later, on being informed of the difficulty in producing the ledgers, the Comr. made a verbal order to the bank to produce copies of the entries in accordance with Bankers' Books Evidence Act :—Held : the proceedings before the Commission were not "legal proceedings" within the meaning of Bankers' Books Evidence Act, & the verbal order was invalid ; but the summons was valid.—McCORMACK v. The Law Society opposed on the ground that it was necessary for appot. also to have passed the examination in Union statute law required by sect. 2 of Act 19, 1921:—Held: as appot.'s qualification acquired outside the Union would not have entitled him to admission in Natal, sect. 2 of Act 19, 1921, did not apply to him.—*Ex p. The judges, by a majority, held that he was entitled to be so enrolled under that Act, but added that in view of the fact that he had been a permanent judge of that ct. they refused to allow him to appear in the cts. of the province. On appeal against that refusal:—Held: by being entered on the roll of advocates applt. had established a statutory right to practise of the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926, s. 14 (1) providing that, "An advocate shall be entitled as of right to practise . . . in the High Ct. of which he is an advocate. . . ."—*PRAFULLA RANJAN DAS v. - 173a. — Position of.—A barrister practising in Bristol & a barrister practising in London, or, rather one having chambers in both places, is not practising separate professions ; he is still a practising barrister. The profession of a practising barrister is that of a barrister practising in the courts of Great Britain, & wherever he is called upon to go, there he acts as a practising barrister. I think it is quite impossible to regard a change of chambers from one town to another as a relevant fact. Now, as to the fact of the barrister becoming a King's Counsel, I do not think the matter can be dealt with by construing the King's patent, or by considering it in a technical manner, but by regarding what, de facto, is the state of affairs which arises when a barrister becomes a King's Counsel. No doubt at one time he was considered to hold an office ; he was paid a salary & could not appear against the Crown without a licence. What happens now is that the Sovereign confers a titular rank which is recognised in the cts. by giving the holder precedence, a seat within the Bar, & by entitling him to wear a silk gown. On the other hand, by the practice of the profession, he abstains from doing certain classes of work which he did before appointment. But he is still acting in the same way as before, practising the art of advocacy. All he does is to limit the part he takes therein, but he carries on the work of advocacy still, though in a higher degree. I do not think that there can be any distinction between the different cases where junior barristers become King's Counsel; the position involved is quite simple & all must come under the same head. Both the junior barrister & the King's Counsel carry on the same profession, but the latter occupy a higher rank or degree within it (ROWLATT, J.).—SELDON (F. E.) v. CROOM-JOHNSON; SELDON (F. E.) v. June 1, 1928, the procedure by which an advocate can be called upon to answer for misconduct is governed by Bar Councils Act, 1926, ss. 10 and 11. To proceed under sub-sect. 2, the Ct. is required, by sub-sect. (2) of that sect., if it does not summarily reject the complaint, either to refer the case for inquiry to the Bar Council, or, after consultation with the Bar Council, to refer it to the Ct. of a District Judge. Similar powers of reference are given where the Ct., instead of acting on a complaint, acts on its own motion. But in either event, it is necessary for the case to be either referred to the Bar Council, or at any rate for the Bar Council to be consulted. —Re A VAKIL of AZAMGARH (1928), I. L. 22a i. Deed of separation—Presumption of non-access.]—The legal presumption of access & of the legitimacy of a child of the spouses born during marriage is rebutted by its conception during the operation of a decree of the ct. pronouncing their separation, or during a period when the spouses are living apart under a deed of separation; & the evidence of either spouse to negative legitimacy is, therefore, admissible.—McINTOSH v. McINTOSH, [1934] N. Z. L. R. Supp. 132; G. L. R. 357.—N.Z.

22c. Child of Chinese resident in Straits Settlements & "t' sip."]—According to the Chinese law of marriage, which is applied in Penang in the case of Chinese residents, a Chinaman may have secondary wives (sometimes called "t' sips") who have the status of wives & whose children are legitimate. Although some sort of ceremony is usual when a "t' sip" is taken, proof of the performance of a ceremony is not essential to establish the relationship. Deceased resp. for twenty-six years lived & was maintained in the house of a Chinese merchant in Penang, & bore him children. One child who survived the father was referred to in his will as "my daughter," & her name appeared upon his tombstone. The resp. had been recognised by the Chinaman & by his primary wife as occupying in his household the position of a secondary wife:—Held: deceased resp. was a secondary wife, whether or not the performance of a ceremony was proved, & under the practice in Penang (which was not questioned in the appeal) she was entitled, upon the death of the Chinaman partially intestate, to share as a widow.—CHENG THYE PHIN v. TAN AH LOY, [1920] A. C. 369; 89 L. J. P. C. 44; 132 L. T. 593, P. C.—STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

22c. ———.—]—The Chinese custom of legitimation of a natural son by subsequent recognition is not part of the law of the Straits Settlements in relation to Chinese people there domiciled; nor does recognition as a son raise a presumption that the son's mother was a "t' sip," or secondary wife. The modifications of the law of England which obtain in the Colony in its application to the various alien races established there arise from the necessity of preventing the injustice or oppression which otherwise would ensue. It is from that necessity that the status of "t' sips," & consequently the legitimacy of their offspring, have been recognised; but there are no grounds which would justify treating an illegitimate natural son as legitimated by the mere fact of subsequent recognition.—KHOO HOOI LEONG v. KHOO CHONG YEOK, [1930] A. C. 346; 99 L. J. P. C. 129; 143 L. T. 25, P. C.—STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

22c. Child of Mahomedan & his servant—Acknowledgment of child by father as his son.]—The son of a Mahomedan by a female servant in his house claimed a declaration of his legitimacy. The parents had continuously cohabited for many years, & the father on several occasions had acknowledged ptf. as his son. There was some evidence of a nikah marriage:—Held: evidence that other members of the father's class had illegitimate children by servants was inadmissible to rebut the presumption of legitimacy arising from the acknowledgments, & though the fact that the mother unlike the father's other wives was not parda-nikah was one to be considered, it was insufficient to interfere with the presumption of law or the balance of proof of the fact of legitimacy.—*MOHABBAT ALI KHAN v. 65f. ———— Effect of order for maintenance.—On Oct. 17, 1935, resp., on the ground of desertion, obtained against her husband a maintenance order which did not contain a provision that she was no longer bound to cohabit with him. On June 20, 1937, she gave birth to a child, her husband being then still alive.—Held: proof of the maintenance order was not sufficient to rebut the legal presumption of access of the husband & of the legitimacy of the child born during resp.'s marriage.—*BOWEN v. H. were the legitimate daughter of testator & 10 per cent. if she were a stranger in blood. The Inland Revenue contended that M. H. was not legitimate & sought to prove this by the evidence of: (i.) testator's will in which he always referred to M. H. as his "daughter or reputed daughter," (ii.) the acts & statements of the exors. of testator's will who had, on the death of testator, paid legacy duty on the bequests to M. H. on the footing that she was a stranger in blood, & (iii.) an affidavit sworn by a grandson of testator as to the reputation in the family with regard to the legitimacy of M. H.:—Held: (1) the statements in testator's will were not excluded by the rule in *Russell v. Upon an application by A. for maintenance under Testator's Family Maintenance & Guardianship of Infants Act, 1916, it appeared that A. was born about seven weeks after the marriage of his mother with M. Declarations by M. who was deceased, were tendered in evidence to show that, although M. had been intimate with his wife about four months before their marriage, A. was not his son, & that his wife had admitted that fact.—Held: the evidence was not rendered inadmissible by reason of the rule laid down in *Russell v. 130f. — Hearsay evidence—Admissibility.] —The rule in pedigree cases that declarations of deceased relatives made ante litem motam are admissible in evidence extends to proceedings under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60). The declarations are admissible in the latter class of proceedings in spite of the fact that the legal relationship of the declarant to the party sought to be legitimated is incidentally part of the subject-matter for decision. Although the party sought to be legitimated is filius nullius until decree & therefore before decree can have no relations, the result of excluding the declarations would be to take away by a rule of evidence the benefit that the statute intended to confer upon persons whose birth has been originally illegitimate apart from the operation of the statute.

The true construction to be placed upon the limitation ante litem motam in cases of legitimation is not a reference to the commencement of proceedings under the statute but the origination of controversy in the family in which legitimation is sought sufficient to create bias in the minds of its members at the moment of their declarations which are subsequently put forward as evidence.—Re DAVY, [1935] P. 1; sub nom. DAVY v. Counsel stated that the A.-G.'s instructions were to use discretion as to the particular cases of that kind in which costs should be claimed.—CUNLIFFE v. A.-G. (1934), 103 L. J. P. 114; 50 T. L. 142a. Under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60)—Parent married to third party when petitioner born—Petitioner with foreign domicile.]—Though the Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), does not in general permit the legitimation of a person born before the marriage of his parents if either parent was married to a third person when the illegitimate person was born, this restriction does not apply when the person seeking to be declared legitimate is domiciled abroad, & when by the law of the domicile he would be legitimated per subsequens matrimonium. In this case the infant petitioner & his father, a British subject, were domiciled in Germany. When the petitioner was born there was a subsisting marriage between his father & a woman not the petitioner's mother. The father was divorced in Germany, & married the mother of his son. By German law petitioner was thereby legitimated:—Held: under the joint operation of Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), ss. 2, 8, the infant petitioner was entitled to a declaration of legitimacy.—COLLINS v. 142a i. Under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60).—M.'s parents were not married until two years after her birth. Their marriage took place in England in 1876, her father being domiciled in England. M. became legitimate in England by virtue of the British Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60). M. claimed to be one of the lawful next-of-kin of her father's sister, who died intestate on Aug. 9, 1930, & whose estate was the subject of administration proceedings in the Irish Free State.—Held: M.'s claim was good; the question of legitimacy was one of status, & status depended on the law of domicile, & as M. was legitimate in England on Aug. 9, 1930, she was also legitimate in the Irish Free State, her legitimacy not being dependent on the Legitimacy Act, 1931 (No. 13 of 1931) of the Irish Free State.—Re HAGENBAUM, [1933] L. 142a ii. Under Legitimacy Act, 1926.—Pitt. was born on Mar. 23,

M., who was a sister of Pitt.'s father, died on Feb. 17, 1936, intestate & unmarried. The said M.'s next-of-kin consisted of the children of brothers & sisters who had predeceased her.—Held: the words "domiciled in Northern Ireland" in Legitimacy Act (Northern Ireland), 1928, s. 1 (1), should be interpreted as "domiciled in that portion of Ireland which is now Northern Ireland," & consequently Pitt. was entitled to take an interest in the estate of M.—Re M., [1937] N. In Apr. & May, 1929, she was living apart from her husband & was constantly seeing a man named M. A decree nisi on the divorce petition was granted in June, 1929, & was made absolute on Jan. 13, 1930. On Jan. 23, 1930, Mrs. S. gave birth to a child—the present petitioner—& Mrs. S. & M. were married on Mar. 20, 1930. In her divorce petition Mrs. S. made no disclosure of adultery. M. was now seeking a divorce & asking for the custody of the child, & the present petition was for a declaration that the child of M. & Mrs. S. was legitimated per subsequens matrimonium.—Held: the presumption that the child was the lawful issue of Mr. & Mrs. S. was rebutted by the evidence, & a declaration ought to be made under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), s. 2, that the child petitioner was a legitimated person within sect. 1 of the Act.—*MATURIN v. 152a. On exercise of power of appointment.]—For the purpose of the exercise of a power of appointment a child which is legitimate by the lex domicilii will be treated as legitimate by the English Ct.

Under an English marriage settlement of 1893, funds were settled on trust for J., the husband, who was the settlor, his wife F., & the issue of the marriage, but in the event of a future marriage the husband had power to appoint part of the funds to the children of that marriage. There were issue of the first marriage, two children. About 1909 J. separated from F., who lived in Switzerland with her two children until her death in 1918. J. had acquired a German domicile before 1911, & his first marriage was dissolved in June, 1911, by a ct. in Germany having jurisdiction, the decree nisi being made absolute on July 27, 1911. On Apr. 20, 1912, J. married his second wife A., with whom he had cohabited since 1909. M., their acknowledged daughter, had been born on Jan. 30, 1911, at Zurich, & by German law the marriage gave her the status of legitimacy. By deed poll, dated June 13, 1913, J. purported to revoke the trusts relating to a portion of the trust funds under the marriage settlement of 1893, & appointed the income of that portion after his death to A., & after her death he appointed the capital to M. J. died in 1929.—Held: (1) the lex domicilii, that is German law, was applicable; (2) the lex domicilii, in its widest sense being recognised by the English Cts., M. was a legitimate child of J.; & (3) J. had validly exercised the power of appointment in favour of M.—Re ASKEW, MARJORIBANKS v. ASKEW, [1930] 2 Ch. 259; 99 L. J. Ch. 466; 143 L. T. 616; 46 T. L. R. 539.

152b. Under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60)—Death after marriage of parents—Before operative date of Act—Rights of issue.]—M. had two illegitimate children, a son & a daughter, by L., whom she subsequently married in 1905. The son died in 1919 leaving issue. L. died in 1919. M. died in 1923 intestate.—Held: the son having died before above Act came into force, his issue took no share of M.'s estate.—Re LOWE, STEWART v. LOWE, [1929] 2 Ch. 210; 98 L. J. Ch. 440; 141 L. 152c. — Meaning of "disposition."]—The first deft. was a person legitimated by Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60); & as her parents were married in 1915, the date of legitimation was Jan. 1, 1927, being the date when the Act came into operation. The will of her grandfather who died in 1922, after a life interest to her father, gave certain funds to be shared between the "children" of her father who should survive that father. The father died in 1928. Under Legitimacy Act, 1926 (c. 60), she was entitled to take as a "child" in respect of any "disposition" coming into operation on or after Jan. 1, 1927. On the one hand it was contended that the will was the "disposition," & as this came into operation in 1922 she could not take; & on the other hand, it was contended that the bequest was the "disposition," & as this was contingent, it did not come into operation until 1928 upon the happening of the contingency:—Held: the "disposition" was the will & such legitimated person did not take under the gift to "children."—Re HEPWORTH, RASTALL v. HEPWORTH, [1936] Ch. 750; [1936]

325a. ———.]—Applt. was charged on complaint preferred by resp. with being the father of a bastard child of resp. Applt. was a farmer & a bachelor. Resp. was his house-keeper. On the morning of the birth when resp. was in labour, applt., who had no other female servant, lit a fire for her & took her some tea & brandy. He also sent for the doctor. After the birth he allowed her & the child to remain for five weeks & two days, until June 17, in his house. There was no evidence whether she was sufficiently recovered to have left at an earlier date. Applt. admitted that during those five weeks & two days he never asked resp. who was the father of her child. Resp. in her evidence said that during that time, though she did not fix the date except that it was before June 16, she asked applt. what he was going to do about the child, & he said that there was nothing for him to do but to pay. After resp. had left his house she wrote him a letter charging him with being the father of the child, & asking him if he meant to pay for its maintenance. To that letter he made no reply:—Held: the above facts did not afford any evidence corroborating the evidence of resp. in some material particular, as required by 1872 Act, s. 4.—*THOMAS v. Variation of order—Adjudication of paternity—"Fresh evidence."—On the application of resp., justices made an order adjudging that applt. was the father of her illegitimate child, & ordered him to make her a periodical payment. On a subsequent application by applt. under Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (c. 58), s. 30 (3), to revoke the whole order, he tendered fresh evidence, which went only to show that he was not the father of the child. The justices refused to hear it, holding that they had no power to deal with that part of the order which adjudged the paternity.—Held: (1) the justices were right; (2) (AVORY & SHEARMAN, J.J.) there being nothing to show that the evidence tendered was of facts which had occurred since the original hearing, or had come to the knowledge of applt. since the hearing, that evidence was not "fresh evidence" within sect. 30 (3).—*COLCHESTER v. 371 II. ———.]—Where, upon an application under sect. 128 (b) of Child Welfare Act, R.S.S., 1930, the putative father did not show that efforts had been made by him to comply with the affiliation order & the evidence showed that he had treated it with contempt & had paid not the slightest attention to its terms, an order of imprisonment was directed.—*WENCHOLA v. st. Imprisonment—Failure to pay aliment—Offer by father to maintain child in his home.—In an application under Civil Imprisonment (Scotland) Act, 1882, s. 4, by the mother of two illegitimate daughters for warrant to imprison the father, in respect of his failure to obtemper a charge proceeding upon a decree for payment of aliment until the children respectively attained fourteen years of age, the Sheriff, notwithstanding an offer by the father, a married man, to maintain the children, who were then over ten years of age, in his own home, granted warrant of imprisonment. The father, having sought to suspend the charge & warrant, the mother contended that his offer of maintenance should not be entertained, in respect that, under the decree for aliment which was still current, his obligation could only be discharged by money payments.—Held: (1) a father's option at common law to maintain his illegitimate child in his home, if a boy after the age of seven, & if a girl after the age of ten, was not excluded by the fact that at the date of such an offer of maintenance a decree against him for aliment was still current; (2) in view of the bond fide offer of maintenance here made, the complainant was not a person wilfully refusing to pay aliment within Civil Imprisonment (Scotland) Act, 1882, s. 4, & charge & warrant suspended.—MACDONALD v. DENNOON, [1929] S. C. 172.—SCOT.

sw. — Effect.—A filiation order under Child Welfare Act, C. A., 1924, c. 30, provided that, in the event of the accused failing to give the bond or making the cash payment required of him by the order, he should be committed to gaol for 12 months. On appealing from the order the accused, not wishing to go to gaol pending the hearing of the appeal, gave the bond provided for by sect. 68 (b) of said Act. His appeal was dismissed; & none of the directions of the filiation order having been complied with, his bondsmen delivered him into custody, & he was committed to gaol & served the prescribed term. An action was then brought by the mother on the bond given in respect to the appeal.—Held: the serving of the term of imprisonment did not satisfy his obligations on the filiation order & ptf. was held entitled to judgment; but she could not recover more than the amount presently in default under said order.—BOYAK v. KOBYLANSKI, [1929] 1 D. L. R. 867; 1 W. W. R. 364; 38 Man. L. R. 89.—CAN.

403a. — New evidence.—Complainant in an affiliation summons was a married woman who was not living apart from her husband at the material date, & an order on the evidence & on his own admission was made against one M. After the time for appealing against this order had expired, the rule in the present case was obtained on an affidavit by complainant's husband that he had cohabited with complainant at the material date & could have been the father of the child :—Held : the question of access or non-access was a question of fact for the justices, from which they were entitled to find that M. was the child's father; the ct. would not, in support of a rule for a certiorari, rehear a case upon further evidence on a disputed question of fact, & perform the functions of quarter sessions, to which, owing to lapse of time, an appeal could not be made.—*R. v. 400 li. — Irregularity or illegality in proceedings.—Illegitimate Children's Act, R.S.B.C. 1924 (c. 34), s. 10, gives the ct. power at the instance of a putative father to rescind or vary an order. He thus has a means of relief, & certiorari may in the discretion of the superior ct. be refused.—Dwyer v. BULMER, [1923] 1 D. L. R. 597; 39 Can. Crim. Cas. 182; 16 Sask. L. R. 13; [1923] 3 W. W. 401. — Refusal to vary or rescind order.—The magistrate has no discretion to refuse to hear an application, but after hearing it he may refuse to rescind or vary his order. If the magistrate refuses to hear the application, appet. is entitled to a prerogative writ of mandamus to compel him to do so.—Wheatley v. Howard, [1923] 3 D. L. R. 288; 2 W. W. R. 942.—CAN.

402. — *Notice of an appeal from an order of affiliation made under Child Welfare Act, C.A., 1924, c. 30, was given within 10 days of the making & date of the formal order. The judge had three days previously, & after the hearing, endorsed on the information an entry which included the words, "Remanded until Friday." "Affiliation order granted." At the adjourned sitting he made another such entry which repeated & supplemented the previous entry, & he then signed & dated the formal order. On the appeal, the county ct. judge held that said first entry constituted the order provided for in sect. 75 (b) of the Criminal Code, made applicable by sect. 70 of the Child Welfare Act, & sustained the preliminary objection that the notice of appeal had not been filed within 10 days "after the conviction or order." An application for mandamus was dismissed. On appeal therefrom :—Held : the appeal should be allowed & a mandamus issued as prayed for.—Danielson v. Thordarson, [1930] 3 W. W. 404. — At what place.—In a complaint under Children of Unmarried Parents Act, R.S.B.C. 1924 (c. 34), s. 7 (1), "the cause" of the complaint within Summary Offences Act, R.S.B.C. 1924 (c. 34), s. 77, is the seduction & not the birth of the child; & an appeal from the dismissal of the complaint is properly taken to the county ct. nearest the place where the seduction occurred.—Ferguson v.

408. — Compliance with order—Whether condition precedent to appeal.—It is not a condition precedent to the bringing of an appeal by a deft. from an order under Children of Unmarried Parents Act, 1924 (c. 34), as amended, that proof be furnished that he has complied with the terms of the order.—*Hynes v. The latter ct., however, is entitled to have regard to the nature of such evidence, once admitted, when considering whether the evidence submitted as corroborative may be regarded as such, its proper function on an appeal on a point of law being to determine whether there was evidence which was corroborative; & if there was such evidence, it is not for the Appellate Ct. but for the magistrate to determine whether or not the evidence satisfied him. Q. v. whether the Appellate Ct. on appeal on a point of law is entitled to treat as corroborative evidence not relied on by the magistrate as corroborative.—*Angon v. A prior appeal was dismissed because of lack of proof of a point going to the jurisdiction of the ct. :—Held : the time allowed by the Act for appealing not having expired, appet. had a right to serve another notice of appeal & properly prove his right to appeal.—*Hynes v. The judge dismissed the appeal. Appet. then moved in the King's Bench for a mandamus directing the county ct. judge to hear & determine the appeal. Donovan, J. refused the mandamus, & on appeal from his order :—Held : the appeal should be dismissed.—*R. was corroborated in some material particular by other evidence to the satisfaction of the justices, was a matter to be decided by the justices &, even if the other evidence did not corroborate the evidence of the mother, the justices had acted within their jurisdiction, & a writ of certiorari should not issue to quash their order.—*R. v. It was refused on the ground that Child Welfare Act, 1936, s. 65, now gives a right of appeal from the county ct. App't. then moved for a certificate that an appeal to the Ct. of Appeal was justified. It was objected that he was too late & that the time for appeal should not be extended:—Held: in view of the continuous effect of a filiation order & the fact that app't. had explained the delay & had at all times exhibited a bona fide intention to appeal, the time for so applying should be extended & the motion remitted.—R. v. OLEAVER, Re RAPER, [1937] 1 W. W. R. 557; 2 D. L. R. 557; 45 Man. L. R. 277; 68 Can. C. C. 55.—CAN.

On Feb. 8, 1921, the above-mentioned receiving order was rescinded. At the date of the assignment bkpt. was living apart from his wife, to whom he had agreed to pay maintenance at the rate of £10 per week, & judgment had been recovered by H. for $58 6s. 11d. for the board & lodging of bkpt.'s wife. On Feb. 8, 1921, a writ had been issued by bkpt.'s wife for arrears of maintenance due to her from bkpt. On Feb. 11, 1921, H. issued a bkpcy. notice in respect of her judgment & a petition was filed on Apr. 30, 1921. A receiving order was made on June 3, 1921, & debtor was adjudged bkpt. on June 20, 1921:—Held: on the facts the assignment was executed with the intent to defeat & delay creditors, & was therefore fraudulent & void as an act of bkpcy. under 1914 Act, s. 1 (1) (b).—*Re PRIOR, Ex p. - 596a. — In private company formed by debtor & his solicitor.—The transfer by a debtor of substantially the whole of his property, whether by way of charge or by way of sale, constitutes an act of bkpcy., if the necessary consequence of the transfer will be to defeat or delay his creditors. The bkpt. was carrying on an increasing business as a builder, but was in need of further capital. He had creditors for some £28,000, & in addition he owed B.'s bank about £6,500. In pursuance of an arrangement with L.'s bank, but without notice to any of the creditors, L.'s bank took over the bkpt.'s account from B.'s bank, paying off to B.'s bank the overdraft of £6,500; & a few days later, on Jan. 9, 1929, a private limited co. was formed of which the bkpt. & his solr. were the only directors. There was a contemporaneous agreement for sale to the co. of substantially the whole of the bkpt.'s assets for £17,000 to be satisfied by the issue to the bkpt. of 17,000 £1 shares, the co. undertaking to pay the bkpt.'s liabilities. On Jan. 14 the necessary assignments to the co. were executed, & a debenture for £12,500 was sealed in favour of L.'s bank. On Jan. 17 the bkpt.'s overdraft on L.'s bank was paid off by a transfer from a new account opened by L.'s bank in favour of the co. Upon the formation of the co. & the issue of the debenture becoming known, the bkpt.'s creditors began to press, & some of them were paid off in full. On Feb. 27, 1929, the bkpt. committed an act of bkpcy. by failing to comply with a bkpcy. notice.

On Mar. 8 a petition was presented, & on May 9 a receiving order was made, & adjudication followed on May 23. Upon a motion by the trustee for a declaration that the sale agreement of Jan. 9 was void by 1914 Act, s. 1 (1) (b), & for ancillary relief:—Held: (1) the agreement was a fraudulent transfer & an act of bkpcy., & the whole of the assets comprised therein formed part of the assets of the bkpt. divisible amongst his creditors, & as the trustee's title related back to the act of bkpcy. & overrode that of the co., the co. must account to the trustee for such of the assets as had come to the hands of the co. or of any person by the order or for the use of the co. The substitution in the place of a going business & substantial business assets of (a) shares in a private co. which has taken over the debtor's assets & liabilities, & (b) a right of action by the debtor against the co. on its covenant to discharge his liabilities must necessarily have the result of delaying creditors, & the substituted assets could not be treated as an equivalent which the creditors could reach as satisfactorily as the assets transferred; (2) 1914 Act, s. 45, protects only transactions which are bona fide; & as the knowledge of the bkpt. & his solr. of the facts which stamped it in law as a fraudulent transfer was the knowledge of the co., sect. 45 afforded no defence, even although the parties might have thought the transfer to be in the best interest of the creditors.—Re SIMMS, [1930] 2 Ch. 22; 99 L. 797a. Creditor who has assented to deed of arrangement—Deed void for want of registration.—On June 11, 1921, applt. co. recovered judgment against debtor for a certain sum & costs. On Apr. 18, 1922, debtor executed a document in the form of a memorandum of agreement by which he assigned his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. The agreement provided (inter alia) that it should not be registered either as a composition or deed of arrangement or otherwise & contained a schedule of creditors & their debts. At the date of the agreement there were five bkpcy. petitions pending against debtor by creditors other than applt. co. As a result of negotiations between debtor & the five creditors & in consideration of his entering into the agreement of Apr. 18, 1922, the five creditors agreed to the dismissal of their petitions & signed letters dated Apr. 17, 1922, which were all in the same form, & contained a statement that it was understood that it was not intended to register the agreement as a deed of arrangement, by which they respectively agreed that so long as debtor complied with the terms of the agreement of Apr. 18, 1922, they would not bring any action against him in respect of their scheduled debts or attempt to set aside the agreement. On July 18, 1922, applt. co. signed a letter of assent in the same terms, which was also dated Apr. 17, 1922, & agreed to hand it over to debtor on receiving from him a promissory note or bill of exchange of a third party for £300. This condition debtor performed. The letter was not, however, handed over to debtor owing to the refusal by him to pay to applt. co. an agreed sum for costs, a term which the ct. held formed no part of the original bargain. Applt. co. subsequently issued a bkpcy. notice against debtor founded on its judgment debt. The registrar set the bkpcy. notice aside on the ground that applt. co. was bound by the agreement contained in the letter signed by it. On appeal:—Held: (1) the agreement of Apr. 18, 1922, being a deed of arrangement, was void for want of registration under 1914 (Deeds) Act, & the letter of assent, being an assent to a void instrument, was also itself void; (2) as debtor & all the creditors who assented to the agreement knew from the terms of the instrument itself & from the statement contained in the letters signed by them that the agreement was void, & there was no representation that the agreement was valid, there was no question of estoppel, & applt. co. was not estopped from issuing the bkpcy. notice.—Re A BANKRUPTCY NOTICE, [1924] 2 Ch. 76; 93 L. The judgment was duly registered in this country in accordance with the Foreign Judgments (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act, 1933. The creditor then caused a bkpcy. notice to be served upon the debtor. It was contended that the words of sect. 4 of the Act were not wide enough to provide for the enforcement of the judgment by bkpcy. proceedings:—Held: (1) the Act of 1933 places a foreign judgment, when registered for the purposes of a bkpcy. notice, in the same position as a final judgment of an English ct.; (2) the fact that the words of the Bkpcy. Act, 1914, s. 1 (g), taken by themselves, would exclude such a judgment does not have the result of preventing a foreign judgment, when registered, from becoming the basis of a bkpcy. notice.—Re JUDGMENT DEBTOR (No. 2176 OF 1938),

The bkpcy. notice required compliance with its provisions within seven days :—Held : (1) the case was not one in which an order for substituted service ought to have been made, as it was improbable in the circumstances that the service of the notice would come to the knowledge of the debtor within the time limited by the notice for compliance with its requirements; (2) the debtor's solrs. were not sufficient agents for receiving the notice, as it was for the debtor himself & not his solrs. to decide within the seven days whether he would pay the debt.—Re JUDGMENT DEBTOR (No. 1539 of 1936), [1937] Ch. 187; 106 L. A bkpcy. notice was issued against him on Aug. 24, 1936, & an order for substituted service of this notice was made on Aug. 27, 1936. The affidavit in support of the application for substituted service stated that on Aug. 24 a clerk to the solrs. for the petitioning creditor, having been informed that the debtor's solrs. could not facilitate service of the bkpcy. notice, had attended at the house above mentioned to serve the debtor, but had been unable to obtain a reply; that a registered letter addressed to the debtor at the same house had been sent on the same day; & that the clerk had attended at the house again on Aug. 27 & had been unable to obtain a reply. The affidavit did not state that the debtor was not within the jurisdiction, nor that service by post would not reach him, nor that there was any reason to think that the house mentioned was the place at which the debtor would be found:—Held: the affidavit was not one on which an order for substituting service ought properly to have been made.—*Re DE CESPEDES, DEBTOR v. Debtors paid a sum of £100, including £5 for costs, nine days later, but in the belief that the notice would be disputed the creditors issued & served a fresh bkpcy. notice about two months later for £857, & that notice not having been complied with within seven days, a petition based on the fresh bkpcy. notice was presented & served. Debtors gave notice of an application to set aside service of the petition, but the registrar refused to do so, & made a receiving order on the fresh bkpcy. notice:—Held: (1) debtors could not refuse to comply with the fresh bkpcy. notice on the ground that as the previous notice had resulted in an act of bkpcy. this had put it out of the power of debtors to make any payment in compliance with the fresh notice or otherwise deal with their property; (2) if they did make a payment in compliance with the fresh notice it might be that if a trustee were appointed under the previous bkpcy. notice the payment might be set aside, & the money made available for the general body of creditors.—Re

929a. — Onus of proof.]—(1) Before the war, the creditors, a Polish firm, sold to the debtors, an Austrian firm, trading in East Africa, certain cotton goods. The period of credit had not expired on the outbreak of the war; but the debtors being enemy nationals were interned & their African business & property was lost to them. After the war they had a claim against the German Govt., but had then become nationals of Czechoslovakia. In 1924 the debtors returned to East Africa, & in the same year the creditors sued them in Vienna & obtained judgment against them. In 1925 the debtors obtained an award from the Mixed German Czechoslovak Arbitral Tribunal against the German State for a large sum & in the same year the creditors obtained an attachment on the "alleged debtors' claim against the Reich Settling Office." In 1932 the creditors obtained judgment for their debt in Kenya & in 1933 they caused the debtors to be served with two bkpcy. notices. The bkpcy. law in Kenya on this point is the same as in England under 1914 Act. The debtors sought to have the orders set aside on the ground that by attaching the award in Germany the creditors had prevented them satisfying the judgment:—Held: the onus was on the debtors to prove affirmatively that the claim in respect of which the bkpcy. notice was issued could & would have been paid but for some act or omission of the creditor & they had entirely failed to prove any such case.

(2) It was contended that the attachment orders in Berlin were a form of execution & it was, therefore, improper to issue the bkpcy. notices:—Held: the attachment orders were not a form of execution & could not be an execution upon the Kenya decree obtained after the orders. The attachment orders having proved abortive, were not a bar to the issue of the notices.

(3) In Kenya the procedure in execution follows the Indian Code, & arrest & imprisonment is the normal form of execution. There being some evidence of means & that the debtors had refused to pay some part of the debt when they had the means to pay, a receiving order was made in lieu of committal:—Held: the order was rightly made as the English decisions under the Debtors Act, 1869, did not apply.—*BRACIA CZECHOWICZKA v. —In a pending action in the Chancery Div. a debtor claimed a declaration that he was entitled to a charge on the proceeds of certain property in the hands of trustees in priority to the creditor. In a subsequent action in the K. B. D. brought by the creditor against the debtor in respect of a different transaction the creditor obtained judgment in respect of which he issued a bkpcy. notice. On an application by the debtor under sect. 1 (1) (g), of 1914 Act, to have the bkpcy. notice set aside:—Held: the claim in the Chancery action was not a "counterclaim, set-off or cross-demand" within the sub-sect., & was not therefore a ground for setting aside the bkpcy. notice.—Re BANKRUPTCY NOTICE (No. 171 of 1934), [1934] Ch. 431; 103 L. 940b. Affidavit filed by debtor—Day fixed for hearing—Form of order.]

—Rule 140, sub-r. 2, provides that there shall be endorsed on every bkpcy. notice an intimation to the debtor that if he has a counterclaim, set-off, or cross demand which equals or exceeds the amount of the judgment debt, & which he could not have set up in the action in which the judgment or order was obtained, he must within the time specified in the notice file an affidavit to that effect with the Registrar. Rule 141 provides that the filing of "such affidavit" shall operate as an application to set aside the bkpcy. notice & then states the procedure to be followed.

On May 25, 1934, judgment creditors for £2,727 issued a bkpcy. notice against the judgment debtor. On May 31 the debtor filed an affidavit in which he alleged that he had a cross demand for two sums amounting together to £1,500. The Registrar marked the application "Fix a day—Motion—No Stay," & appointed June 28 for the hearing. A stay having been refused, the act of bkpcy. became complete on June 4, & on June 5 the judgment creditors presented a bkpcy. petition founded on that act of bkpcy. On June 21 the debtor's application was dismissed & on June 28 a receiving order was made. On appeal by the debtor:—Held: receiving order was properly made; there had been no compliance by the debtor with r. 140, as the affidavit on the face of it showed that the cross demand did not equal or exceed the amount of the judgment debt, & therefore the procedure provided by r. 141 for dealing with a bkpcy. notice did not come into operation, & the case must be treated as if no affidavit under r. 140 had in fact been filed. Also, the Registrar, if he thought, as he appeared to have done, that the affidavit did not satisfy r. 140, ought to have marked the application "Affidavit not sufficient—No case raised" & not to have taken seisin of the matter.—*Re DEBTOR, Ex p. The creditors proceeded against the debtor, alleging that he had committed an act of bkpcy. under 1914 Act, s. 1 (1) (h). A receiving order having been made, the debtor appealed:—Held: (1) the statements made by the debtor were not a mere discussion of his affairs, but a "notice" to his creditors that he had suspended or was about to suspend payment within the sect.; (2) the debtor being in England, there being creditors in England, & the jurisdiction here being undoubted, it was not necessary to suspend the making of a receiving order here. This order not being complied with, on Mar. 8, 1937, the ct. ordered the debtor to pay the £2,000 to petitioner in the divorce proceedings (who was the petitioning creditor in these proceedings), upon the joint undertaking of petitioner & his solr. to abide the decision of the ct. as to its ultimate application. The debtor failed to comply with this order, & a further order was made on Nov. 1, 1937, in the following terms: "That the co-resp. do within seven days after the service of this order pay to petitioner the sum of £1,000, part of the sum of £2,000 the amount of damages assessed herein." Act of bankruptcy unconnected with deed of arrangement.—On Jan. 6, 1939, the debtor gave notice to the petitioning creditors that he was about to suspend payment of his debts, but said nothing about any intention of executing a deed of assignment, nor, in fact, had he then any such intention. On Jan. 9, the debtor, at the suggestion of the trustee thereof, executed a deed of assignment. At a meeting of creditors, a resolution empowering the trustee to act under the deed was passed by a majority. The petitioning creditors did not vote on the resolution, & later, moved a resolution in favour of bkpcy. proceedings which was not carried. They then filed a petn. based upon the notice of suspension of payment on Jan. 6. The petitioning creditors later received orders for goods from the trustee, & executed the same & received payment for the goods so supplied. The petn. was signed in the firm's name by a partner, & at the hearing, the registrar allowed an amendment whereby the signature of one partner was inserted:—Held: (1) the amendment of the petn. was properly allowed; (2) the conduct of the petitioning creditors prevented them from relying upon the execution of the deed of assignment as an action of bkpcy., although it did not amount to an assent to the deed; (3) any acts done in reference to the deed could not estop the petitioning creditors from relying upon the earlier act of bkpcy.; (4) the notice of suspension had no connection with the subsequent execution of the deed of assignment & could, therefore, be relied upon as a separate act of bkpcy.—Re DEBTOR (No. 23 of 1939), *DEBTOR v. The agent neither assented nor dissented, but stated that he must consult his principal, & expressly reserved his right to take bkpcy. proceedings. On Nov. 30, he wrote to the trustee under the deed saying he was not satisfied with the debtor's affairs, & that he still reserved his right to take steps in bkpcy. The trustee in reply asked him if he intended to proceed in bkpcy. to do so at once in order to save trouble & expense. No further communication was made to the trustee till after the filing of the petition on Jan. 27, 1902. The petition was dismissed on the authority of *Re Carr; Ex p. cence or unexplained delay. The case of Re Carr; Ex p. Jacobs, No. 1178a, only applies to the case of a petitioning creditor who has been "sitting on the rail."—Re DAY, Ex p. HAMMOND (1902), 86 L. T. 238; 50 W. R. 448; 18 T. L. R. 442; 46 Sol. Jo. 361, D. O.

At this meeting J., the secretary of S., Ltd., one of the creditors, & N., solr. for S., Ltd., were present, but they did not vote upon the resolutions, & expressed themselves dissatisfied with the deed. Subsequently S., Ltd., on being requested to assent to the deed, notified the trustee on Sept. 2 that they declined to assent; & on Oct. 18 they presented a petition against B., alleging as the act of bkpcy. the deed of July 22:—Held: (1) there had been no assent, express or implied, on the part of the petitioning creditors, such as to disentitle them to set up the deed as an available act of bkpcy., upon which a petition could be founded; (2) in view of the decision in Re Day, Ex p. Hammond, No. 1177b, the case of Re Carr; Ex p. Jacobs, No. 1178a, could no longer be relied upon as an authority for the proposition that an unexplained delay in presenting a petition might amount to acquiescence in a deed.—Re BEESLEY (1913), 109 L. NEWBURYS, LTD.* (1926), 95 L. J. Ch. 199; [1926] B. & C. R. 23.

1177e. ——— —].—If in bkpcy. proceedings the execution of a deed of assignment is relied on by a creditor as an act of bkpcy. by a debtor & as a ground for the making of a receiving order, the ct. may dismiss the petition & refuse to grant the petitioning creditor relief if it appears that he was himself a participator or sharer in bringing the deed into existence.

At a meeting of the creditors of a debtor, it was suggested that a deed of arrangement should be entered into by the debtor. One of the creditors, who was present throughout the proceedings, acquiesced in the proposal that his own name should be added to those to serve on the proposed committee of inspection, & in this sense he took part in the procedure which led up to the execution of the deed:—Held: the fact that the petitioning creditor himself took part in the proceedings which led up to the execution of the deed, constituted a sufficient cause within sect. 5 (3) of 1914 Act, for dismissing the petition for a receiving order & that a receiving order made by the registrar of the county ct. must be discharged.—Re DEBTOR (No. 11 of 1935), [1936] Ch. 165; 105 L. J. Ch. 146; 154 L. T. 397; sub nom. Re DEBTOR, Ex p. DEBTOR v. PETITIONING CREDITOR & OFFICIAL RECEIVER (No. 11 of 1935), [1934-5] B. & C. R. 322, D. C.

1177i. ———.—]—A petitioning creditor, who has in any way assented to, recognised or approved of a deed of assignment by a debtor, cannot afterwards allege that the execution of the deed constitutes an act of bkpcy. When therefore a petitioning creditor has—while not directly assenting to the execution by a debtor of a deed of assignment in favour of creditors—at a meeting of creditors & subsequently, in reply to a letter in which he was asked to confirm what had been said at the meeting, intimated that he would not do anything to upset the deed, but would wait & see what happened, he must be taken to have expressed his approval & recognition of the deed, & the ct. therefore will refuse to allow him to take advantage of the execution of the deed as an act of bkpcy. on which a petition can be founded. In such a case there is “sufficient cause” within the meaning of sect. 5 (3) of 1914 Act for not making an order.—Re DEBTOR (No. 5 of 1936), [1936] Ch. 728; 105 L. J. 1177g. ———.—]—At a full meeting of the creditors of a debtor held on Apr. 4, 1938, it was proposed & seconded that the debtor be asked to execute a deed of assignment to two named persons as trustees for the benefit of his creditors. Thereupon the representative of certain creditors, being a minority of those present, moved an amendment to substitute a nominee of theirs for one of the proposed trustees, but as that amendment was not seconded it fell to the ground. The chairman put the substantive proposal to the meeting & a large number of those present voted for it; he next asked for those against it, but no hand was raised; & he accordingly declared the proposal carried without opposition. A proposal that a committee of inspection should be appointed was also carried without opposition. The deed of assignment was thereupon duly executed. At the close of the meeting the representative of the minority creditors asked the chairman to record his objection. On May 13, 1938, the minority creditors presented a petn. for a receiving order against the debtor on the ground that by executing the deed he had committed an act of bkpcy. The register in bkpcy. made a receiving order. On appeal.—Held: the petitioning creditors by their conduct had tacitly acquiesced in the making of the deed & become bound by it along with the other creditors, & they could not, therefore, rely upon it as an act of bkpcy.; the case was one in which, under Bkpcy. Act, 1914, s. 5 (3), the ct. should be satisfied for sufficient cause no receiving order ought to be made; & the receiving order should be rescinded & the petn. dismissed.—Re DEBTOR (No. 382 of 1938), Ex p. DEBTOR v. His trading was not prosperous & new debts were incurred. On Feb. 21, 1924, he executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors generally & a circular letter with a form of assent was sent to & received by petitioning creditors, who were new creditors. On Feb. 25, 1924, their director with their accountant attended the office of one of the trustees under the deed & suggested that they or some other new creditor should be represented on the committee of inspection. Petitioning creditors were then invited to attend the meeting of the committee on Mar. 26, 1924, & their director & their solr. attended accordingly, discussing & advising on certain matters. Petitioning creditors, however, refused to assent to the deed & presented a petition in bkpcy. grounded upon the execution of the deed as an act of bkpcy.: —Held: on the facts, petitioning creditors had so far recognised the deed as to preclude them from availing themselves of its execution as an act of bkpcy.—Re A DEBTOR, Ex p. PETITIONING CREDITORS (No. 24 of 1924) (1924), 94 L. 1334 iii. —.—Position of sisted creditor.—A creditor who had petitioned to sequestration of the estates of his debtor proposed to abandon his petition before sequestration had been awarded. Another creditor thereupon lodged a minute craving to be sisted as a party to the petition. The Lord Ordinary sisted him, & six weeks later, on his petition, granted sequestration. Vouchers admittedly sufficient to substantiate the creditor's debt, were exhibited to the Lord Ordinary before he granted sequestration, & were subsequently lodged in process, but these particular vouchers had not been produced when the creditor was sisted. Thereafter the debtor presented a petition for recall of the sequestration on the ground that the proceedings were ab initio void, in respect that the sisted creditor had not fulfilled the statutory procedure for obtaining sequestration laid down in Bkpcy. (Scotland) Act, 1913, s. 30, in that he had failed timely to lodge in process the necessary evidence of his debt:—Held: a creditor craving to be sisted in terms of Bkpcy. (Scotland) Act, 1913, s. 33, as petitioner to a petition for sequestration did not need to follow out the statutory procedure prescribed by sect. 30 as essential in the case of an original petitioner, it being sufficient if such sisted creditor, before the award of sequestration was made, satisfied the Lord Ordinary as to the existence of his debt.—*STEWART v. Debtor claiming indemnity—As surety for contingent liability of petitioning creditor.]—Petitioning co., of which debtor was formerly chairman, had lent debtor a large sum of money, & recovered judgment against him (on balance of account) for £2,065. A receiving order was made in the county ct. from which debtor appealed, alleging that he had become surety for the co. for their bank overdraft with a limit of £5,000, & that he was entitled to be indemnified against this liability. No payment had been made by debtor on account of the bank overdraft. At a creditors' meeting the creditors were of opinion that debtor was insolvent & there was no alternative but bkpcy. :—Held: on the facts, petitioning creditors' obligation to indemnify debtor as surety in respect of his contingent liability for a debt due from petitioning creditors to a bank did not constitute "sufficient cause" for the dismissal of the petition.—Re A DEBTOR (No. 13 of 1922), Ex p. THE DEBTOR, [1923] B. & C. 1483c. Petition by moneylender—Tender of all sums due except postponed interest.]—Petitioners, who were moneylenders, presented a bkpcy. petition against the debtor. In their petition the claim was stated to be in respect of specified sums due on two promissory notes & interest at 5 per cent. The claim further stated " & we also have a claim for interest on the said two promissory notes which is postponed interest under sect. 9 (1) of Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21)." On the petition coming before the Registrar the debtor tendered to the petitioning creditors the principal due on the promissory notes with 5 per cent. interest but not the postponed interest. This tender was refused, & the Registrar made a receiving order against the debtor. On appeal:—Held: under sect. 9 (1) of Moneylenders Act, 1927 (c. 21), the right of a moneylender to recover interest in excess of 5 per cent. was not destroyed but merely postponed for the purposes mentioned in the sub-sect. The tender made by the debtor did not include the whole sum which the moneylenders might ultimately recover, as it did not include the postponed interest which they might receive in the event of the other creditors being paid in full. They were therefore justified in refusing the tender & the receiving order was rightly made.—Re DEBTOR (No. 231 of 1936), [1937] Ch. 181; 106 L. J. Ch. 189; 63 T. L. R. 108; 80 Sol. nection with the underwriting of shares by a co. in which the friend was interested. The cheque was dishonoured & judgment obtained against debtor for £500 & £14 6s. costs. In Dec. 1926, the judgment creditors petitioned for a receiving order against debtor in respect of the judgment debt. From time to time arrangements were made for adjourning the petition, but in Mar. 1927, the petitioning creditors intimated that the conditions on which they would agree to the petition being dismissed were that debtor should pay £100 & provide a guarantee for payment of the balance of the debt & also agree to pay to them the costs of their proceedings against the underwriters as between solr. & client, & the costs of their proceedings against debtor, also as between solr. & client. Payment of the costs of proceedings against the underwriters was refused, but payment by debtor of solr. & client costs was agreed to, & sums of £50 & £144 were paid & the petition dismissed. In July petitioners again commenced proceedings for a receiving order in respect of a sum ascertained by deducting from the original debt & interest & costs as between solr. & client the payments of £50 & £144. A receiving order having been made:—Held: the acts of petitioners in seeking to obtain payment of their costs in the proceedings against the underwriters & in obtaining payment by debtor of their solr. & client costs amounted to extortion & an abuse of the process of the ct., & the case fell within 1914 Act, s. 5 (3), as being one where the ct. was satisfied that for sufficient cause no receiving order ought to be made, & the receiving order must be discharged.—Re Debtor (No. 883 of 1927), [1928] Ch. 199; 97 L. 1548a. ——— Power to make charging order on balance of funds in court.]—A debtor, against whom a receiving order had been made, paid money into ct. to satisfy his debts in full. The receiving order was then rescinded by an order which directed the official receiver, after paying the debts & deducting his costs, charges & expenses, to pay the balance in his hands to debtor. A subsequent unsatisfied judgment creditor applied to the registrar in bkpcy. for a charging order upon the balance of the funds in the hands of the official receiver:—Held: (1) the registrar had jurisdiction to make the order; (2) the registrar's jurisdiction was derived through the jurisdiction of the judge of the High Ct. to whom for the time being bkpcy. matters were assigned exercising his bkpcy. jurisdiction.—*Re PRIOR, Ex p. 1552a. ——— Receiving order discharged subject to condition—Condition not fulfilled—Rescission of discharging order.]—Debtor, a barrister, was entitled on the death of his mother to a vested remainder in tail of considerable value. His mother was seventy-five. The petition was filed on July 19, 1923. His present indebtedness amounted to about £6,000 & negotiations for a loan for that amount with an insurance co. had been going on since July 16, 1923. Owing to a delay in raising this loan, the registrar had made a receiving order on Nov. 21, 1923, from which debtor appealed; & upon debtor undertaking during the interval necessary to raise the loan, to insure his life immediately, i.e. from Dec. 1, 1923, to Jan. 1, 1924, in order that, in the event of his death during that period, the unsecured creditors might be safeguarded, the Ct. of Appeal allowed the appeal, discharged the receiving order & dismissed the petition without prejudice to another petition being presented if the loan was not carried through & petitioning creditors' debt not paid on or before Jan. 1, 1924. Up to Dec. 20, debtor had not insured his life pursuant to his undertaking & petitioning creditors then moved to commit debtor for contempt. The Ct. of Appeal allowed debtor three hours within which to insure his life, & a certificate being produced showing that this had been done, the ct. made no order except that debtor should pay the creditors' costs. Subsequently debtor having again broken his undertaking by not completing the insurance on his life, the Ct. of Appeal rescinded their order, with the result that the receiving order stood as originally made by the registrar.—*Re A DEBTOR, Ex p. 1552b. ——— From order restoring adjudication order—To House of Lords without leave of Court of Appeal.]—Applt. was adjudicated a bkpt. on Aug. 22, 1932. On Oct. 24, 1932, the Ct. of Appeal allowed an appeal from the order of adjudication upon certain terms, & ordered that the application for adjudication be adjourned. One of the terms not having been complied with applt. moved the Ct. of Appeal to vary its order, but on Feb. 10, 1933, the Ct. of Appeal rescinded its order of Oct. 24, 1932, & restored the order of adjudication so as to have effect from Aug. 22, 1932. The Ct. of Appeal refused applt. leave to appeal from its order of Feb. 10, 1933. Nevertheless he appealed, & the objection was taken that under sect. 108 (2) (b) of Bkpcy. Act, 1914, the appeal was not competent, as it was an appeal "in bkpcy. matters" & leave to appeal had been refused. The order of Feb. 10, 1933, purported to be made "in bkpcy. matters" & applt. so treated it in his petition of appeal to the House of Lords. The cts. having jurisdiction in bkpcy., which under sect. 108 (1) of 1914 Act might review, rescind, or vary any order made by them under their bankruptcy jurisdiction, were by sect. 96 confined to the High Ct. & county cts., & it was alleged that therefore the Ct. of Appeal had no power to exercise that jurisdiction of reviewing, rescinding, or varying its order:—Held: if the order was a complete nullity the House could not deal with it, but if it were to be regarded as an order of the Ct. of Appeal it fell within the provisions of sect. 108 (2) (b), which expressly limited the jurisdiction of the House in respect of orders made "in bkpcy. matters" where leave to appeal had been refused by the Ct. of Appeal. Appeal dismissed as incompetent.—HARMAN v. OFFICIAL RECEIVER, PETITIONING CREDITORS & TRUSTEE, [1934] A. C. 245; 103 L. J. Ch. 158; 150 L. T. 501; 50 T. L. R. 238; 78 Sol. Jo. 192; [1934] B. & C. Pltf. herein, a judgment creditor of deft., applied to the judge in Bkpcy. for leave to proceed to obtain an order committing deft. to gaol for non-compliance with an order directing him to pay a monthly sum on account of pltf.'s judgment. The day before the application deft. made an assignment in bkpcy. The application was opposed by deft. through his solr., & also by the custodian:—Held: the judge had exercised a proper discretion in refusing to grant leave to proceed.—

1571a. On equitable assignment.]—A., a builder, was in 1937 engaged in certain building operations. From time to time he had been financed by one W. in these transactions; the arrangement being that W. should guarantee with A.'s bank his overdraft at that bank & make him small cash advances from time to time. Part of the arrangement entered into was to the effect that all moneys received by A. for houses erected by him or arising on a mtge. transaction in connection with houses erected should be paid over to a certain firm of solrs. originally acting as solrs. for W., who were to act also for A. The solrs.—after certain deductions—were to pay the balance to the credit of W.'s account at his own bank, which was then to be applied by W. in reduction of A.'s overdraft at his bank in relief of W.'s guarantee. A., having completed the houses, mtgd. them to a building society. The solrs. received the amount advanced &, after making various payments & deductions out of the sum so received under the terms of the arrangement, were left with a balance of £963 9s. 3d. in their hands. On Monday, Mar. 15, 1937, before 11 a.m., they paid this amount by cheque to the credit of W.'s banking account. On the same day, but some hours later, after the time of payment to the bank, a receiving order was made against A., & on Mar. 18, 1937, he was adjudicated a bkpt. Neither W. nor the solrs. had any notice of the fact that bkpcy.

proceedings were pending at the time when the moneys were received by the solrs. nor when they were dealt with by them. The trustee in bkpcy. having applied in the county ct. by motion for an order that this sum of £963 9s. 3d. formed part of the bkpt's estate, it was ordered that W., the resp. to the motion, should pay over this sum to him as trustee. From this decision W. appealed :—Held : (1) the judge was wrong in holding that the moneys were the bkpt. A.'s own property to deal with as he wished. The arrangement between A. & W. constituted a good equitable assignment of the moneys so received, & hence could not be dealt with otherwise than in accordance with the arrangement between A. & W. The moneys were not the property of the bkpt. A., & the payment into W.'s account by the solrs. could not be impeached; (2) as regards the time of paying in, namely before the receiving order was actually made but on the same day, a question arose on the true meaning of the words in the proviso (i) to sect. 45 of 1914 Act : "that the payment . . . takes place before the date of the receiving order." The result of the authorities on this question showed that in cases of competition in point of time between a judicial & a non-judicial act, the rule that the judicial act should be given precedence must prevail, & the application of the rule therefore gave precedence to the judicial act. The making of the receiving order (being a judicial act) must therefore in accordance with the rule be referred back to the earliest moment of the day of Mar. 15, 1937, & the actual payment into the bank (being a non-judicial act) could not be treated as having been made before it.—*Re WARREN, Ex p. 1894a. — Duty to recover statutory debt.]—

In 1919 debtor paid deft., a bookmaker, various cheques for bets lost on horse racing, & these cheques were cleared through various banks, as holders. On Aug. 30, 1920, debtor was adjudicated bkpt. & on Mar. 30, 1921, his trustee in bkpcy. by the direction of his committee of inspection, commenced an action to recover £955, the amount admitted to be due, if recoverable. The action was transferred to the judge in bkpcy. under Bkpcy. Rules, 1915, r. 123. Deft. took the point that such an action ought not to be brought by an officer of the ct., as the claim, however legal, was practically dishonest, & that all cts. must apply the rule in Re Condon, Ex p. James, No. 80, ante:—Held: the claim the trustee in bkpcy. was seeking to enforce was in respect of a debt which under Gaming Act, 1835 (c. 41), s. 2, & the decision of the House of Lords in Sutters v. Briggs (see GAMING & WAGERING, Vol. XXV., p. 418, No. 213), was a statutory debt, & there was nothing in Re Condon, Ex p. James, or in any of the cases in which the rule in that case had been followed, which entitled the ct. to say that if & when a right of action in respect of such a debt vested in a trustee in bkpcy., it was a dishonest or dishonourable thing for him as an officer of the ct. to enforce it, & judgment for the trustee in bkpcy. must be entered in the action for the amount claimed.—*SCRANTON'S TRUSTEE v. 1894b. — Duty to act equitably—Recovery of money paid to bankrupt with approval of official receiver.]—On June 26, 1924, a receiving order was made against W. on a petition presented on May 25, 1924, in respect of an act of bkpcy. on May 1, 1924. W. was a promoter of boxing contests & had in view at the date of the presentation of the petition boxing competitions, one of which was held at the Stadium, Wembley, on Aug. 9, 1924. He appealed against the receiving order, & pending that appeal the receiving order was not gazetted. His appeal having failed it was then gazetted on July 29, 1924. At an interview between W., his solr., the solr. for the Wembley authorities & A., the assistant official receiver, who under Bkpcy. Rules, 1915, r. 316, represented the official receiver, A. was told of the proposed boxing contest & the judge held on the evidence that at the interview W. told A. he desired notwithstanding the receiving order to be allowed to stage the contest as the only hope of providing assets to meet the claims of his creditors, & that it was arranged he could do so without any interference by the official receiver, on W. undertaking not to use the proceeds of the sale of tickets for his private purposes but only for discharging the expenses of the staging of the contest & to hand over any balance to the official receiver. On that arrangement being made W. proceeded with the negotiations for the contest & an agreement was executed by which he gave the Wembley authorities the right to collect all moneys paid for tickets at the turnstiles, & they were to have those moneys as a security for the payment by W. for the use of the Stadium. Various ticket agents paid W. for blocks of tickets to be sold by them to the public. The contest, which was held at the Stadium on Aug. 9, 1924, only realised after payment of all expenses £730 which W. paid to the official receiver. On Sept. 6, 1924, W. was adjudicated bkpt., & on Sept. 9, S. was appointed trustee in the bkpcy. On a motion by S. to recover from the various ticket agents all sums paid by them since the date of the receiving order to W. for tickets they had bought from him & to recover the money collected by the Wembley authorities at the turnstiles:—Held: A. had power to give his sanction to W.'s receipt of the proceeds of the sale of tickets to be applied by him in discharging expenses & the trustee in bkpcy. was bound by the sanction so given, but even if he were not so bound & even if A. exceeded his powers the trustee could not take the benefit of W.'s activities without accepting their burden, & the payment to W. of the moneys which the trustee claimed, being the direct result of the leave obtained by W. from A. to stage the boxing contests, it would be inequitable & unjust to make resps. pay these moneys over again for the benefit of W.'s creditors & to hold that the charge given to the Wembley authorities was nugatory.—Re WILSON, Ex p. SALAMAN, [1926] Ch. 21; 95 L. J. Ch. 58; 133 L. T. 814; 70 Sol. Jo. 65; [1925] B. & C. R. 96.

1894c. — Extent of duty.]—G. contracted with M. & Co. that they should build upon his land four greenhouses at a price of approximately £1,100, with the proviso that he was not to be bound by such contract unless he obtained a loan sufficient to meet his obligation under the contract. M. & Co. introduced G. to the Agricultural Mtge. Corp., & a sufficient loan by the Corp. to G. was arranged.

The work having been carried out to the satisfaction of all parties, M. & Co. wrote to the Corp. requesting payment by them of the £1,153 14s., & the Corp. expressed their willingness to pay M. & Co. upon receipt of G.'s permission. M. & Co. sent a form of permission to G. for his signature, but on the very day of its arrival a receiving order was made against G. The trustee in G.'s bkpcy. was able to sell the land at an enhanced price by virtue of the presence on it of the four greenhouses. M. & Co. then sought to restrain the trustee from dividing $1,153 14s., part of the proceeds of sale of the said land among the creditors generally & claimed the said sum for themselves in full:—Held: as M. & Co. at the date of the receiving order had no right to receive the loan from the Corp'n. without the consent of G., the said sum was divisible between the general creditors. The facts did not warrant the application of the doctrine of Re Condon, Ex p. James, No. 1889, as M. & Co. by their own failure to obtain a charge to secure their debt were in the position of unsecured creditors.—*Re GOZZETT, Ex p. MESSENGER & CO., LTD. v. 1909a. Debtor's accountant.]—A receiving order having been made on his own petition against a debtor, who had not previously committed an act of bkpcy., the creditors elected as trustee in bkpcy. an accountant whose firm had acted for him for several years, receiving money & making payments on his behalf. The firm had submitted a proof of debt in the bkpcy. for a sum of £112 11s. for professional services rendered to the debtor & a cash account of receipts amounting to £415 5s. 5d. & disbursements amounting to £415 14s., including two items for their fees. The Board of Trade, without attacking the character of the accountant, objected to his appointment under sect. 19 (2) of 1914 Act. & notified their objection to the High Ct. under sect. 19 (3):—Held: (1) the ct. had to determine, not whether in all the circumstances it would be best to permit the proposed trustee to act or whether he would in fact act impartially, but whether he was a person whose relation to the bkpt. or his estate would make it difficult for him to act with impartiality; (2) the proposed trustee being an accounting party who, if the account for services rendered were not allowed in full, might have to make payments to the estate, the Board of Trade had satisfied the ct. that there were proper grounds for the objection.—*Re BEALE (R. A trustee is entitled to apply to the ct. for directions under sect. 79 (5) as to whether a meeting ought to be called or not in compliance with a requisition of creditors to convene it.

At the request of deft., the trustee in bkpcy. carried on the business, & deft. entered into a guarantee to secure the estate against loss. The business was run at a loss, & the present action was brought by the trustee on the guarantee:—Held: (1) the trustee in bkpcy. was not merely carrying on the business so far as was necessary for its beneficial winding up, & was therefore carrying it on contrary to the provisions of Bkpcy. Act, 1914, s. 56 (1); (2) this was no defence to the guarantor, as it was only a creditor who could impeach the transaction; (3) the contract of guarantee was not void as being contrary to public policy; (4) there was sufficient consideration moving from the trustee to support the contract, because, if the business were carried on, a profit might be made; (5) the guarantee was therefore enforceable, & the action succeeded.—*CLARK v. 2293a. — Holder of proxy from company.]—At the date of the receiving order the bkpt. had on deposit with a bank certain preference & ordinary shares which had been deposited by him by way of security for a loan. A creditor for a large sum of money, a limited co., was appointed one of the members of the committee of inspection in the bkpcy. The co., being unable to act personally, appointed applt., who was its chairman, to act as its general proxy on the committee. In the course of the bkpcy. the applt., whilst so acting, purchased some of the deposited shares from the bank without any knowledge that the person who had deposited the shares was the bkpt. & that the equity of redemption in them formed part of his estate. Applt. subsequently sold some of these shares:—Held: applt. must in the circumstances of the case be treated as a member of the committee of inspection & was therefore in a fiduciary relation to the bkpt.'s estate. He was therefore precluded on general equitable principles from entering into the present transaction, which was therefore void against the trustee in bkpcy. As, however, the transaction was entered into by applt. in ignorance that the shares formed part of the bkpt.'s estate, the Ct., whilst ordering him to hand over to the trustee in bkpcy. the shares retained by him (subject to his lien for the price paid by him), would not order him to replace the shares sold by him but would be content to require him to account for the purchase money actually received for the shares which he had resold.

The validity of the appointment of a limited co. as a member of a committee of inspection doubted.—Re BULMER, Ex p. GREAVES, [1937] Ch. 499; *sub nom. Re BULMER, GREAVES v. 2902a. ———.]—By marriage articles in 1914, made between husband & wife & three trustees, it was agreed that, after the intended marriage, an indenture of settlement should be executed & that the husband would bring into settlement all property to which he then was or thereafter might become entitled, to be held, subject to life interests in favour of husband & wife, upon trusts to be mutually agreed between the trustees of the settlement. It was further agreed that the first trustees of the settlement should be the three trustees of the articles therein named, & that if they or either of them should fail to accept the trusteeship of the settlement, then such other person or persons as the spouses should nominate; & that in the meantime until the execution of the settlement the persons in whom such property should be vested should hold the same upon the trusts of the settlement. The marriage was solemnised on the day of the execution of the articles. On the death of his father on Feb. 22, 1918, the husband, under his will, became entitled in reversion, subject to the life interest of testator's widow, to a share in his residuary estate. On June 13, 1919, the trustees of the articles gave notice to the will trustees of the execution of the articles. On Oct. 21, 1920, the husband, in pursuance of his contract contained in the articles, executed a settlement by which he assigned to the trustees thereof, of whom there were three & of whom one was also a trustee under the articles, but the other two were not, his interest under his father's will upon trusts for the benefit of his wife & children. On Dec. 5, 1921, the settlor was adjudicated bkpt. The trustee in bkpy. moved for a declaration that the settlement & the transfer of the property purported to be made thereunder were void as against him:—Held: (1) the acquisition by bkpt. on his father's death of the property which was non-existent at the date of the articles did not operate under the well settled doctrine as a complete equitable assignment of that property, as the persons to whom the property was contracted to be assigned & the trusts upon which such persons were to hold it were not ascertained at the date of such acquisition; (2) even if there had been an equitable assignment within that doctrine, it would not have operated as a transfer of property within the true meaning of 1914 Act, s. 42 (3); (3) the assignment contained in the settlement of Oct. 1920, operated as a transfer of property within that sub-sect. & was void by reason of its execution within two years of the commencement of the bkpy.—*Re DENT, Ex p. On Mar. 6, 1922, pltf., instead of applying to restore the action, lodged his proof in the bkpy. of debtor for £650. sk. Time for.—It is doubtful if the discretionary power in the ct. under sect. 163 (4) of Bkpcy. Act applies to the filing or amending of claims with the trustee. But the ct. has in bkpcy. an equitable jurisdiction to deal with matters of this sort. But, in view of there having been so much delay & so much change of position in the course of administration of the brokers' estate between the date of bkpcy. & the date of filing the amended claim (nearly seven years); in view of circumstances which should have enabled resp. to obtain much earlier the information (as to the sales of his securities) which he had when he filed his amended claim; in view of the situation with regard to the new co. (which after its bkpcy. could not properly issue more debentures, and, moreover, was not, as such co., before the ct.) & with regard to other creditors in similar position to resp. & in view of all the facts & circumstances of the case, & bearing in mind that the allowance, under such or like facts & circumstances, of such amendments as that now sought might lead, in this case & in similar cases, to endless delays & confusion in the administration & distribution of stock brokerage bkpcies., it must be said that the Judge in Bkpcy. had exercised a sound discretion in declining to give effect to the amended claim, & an appellate ct. was not justified (in the circumstances of the case) in interfering with his exercise of that discretion.—Re STOBIE FORLONG & Co., Re COLWELL'S CLAIM, [1931] S. 3375a. Deposit of securities.—To secure joint debt of firm—Debts due under separate personal guarantees of partners.—The general rule in bkpcy., that, when a creditor seeks to prove against his debtor's estate, he must give up or value any security which if not retained by him would go to augment that estate, presupposes that the security is for the particular debt for which he seeks to prove, & does not apply to a case where the security is for a different debt.

Where, therefore, two of the partners of a firm deposited with the bankers of the firm securities which belonged to them individually to secure a joint debt of the firm, & also gave the bankers their separate personal guarantees up to a limited amount to pay the joint debt of the firm, & the firm subsequently, as debtors, executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of their creditors, which provided that in the administration of the joint & separate estates of the debtors the rules prevailing in bkpcy. should be followed:—Held: as the bankers did not hold a charge on the securities so deposited for the debts due under the separate guarantees given by the two partners, & therefore, were not "secured creditors" within the definition in 1914 Act, s. 167, in respect of those debts, they were entitled to prove for them under the trusts of the deed of assignment against the estates of the two partners without giving credit for the value of those securities.—*Re DUTTON, MASSEY & Co., Ex p. 3409a. — [Without valuation.]—The debtor was the managing director of a co. under an agreement which, for the purposes of this case, guaranteed his appointment until 1941, but required him to devote his whole time to the work of the co., & placed the usual restrictions upon him after he should leave the co. In 1933, judgment was obtained against him for £34,020 16s. 4d. To avoid proceedings upon this judgment, the debtor assigned certain policies to the creditor, & also assigned to him £1,000 per annum to be paid out of his salary for a period of 10 years. To give effect to the latter assignment, the debtor signed an irrevocable request & authority to the co. to pay the £1,000 for 10 years out of his salary. Upon the completion of these 10 annual payments, the judgment was to become satisfied. In 1938, after payments had been made for 5 years, the co. were obliged to reduce the debtor's salary to £1,000 per annum, & about the same time a receiving order was made against the debtor. The trustee in bkpcy. allowed the debtor to retain his salary of £1,000 per annum for the maintenance of himself & his family. The personal representative of the creditor proved in the bkpcy. for £24,852 16s. 6d., the whole amount of the debt, without giving any credit for, & without valuing, any security. The personal representative of the creditor brought this action to enforce the equitable assignment of £1,000 per annum out of the debtor's salary for the remaining 5 years of the period of 10 years for which it was assigned:—Held: (1) assuming that the assignment of after-acquired property was good against the trustee in bkpcy., any property falling in after bkpcy. was not affected by it, because the debt had been discharged by the bkpcy.; (2) the reduction in salary was a change in an essential condition, the continuation of which must have been contemplated as the basis of the obligation, & the obligation itself had become wholly impossible of performance; (3) in the circumstances, it would be against public policy to enforce the obligation; (4) by proving in the bkpcy. for the whole debt, without any valuation of the security, the personal representative of the creditor must be taken to have surrendered the security; (5) Semble: the earnings of a bkpt. over & above what is required for the maintenance of himself & his family can be charged before bkpcy., & such a charge will give a good title against the trustee in bkpcy.—*KING v. 3696a. Shares deposited as security for debit balance owing to bankrupt—Unauthorised sale by bankrupt.—Deft. opened a speculative account with a firm of stockbrokers & deposited with them as security for any debit balance which might from time to time be owing by him on that account the indicia of title to various bonds & shares, including certain rubber shares. In 1920 the firm sold the rubber shares without the knowledge or authority of deft., who was kept in ignorance of the sale till after the bkpcy. of the firm. On Feb. 16, 1922, a receiving order was made against the firm & they were adjudicated bkpt. In Feb. 1923, the trustee in bkpcy. of the firm rendered deft. a final account, which, after giving credit to deft. for the proceeds of the sale of the shares, showed a balance due from deft. In an action to recover that balance the trustee claimed that the rights of the parties ought to be adjusted under the mutual credits clause of 1914 Act, as at the date of the receiving order. The judge, in ordering an account to be taken, directed that the value of the shares, to be ascertained when the account was certified, that being the date when the shares ought to have been returned to deft., should be set off against the claim of the trustee :—Held : the brokers could not have maintained an action for their debt if they were not in a position to hand over the shares against payment, & the trustee in bkpcy. had no higher right; no question of set-off arose under the mutual credits clause of 1914 Act, the right of deft. being to a return of the shares in specie; & in the special circumstances of the case the order of the judge was correct.—*ELLIS & CO.'S TRUSTEE v. 3776a. ——]—By deed dated Mar. 16, 1906, L. bound himself by covenant to pay an annuity of £108 to C. from & after the death of her husband (which occurred on Nov. 13, 1923); & F., the father of the covenantor, guaranteed payment of the annuity. On Aug. 21, 1911, F. died; & under his will, L. became entitled on the death of testator's widow to a one-fifth share of the ultimate residue of his estate. On Oct. 17, 1929, L. was adjudicated bkpt. On Oct. 30 C. proved in the bkpcy., & early in 1930 her proof was admitted for the sum of £873 17s. 8d., & she received by way of dividend in respect thereof £134 15s. 7d. Ignoring that proof, the exors. proceeded to pay certain instalments of the annuity amounting to £344 9s. 10d., & on Sept. 8, 1932, they expended the sum of £849 on the purchase for her of an annuity of £108.

On Jan. 18, 1931, the widow of F. died, & thereupon the trustee in bkpcy. became entitled to payment of the share of the bkpt. in the residuary estate of F., subject to such right as the exors. had to have the estate of the surety indemnified out of the share therein of L., the principal debtor, against any claim upon that estate by C. In this action the trustee in bkpcy. claimed a declaration that the exors. were not entitled (as they claimed to be) to retain out of the said share of the bkpt., on account of any unsatisfied liability of the bkpt., as the principal debtor, to indemnify the estate of the surety, any sum in excess of the sum of £539 2s. 1d., being the amount of C.'s proof less the dividends of £134 15s. 7d.:—Held: on the principle recognised in In re Mellon, the exors. were, notwithstanding the bkpcy., entitled to apply the share in their hands of the principal debtor in discharging his obligation to indemnify the estate of their testator, the surety; & that, having regard to the fact that C. proved in the bkpcy., they were entitled to retain out of that share the sum for which C. proved less the amount received by her by way of dividend, but were not entitled to retain any sum in excess thereof.—*Re LENNARD, LENNARD'S TRUSTEE v. 3781a. ——Property conveyed to settlement trustees—Against unpaid sum covenanted to be brought into settlement.]—Upon the marriage of the bkpt. in 1802, the estate of the wife, consisting of freehold, copyhold & leasehold lands, were conveyed to the use of the bkpt. & his heirs, who covenanted with the trustees within six months after the marriage, to pay to them £4,000 upon the trusts of the settlement. The trustees never demanded payment. In 1806 the bkpt. sold part of the freehold premises, & he & his wife levied a fine of the whole, declaring the uses of that part which was sold to the purchaser, but without making any declaration as to the remainder. In 1812 the bkpt. conveyed all his estates to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. In 1813 the bkpt. covenanted that he & his wife would levy a fine to the uses declared in the deed of 1812, & a fine was levied accordingly. The wife never surrendered the copyhold premises pursuant to the settlement 1802. In 1814 the commission issued, & the husband was declared a bkpt., his execution of the trust deed 1812 being the act of bkpy. The trustees of the settlement proved the £4,000 under the commission & signed the bkpt.'s certificate:—Held: the trustees on behalf of the wife & children of the pkpt., had a lien upon the estates thereby conveyed & remaining unsold by the bkpt. to the amount of the £4,000.—Re DICKEN, Ex p. DICKEN (1817), Buck. 115, L. 3781b. — Dividend—Against sums paid by debtor on contract of guarantee.]—F., having guaranteed advances by certain banks to the T. Assocn., in which he was interested, subsequently executed two deeds of arrangement in favour of his creditors. The Assocn. having gone into liquidation, the liquidator lodged a proof against F.'s estate in respect of sums due by F. to the Assocn. The trustee of F.'s estate rejected the proof & claimed to set off the various sums which had been advanced by the banks to the Assocn. for which F. had given his personal guarantee. At that time, although one or more of the banks had proved against F.'s estate under the guarantees, nothing had been paid to any of them. The Assocn. was admitted to prove against F.'s estate for a very large sum, & the trustee declared an interim dividend of 1s. in the pound. The banks were paid the dividend in respect of their admitted proofs, which also amounted in the aggregate to a considerable sum. The sums constituting the amount of the banks' proofs represented the amount of the Assocn.'s debt which had been guaranteed by F. The question arose whether the trustee of F.'s estate was under the circumstances entitled to pay to the liquidator of the Assocn. the sum representing the interim dividend declared in respect of the admitted proof. The matter came before the Ct. by way of motion on behalf of the trustee, the question being whether this declared dividend was properly payable to the liquidator of the Assocn. or the trustee was entitled to withhold payment of all or any part thereof. On behalf of the Assocn. it was urged that the previous proceedings reported in Re Fenton, Ex p. Fenton Textile Assocn., Ltd., No. 3856a, ante, had concluded the matter, that the question was now res judicata, & that, notwithstanding the payment to the banks of the amount of the dividend since that decision, the liquidator of the Assocn. was entitled to the full dividend in respect of the Assocn.'s admitted proof:—Held: (1) the question raised by the motion had not been determined by the Ct. of Appeal in the previous proceedings; & (2) the claim by the trustee to withhold the payment of any part of the dividends payable in respect of the Assocn.'s proof failed. The rule against double proof afforded an answer to the trustee's claim to retain the dividends on the admitted proof of the Assocn. so long as any part of the debt due to the banks remained unsatisfied.—Re FENTON (No. 2), Ex p. FENTON TEXTILE ASSOCN., LTD., [1932] 1 Ch. 178; 146 L.
